Table of Contents

Foreword ............................................................................................................................................ xiii

Preface .................................................................................................................................................. xv

Acknowledgment ............................................................................................................................... xxx

Section 1
Setting the Scene

Chapter 1
Human Rights and Technology: Lessons from Alice in Wonderland ................................................ 1
Judith Dueck, The University of Winnipeg Global College, Canada
Michael Rempel, Software Architect, Canada

Chapter 2
ICT Policies Favouring Human Rights ............................................................................................... 21
Rolf H. Weber, University of Zurich, Switzerland

Chapter 3
Negotiating Boundaries between Control and Dissent: Free Speech, Business, and Repressitarian Governments ........................................................................................................................................ 36
Brian J. Bowe, Grand Valley State University, USA
Robin Blom, Michigan State University, USA
Eric Freedman, Michigan State University, USA

Section 2
Case Studies from Around the World

Chapter 4
“In YouTube We Trust”: Video Exchange and Arab Human Rights ................................................ 57
Aziz Douai, University of Ontario Institute of Technology, Canada
Chapter 5
Truth-Seeking at a Distance: Engaging Diaspora Populations in Transitional Justice Processes ........... 72
Eric Wiebelhaus-Brahm, Florida State University, USA

Chapter 6
ICT and Human Rights in Brazil: From Military to Digital Dictatorship ........................................ 86
José Rodrigues Filho, Universidade Federal da Paraíba, Brazil

Chapter 7
Contingency and Hybridity in the Study of Digital Advocacy Networks: Implications of the Egyptian Protest Movement .................................................................................................................. 100
Christopher Wilson, University of Oslo, Norway
Alexandra Dunn, University of Oslo, Norway

Section 3
Practitioner Perspectives

Chapter 8
Crowdsourcing for Human Rights Monitoring: Challenges and Opportunities for Information Collection and Verification........................................................................................................... 123
Jessica Heinzelman, The Fletcher School of Law & Diplomacy, USA
Patrick Meier, Stanford University and Ushahidi, USA

Chapter 9
Counting the Unknown Victims of Political Violence: The Work of the Human Rights Data Analysis Group ........................................................................................................................................ 139
Ann Harrison, Benetech Human Rights Data Analysis Group, USA

Chapter 10
Human Rights Defenders and the Right to Digital Privacy and Security............................................. 157
Tanya Notley, Tactical Technology Collective, Germany
Stephanie Hankey, Tactical Technology Collective, Germany

Section 4
Economic and Social Rights

Chapter 11
Social Assistance via the Internet: The Case of Finland in the European Context............................. 177
Minna Strömberg-Jakka, University of Turku, Finland
Chapter 12
Mental Health, Post-Secondary Education, and Information Communications Technology .......... 196
   Jenny Martin, RMIT University, Australia
   Elspeth McKay, RMIT University, Australia

Chapter 13
ICTs and Gender-Based Rights........................................................................................................... 214
   Ana-Cristina Ionescu, Chamber of Commerce and Industry of Romania - CCIR, Romania

Chapter 14
Health Information Technology and Human Rights ........................................................................... 235
   Shane O’Hanlon, University of Limerick, Ireland

Conclusion ........................................................................................................................................ 247

Compilation of References ............................................................................................................. 255

About the Contributors .................................................................................................................... 284

Index.................................................................................................................................................. 290