Table of Contents

Preface .................................................................................................................................................. xvi

Acknowledgment ..................................................................................................................................... xxx

Section 1

Expertise and the Changing Nature of Knowledge Creation and Dissemination in the Web 2.0 Environment

Chapter 1
Collective Narrative Expertise and the Narbs of Social Media ............................................................ 1

Ananda Mitra, Wake Forest University, USA

Chapter 2
Wikipedia’s Success and the Rise of the Amateur-Expert ................................................................. 13

Christopher Sweet, Illinois Wesleyan University, USA

Chapter 3
Understanding and Evaluating Source Expertise in an Evolving Media Environment .................... 37

Rebekah A. Pure, University of California, USA

Alexander R. Markov, University of California, USA

J. Michael Mangus, University of California, USA

Miriam J. Metzger, University of California, USA

Andrew J. Flanagin, University of California, USA

Ethan H. Hartsell, University of California, USA

Chapter 4
Connection, Fragmentation, and Intentionality: Social Software and the Changing Nature of Expertise ................................................................. 52

Christopher Watts, St. Lawrence University, USA
Section 2
Changing Expert Environments in the University and in the Areas of Research and Scholarship

Chapter 5
Should we Take Disintermediation in Higher Education Seriously? Expertise, Knowledge Brokering, and Knowledge Translation in the Age of Disintermediation ............................................. 72
Carlos A. Scolari, Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Spain
Cristóbal Cobo Romani, Oxford Internet Institute, UK
Hugo Pardo Kuklinski, Universitat de Barcelona, Spain

Chapter 6
The University in Transition: Reconsidering Faculty Roles and Expertise in a Web 2.0 World........ 93
Laurie Craig Phipps, Simon Fraser University, Canada
& Kwantlen Polytechnic University, Canada
Alyssa Friend Wise, Simon Fraser University, Canada
Cheryl Amundsen, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter 7
Between Tradition and Web 2.0: eLaborate as a Social Experiment in Humanities Scholarship....... 112
Anne Beaulieu, University of Groningen, The Netherlands
Karina van Dalen-Oskam, Huygens Institute for the History of the Netherlands, The Netherlands
Joris van Zundert, Huygens Institute for the History of the Netherlands, The Netherlands

Chapter 8
Google Scholar as the Co-Producer of Scholarly Knowledge ........................................................... 130
José van Dijck, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Chapter 9
Reviewing in the Age of Web 2.0: What Does Web Culture Have to Offer to Scholarly Communication?................................................................................................................................ 147
Lilian Landes, Bavarian State Library, Germany

Chapter 10
The Effect of Social Software on Academic Libraries ................................................................. 163
Maria Cassella, University of Torino, Italy
Licia Calvi, NHTV University of Breda, The Netherlands
Section 3
Reimagining Pedagogical Expertise

Chapter 11
Teaching Political Science Students to Find and Evaluate Information in the Social Media Flow .............................. 180
Megan Fitzgibbons, McGill University, Canada

Chapter 12
The Net Generation and Changes in Knowledge Acquisition .......................................................... 201
Werner Beuschel, IBAW – Institute of Business Application Systems, Brandenburg University of Applied Sciences, Germany

Chapter 13
Faculty and Undergraduate Perceptions of Expertise within Social Media ........................................ 227
Mary J. Snyder Broussard, Lycoming College, USA
Rebecca A. Wilson, Susquehanna University, USA
Janet McNeil Hurlbert, Lycoming College, USA
Alison S. Gregory, Lycoming College, USA

Chapter 14
Textperts: Utilizing Students’ Skills in the Teaching of Writing ................................................ 247
Abigail A. Grant, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, USA

Chapter 15
Working toward Expert Status: Love to Hear Students Go Tweet, Tweet, Tweet .............................. 259
Tamara Girardi, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, USA

Section 4
Case Studies of Collective or Decentralized Expertise

Chapter 16
Professional ICT Knowledge, Epistemic Standards, and Social Epistemology ................................. 274
Frederik Truyen, University of Leuven, Belgium
Filip Buekens, Tilburg University, The Netherlands

Chapter 17
Steven Ovadia, LaGuardia Community College, USA

Chapter 18
Interaction and Expertise in an Appalachian Music Archive ......................................................... 311
Emily Clark, The University of Texas at Austin School of Information, USA
Chapter 19
Rethinking Expertise in the Web 2.0 Era: Lessons Learned from Project Durian .............................................. 330
Ilias Karasavvidis, University of Thessaly, Greece

Compilation of References ........................................................................................................................................ 354

About the Contributors ........................................................................................................................................... 386

Index .................................................................................................................................................................... 393