Preface ........................................................................................................................................ vi

Section I: Perspectives on IT-Enabled Strategic Management

Chapter I
The Interplay of Strategic Management and Information Technology ....................... 1
Zaiyong Tang, Louisiana Tech University, USA
Bruce Walters, Louisiana Tech University, USA

Chapter II
Toward a Strategic Perspective of Information Technology ....................................... 16
Paul L. Drnevich, Purdue University, USA
Jungpil Hahn, Purdue University, USA
Mark Shanley, University of Illinois at Chicago, USA

Chapter III
IT Portfolio Management: Implementing and Maintaining IT Strategic Alignment .................................................................................................................. 38
Brian H. Cameron, The Pennsylvania State University, USA

Chapter IV
Relationship Between New Information Technologies and Flexible Organizational Forms ............................................................................................... 68
Miguel Pérez-Valls, University of Almería, Spain
José Manuel Ortega-Egea, University of Almería, Spain
José Antonio Plaza Úbeda, University of Almería, Spain
Section II: Processes and Capabilities

Chapter V
IT-Enabled Strategy: Implications for Firm Performance? ......................................................... 93
    Paul L. Drnevich, Purdue University, USA

Chapter VI
Becoming a Learning Organization in the Software Industry: Is CMM the Silver Bullet? ................................................................. 104
    Dev K. Dutta, Richard Ivey School of Business, The University of Western Ontario, Canada

Chapter VII
ERP as an Integration Strategy: Issues, Challenges, Benefits, and Risks .................... 121
    Les Singletary, Louisiana Tech University, USA
    Minh Q. Huynh, Southeastern Louisiana University, USA

Chapter VIII
Marketing Strategy: The Role of Information Technology-Enabled Capabilities .... 142
    Sreedhar Madhavaram, Cleveland State University, USA
    Radha Appan, Cleveland State University, USA

Section III: Technology and Tools

Chapter IX
Linking Businesses for Competitive Advantage: A Mobile Agent-Based Approach ................................................................. 160
    Tong-Seng Quah, Nanyang Technological University, Republic of Singapore
    Chye-Huang Leow, Singapore Polytechnic, Republic of Singapore

Chapter X
Applying Directory Services to Enhance Identification, Authentication, and Authorization for B2B Applications ......................................................... 191
    Yuan-Yuan Jiao, Nankai University, China
    Jun Du, Tianjin University, China
    Jianxin (Roger) Jiao, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Chapter XI
Autonomous Environmental Scanning on the World Wide Web ................................. 213
    Sören W. Scholz, Bielefeld University, Germany
    Ralf Wagner, Bielefeld University, Germany
Section IV: Inter-Organizational and Global Implications

Chapter XII
IT Outsourcing: Impacts and Challenges ................................................................. 244
Luke Ho, Faculty of Computing, Staffordshire University, UK
Anthony S. Atkins, Engineering & Technology, Staffordshire University, UK

Chapter XIII
IT-Enabled Integration of Business Relationships in the Steel Industry Context ... 275
Jari Salo, University of Oulu, Finland

Chapter XIV
Information and Communication Technology-Enabled Economic Growth and Convergence: Examples from the EU’s Central and Southeastern European Members .................................................................................................................... 295
Elias G. Carayannis, The George Washington University, USA
Christopher Ziemnowicz, Concord University, USA

About the Authors ..................................................................................................... 320

Index ........................................................................................................................ 326