Acknowledgment

Thanks to encouragement by IGI, this book was developed to address the rapidly expanding IT-enabled service industries that have emerged from around the globe. IGI’s editorial support to the project is gratefully acknowledged.

Ideas researched and developed for this book have been “field-tested” with graduate classes for professionals from the industry. Professor Chew thanks these professionals for their indirect contributions through numerous work-related insightful questions and critical discussions in class.

Professor Chew is grateful to many practicing CIOs and CEOs for their helpful discussions, some of whom have also guest-lectured to his class. He thanks Ronald Cheung and John Edwards who have not only guest-lectured in the graduate classes but also authored the forewords of this book. Thanks also go to Joe Locandro, formerly Group Director of Information Technology, CLP Group, (now Group CIO, Cathay Pacific Inc.), and CLP Group for permission to use CLP IT Strategy as a case example for the book.

Professor Chew is greatly appreciative of Professor Massimo Ancona’s encouragement and facilitation of various local industry meetings during his visit to DISI, University of Genoa, Italy, in 2010, where some of the preliminary research was conducted. He expresses his deep gratitude to his wife, Jan, for her patience and constant support and children, Eugene and Elaine, for their encouragement and understanding.
