Acknowledgment

The editors are very proud of the work performed with exceptional diligence of the authors and want to thank all for the high level of professionalism provided in their contributions. Each author has contributed with his experiences and skills to suggest methods, solutions, and recommendations that the editors find of enormous relevance and absolutely helpful to any reader willing to have a clear picture of how, where and when a telemedicine solution may be implemented. A special thanks to the Advisory Board for its high level support and to the reviewers that have made this work possible. Thanks to the great team work of all the participants, the editors envisage this book to become a guideline for telemedicine hospital networks and provide a positive influence to improve telemedicine services deployment.