Acknowledgment

While this collection began about 18 months before publication, our interest in digital ethos and online credibility began in 2004 with a conversation about how ill-equipped the “accepted rules” for evaluating book-based criteria were to handle online sources. We would like to thank Cindy Selfe for encouraging us to explore this topic and Dennis Lynch for conducting an independent study on ethos with us; their patience and expertise have been instrumental to our development in this topic. In addition, we would like to thank all of the people who gave so generously of their time during this process, especially the members of the editorial review board, reviewers, authors, and the people at the Noel Studio for Academic Creativity who provided feedback on this collection. We would also like to thank our families for their support during this period.