Acknowledgment

Innumerable appreciations go to all the authors who deserve our heartiest thanks for their contribution, patience, and cooperation throughout the process of compiling this book. The commitments and generosity of these experts, drawn from both the academic and business communities, lessened the challenge of producing this volume. We would like to thank and acknowledge the reviewers, colleagues, and students for their time, effort and valuable comments. To Hannah Abelbeck of IGI Global, thank you for your guidance and direction throughout the course of this project.

Many contributors in this book have used data drawn from many sources: World Bank, International Monetary Fund, International Telecommunication Union, World Economic Forum, United Nations, African Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, Grameen Bank, European Union, Ford Foundation, among others. They have also interviewed experts and used primary data from universities and professional websites. To all these organizations and individuals, we want to express our appreciations for allowing them to use these data.

Our families and friends have provided both of us an anchor and sails throughout our lives. They have given us encouragement and support through the good and challenging times. Thanks to our parents who inspired us to reach for goals we did not know we had.

As we all know, learning should never conclude and it continues for us. We continue to learn, to seek new oceans of knowledge. We hope this text provides an impetus for our continued learning and growth.

Finally, we dedicate this book to our families Christiana (Ifeoma), Tochi, Sharzina (Tonu), Asif, and Anija; we thank you all for your support and love throughout this project and beyond.

Ndubuisi Ekekwe
African Institution of Technology, USA & Babcock University, Nigeria

Nazrul Islam
Aberystwyth University, Wales & Middlesex University, London, UK