Acknowledgment

The authors would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the research, review, and publication process of this book. Special thanks go to the publishing team at IGI Global, especially Joel Gamon who graciously answered our many questions and Mirela Roncevic for offering us the opportunity to write this much needed title on public law librarianship.

Others whose input, assistance and advice contributed significantly to this title include:

- The reviewers whose insights, corrections, and suggestions greatly improved the quality of this book.
- Marcus Hochstetler and Charles R. Dyer for their patience with our questions concerning public law library statistics and their willingness to be quoted on the record.
- Joe D. Brown for permission to use portions of the Judge R. C. Vaughan County Law Library Policy Manual.
- All public law librarians who have shared their knowledge, training, insights, and public law library experiences with us during the writing of this book. You know who you are. Thank you for all the help.
- Colleagues at the Jean and Alexander Heard Library, Vanderbilt University for sharing their expertise in automation and technical services. The staff at the Pope County Library System, Russellville, AR for surviving a battery of challenging interlibrary loan requests. The Discovery Park Library, University of North Texas and The Ross Pendergraft Library & Technology Center, Arkansas Tech University for database access.
- Cornelius R. Ricks, President and Founder of the Friends of the Public Charitable Community Memorial Law Library of Harlem, Inc. and the organization’s legal counsel, Paul E. Kerson, for their time and candid discussions of their plans and hopes for the still forming Public Charitable Community Memorial Law Library of Harlem. During several lengthy long distance telephone calls, Mr. Ricks and Mr. Kerson answered countless questions about the library’s and the Friends of the Library’s formation, development, progress, and fund raising efforts. We wish them all the best as they continue their efforts to bring a new public law library to life.
- Laura Orr for generously permitting us to include her 50 state survey of public law library statutes and Kathleen O’Connor for allowing us to include her example of a comparative job description in the Appendix. Members of the following email mailing lists and social networking sites for their willingness to respond to our surveys and share their own survey results with us: Law-Lib, SLA-DSOL, SWALL-L, AALL-SCCLL-SIS, and Facebook®’s Friends of Small Law Libraries.
- Delia S. Tohosky for proof-reading.
Finally, it is impossible to name everyone deserving of our thanks so to those remaining unnamed, be assured that your assistance is greatly appreciated. This book would not exist if we had not had your help, encouragement, patience, and assistance. Thank you, all.

In closing, the authors would like to thank their families for their encouragement and support during the months it took to finish this book.

We dedicate this book to the Friends of the Public Charitable Community Memorial Law Library of Harlem, Inc. and other public law library Friends organizations, library boards, governing authorities, and library administrators.
