Acknowledgment

The editors would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the development and review of this handbook, without whose support the project could not have been completed.

We would like to thank all the staff at IGI Global for their attention, services, and for their invaluable contributions throughout the entire process that led to this publication. A special note of thanks goes to Christine Bufton and Hannah Abelbeck, who monitored the progress on every stage of the project, providing support and motivation.

In particular, we are indebted to Vint G. Cerf (Vice President and Chief Internet Evangelist, Google), who is widely known as one of the “Fathers of the Internet,” for his contribution in the writing of the Foreword.

We would like to thank all the reviewers for their critical and comprehensive comments and suggestions to improve the quality of this handbook, and we are pleased to acknowledge the assistance and advice from the editorial board members for their important and constructive recommendations.

Special thanks are due to all the authors for their insights, diligent work and excellent contributions to this international project. We also want to thank the authors who have served as reviewers for all the efforts they made to support this project.

The editors are also grateful for their affiliation institution, the University of Waterloo, located at the heart of Canada’s Technology Triangle, which is one of Canada’s leading comprehensive universities, and for the support of the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada (NSERC).

Last, but not least, we would like to thank our families. Paulo S. C. Alencar would like to thank his wife, Isabel, and his children Hadassah and Rebeccah for their love, patience, and support throughout the realization of this project, and Donald D. Cowan would like to thank his wife, Marg, and his family for their support.

Paulo S. C. Alencar
University of Waterloo, Canada

Donald D. Cowan
University of Waterloo, Canada

January 2011