Table of Contents

Foreword ............................................................................................................................................ xiii

Preface ............................................................................................................................................... xviii

Acknowledgment ............................................................................................................................ xxiv

Chapter 1
Locating and Loving the Personal: Risk and Vulnerability in a Secondary English Language Arts
Methods Course ........................................................................................................................... 1
Suzanne Knight, University of Michigan—Flint, USA

Chapter 2
Disrupting Relationships: A Catalyst for Growth ............................................................................... 16
Vicki Stieha, University of Cincinnati, USA
Miriam Raider-Roth, University of Cincinnati, USA

Chapter 3
“Critical Friendship” and Sustainable Change: Creating Liminal Spaces to Experience Discomfort
Together ........................................................................................................................................... 32
Susan R. Adams, Butler University, USA
Ross Peterson-Veatch, Goshen College, USA

Chapter 4
Smart People Learning: Self-Knowledge that Disrupts Practice in Meaningful Ways ...................... 46
Edith A. Rusch, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, USA

Chapter 5
Shushes in the Parlor: Reclaiming the “Conversation” Metaphor ....................................................... 60
Erik Ellis, Stanford University, USA

Chapter 6
Tracing the Trope of Teaching as Transformation ............................................................................ 77
Julie Myatt Barger, Middle Tennessee State University, USA
Chapter 7
Web 2.0 and Conscientização: Digital Students and Critical Reflection on and in Multimedia ............... 94
Heidi Skurat Harris, Eastern Oregon University, USA

Chapter 8
“I’m not Always Laughing at the Jokes”: Humor as a Force for Disruption ........................................ 108
Julie Faulkner, RMIT University, Australia
Bronwyn T. Williams, University of Louisville, USA

Chapter 9
Disrupting Disruption: Invitational Pedagogy as a Response to Student Resistance .................. 122
A. Abby Knoblauch, Kansas State University, USA

Chapter 10
Negotiating Disruption in Visual Arts Education ................................................................. 135
Jennifer Elsden-Clifton, RMIT University, Australia

Chapter 11
Setting the Stage for Professionalism: Disrupting the Student Identity .................................. 147
Lynn Hanson, Francis Marion University, USA
Meredith A. Love, Francis Marion University, USA

Chapter 12
Pre-Service Learning and the (Gentle) Disruption of Emerging Teaching Identity .................. 161
Mia O’Brien, The University of Queensland, Australia
Shelley Dole, The University of Queensland, Australia

Chapter 13
The Emotional Labor of Imagining Otherwise: Undoing the Mastery Model of Mathematics Teacher Identity .......................................................... 174
Elizabeth de Freitas, Adelphi University, USA

Chapter 14
“Are you Married?”: Exploring the Boundaries of Sexual Taboos in the ESL Classroom .............. 186
Greg Curran, Victoria University, Australia

Chapter 15
Disruptive Relation(ship)s: Romantic Love as Critical Praxis .................................................. 198
Rick Carpenter, Valdosta State University, USA

Chapter 16
Performing Dissident Thinking through Writing: Using the Proprioceptive Question to Break out of the Classroom ................................................................. 212
Kaitlin A. Briggs, University of Southern Maine, USA