Table of Contents

Preface ................................................................................................................................................. xii

Acknowledgment ................................................................................................................................ xvii

Chapter I
A Dynamic Structural Model of Education and Skills Requirements for Careers in Information Systems: Perspectives Across Gender and Time / Glenn R. Lowry, Rodney L. Turner, and Julie Fisher ................................................................. 1

Chapter II
Leveraging Diversity in Information Systems and Technology Education in the Global Workplace / Eileen M. Trauth, Haiyan Huang, Jeria L. Quesenberry, and Allison J. Morgan ................................................................. 27

Chapter III
Critique: Information Systems Academics’ Core Competency? / Mike Metcalfe ......................... 42

Chapter IV

Chapter V
Globalising Software Development in the Local Classroom / Ita Richardson, Sarah Moore, Alan Malone, Valentine Casey, and Dolores Zage ................................................................. 82

Chapter VI
Creating an Entrepreneurial Mindset: Getting the Process Right for Information and Communication Technology Students / Briga Hynes and Ita Richardson .......... 105

Chapter VII
Curriculum Change and Alignment with Industry: The Student Perspective / Krassie Petrova and Gwyn Claxton ................................................................. 128
Chapter VIII
Aligning Learning with Industry Requirements / Jocelyn Armarego .......................................................... 159

Chapter IX
Relevance of Computing Programmes to Industry Needs in Jordan’s Higher Education Institutes / Ala M. Abu-Samaha ................................................................. 195

Chapter X
Professionalism and Ethics: Is Education the Bridge? / Zeenath Reza Khan, Ghassan al-Qaimari, and Stephen D. Samuel ................................................................. 214

Chapter XI
Experiential Group Learning for Developing Competencies in Usability Practice / Phil Carter ................................................................. 242

Chapter XII
Industry-Academic Partnerships in Information Systems Education / Mark Conway .......................... 264

Chapter XIII
Industry-University Collaborations in Research for Information Systems: An Exploratory Study of a Management Model / Tom O’Kane ................................................................. 279

Chapter XIV
Ethics for the Graduating Class: Issues, Needs, and Approaches / Theresa M. Vitolo and Barry J. Brinkman ................................................................. 299

Chapter XV

Chapter XVI
COCA: Concept-Oriented Course Architecture Towards a Methodology for Designing and Teaching Information System Courses / Youcef Baghdadi ................................................................. 327

Chapter XVII
Enhancing the Employability of ICT Students with Hybrid Skills: Insights from a UK Survey with Small Business Managers / Yanquing Duan, Daoliang Li, and Yongmei Bentley ................................................................. 349