Acknowledgment

This kind of big project cannot be completed successfully without the Divine grace. I experienced His unseen hand while doing this project. Things were falling in line as per plan and things moved in the right direction. When initially in 2010 the proposal for a book on professionalizing university education was initiated and when I started approaching people for chapters, there was good response. Prof. K.S. Rangappa, Vice Chancellor of Karnataka State Open University (KSOU) responded with willingness to publish the book. However, since I wanted a professional publisher of international standard to publish this important work, I requested him to be co-editor of the book. He kindly accepted to render his name as co-editor. Similarly Prof. Tukaram Fulzele showed much enthusiasm when I discussed the proposal with him. This tempted me to invite him to be one of the co-editors with a view that his management background would help in the project. I thank both the co-editors for giving me free hand and allowing me to prepare the book as per my idea.

I am immensely indebted to the members of Editorial Advisory Board (EAB) of the book who kindly accepted my invitation without any hesitation. I am very much grateful to all the authors of the chapters who took my view points in preparing their chapters. If the chapters have come out well it is also due to the fact that the reviewers I approached took the task seriously and gave their objective and candid opinions and suggestions on the chapters. I am thankful to the reviewers as well as authors for taking so much interest in the project. I am also thankful to those authors whose chapters were rejected for their interest in the project. The rejection does not reflect anything on their abilities or on their scholarship as some of the rejections included those given by some of the vice chancellors. It simply meant that they do not fit into the overall objective of the book. I will be failing in duty if I do not acknowledge the sacrifices made by my children Ananya Sai, B. and Baladitya, B. in allowing me to work on the project.

As I sit for long hours before the lap top during my vacation period for working on the project, they used to wonder what I am doing for such long time without spending time with them. Sometimes they used to joke that may be I am playing some computer games. I am thankful to Indira Gandhi National Open University (IGNOU) authorities who posted me around 2000 kilometers away from where my family stays allowing me to spend long hours on the project and forcing my wife Dr. R.Sarada to take all the pressures of family commitments besides her scientific work. Last but not least I have to acknowledge the cooperation extended by the editorial assistants of IGI Global, particularly Sri Austin M. DeMarco. He always assured me that he is there to help me. I thank IGI Global for taking interest in this project and publishing the book.

B. PanduRanga Narasimharao

Indira Gandhi National Open University, India

October, 2012