Editing a book of this nature proved to be a daunting task for a number of reasons: First, forming the editorial team. Here, Maria Jakovljević proved to be the pillar that supported the book structure. Her vast knowledge and experience made the task easier. Second, the quality of submissions was of such a high standard that many times it proved very difficult to choose those studies to be included in the book. A big thank you to those whose papers are included, as well as to those whose work was not included in the book.

The primary aim of this book is to contribute to the further advancement of a maturing knowledge management discipline, disseminate original research and new developments within the discipline, and provide for interesting reading. These chapters represent truly global research, from 17 countries, from Australia to South Africa, England to Finland, and China to USA. The high standard of the book is derived from the independent treble blind peer review process. We would like to thank the 29 reviewers from 16 countries, again spanning the globe, who have critically evaluated the chapters. Special thanks go to José Maria Viedma Marti from Spain for writing the foreword.

Finally, we hope that the chapters will stimulate further progress in the knowledge management discipline and can give rise to a more global collaborative approach to knowledge management, underpinned by innovation. In a fast changing world, it is only though innovation that we keep ahead of time.
