Acknowledgment

Special thanks go to all of the authors who shared their ongoing research and development efforts at individual institutions and organizations around the world. The collaboration with the authors was an inspiration that has sparked much creative thought for me and I can’t wait to begin implementing some of the new, engaging ideas in my professional work.

Many of the authors included in this text also served as reviewers for chapters written by other authors. I was also able to include reviewers from around the world that were not chapter authors. Thanks to all who provided constructive and comprehensive reviews that substantially improved the quality of the text. Reviewers who provided the most comprehensive and constructive comments included Dr. Janette Hill from the University of Georgia and Dr. Karen Rasmussen from the University of West Florida.

Special thanks also to those who helped in the eleventh hour to resize images including Lam Chu and Karen Barth who electronically distributed chapters for final reviews and editing. I would be remiss not to mention the Academic Technology Center at the University of West Florida who provides me with innovation and creative thought to pursue emerging technologies for teaching and learning with vigor. Much of the inspiration for this text comes directly from projects we have worked on, conversations we have had, and things we have been thinking about for many years.
Thanks also to the publishing team at IGI Global. In particular, Kristin Roth, who continuously nudged via e-mail to keep the project on schedule and to make shifts in deadlines as hurricanes passed through our region.

Also, I would like to thank my family for their patience as mommy spent way too much time on the computer and way too little time playing. My kids, Haley (10) and Jack (8) kept asking if I had made my word count yet for the book, hoping that when I did, I would be finished. And, for my husband, Ron, I appreciate his unfailing support during the months I spent working on this book.

Finally, thanks to all of the authors for their excellent contributions to the book.

Pamela T. Northrup, PhD
University of West Florida
Pensacola, FL
October 2006