The process of editing a book is a hard and time-consuming task, but also a compensating and enriching experience! We definitely could benefit from the contacts made with authors and reviewers, the discussions and exchange of ideas, and the challenge of selecting and organising the contents, among other interesting activities. The main challenge was creating a book that meets the public expectations, ranging from non-technical hospital managers, CMIOs, physicians and nurses, to CIOs, software developers, and computer science-related academia researchers. This task could not have been accomplished without a great help and support from many sources.

First of all, we would like to thank the on-going support from the team of professionals at IGI Global. A very special “Thank you!” goes to Christine Smith, Assistant Development Editor, for her patience, highly professional support, and friendly words of advice, encouragement, and prompt guidance.

We are grateful to all authors for their insights and excellent contributions to this book, and also for their quick responses in solving all details involved in this editing process. A word of gratitude and encouragement goes to all who contributed to this project, some of them with high quality chapter proposals that unfortunately, due to several constraints, could not see their work published. Thank you for making this a hard choice for us!

We also thank all reviewers and external referees for their valuable remarks, prompt collaboration, and constructive comments.

Thank you all for making this book happen!
