Table of Contents

Preface .................................................................................................................................................. xix

Section 1
The Politics of Change: Traditional Media, New Journalism and the Struggle for Reform

Chapter 1
New Media and the Question of African Democracy................................................................. 1
Aziz Douai, University of Ontario Institute of Technology, Canada
Anthony Olorunnisola, The Pennsylvania State University, USA

Chapter 2
Moroccan Media in Democratic Transition .......................................................................... 15
Bouziane Zaid, Al Akhawayn University, Morocco

Chapter 3
Selective Liberalization: An Analysis of Media Reform in an Emerging Democracy .......... 32
Terje S. Skjerdal, NLA University College, Norway

Chapter 4
Articulations and Rearticulations: Antagonisms of Media Reform in Africa ..................... 51
Heather Gilberds, Carleton University, Canada

Chapter 5
Fanning the Flames of Fear: A Critical Analysis of Local Language Radio as a Catalyst to the Post Election Violence in Kenya ................................................................. 67
Timothy W. Kituri, Royal Roads University, Canada

Chapter 6
Looking Beyond Elections: An Examination of Media Freedom in the Re-Democratisation of Nigeria ......................................................................................................................................... 84
Ufuoma Akpojivi, North West University, South Africa
Chapter 7
Press Freedom, Media Regulation, and Journalists’ Perceptions of their Roles in Society:
A Case of Zambia and Ghana ................................................................. 101
Twange Kasoma, Radford University, USA

Chapter 8
When the History Turns Stronger than the Rhetoric: The Journalistic Culture Drives over
Democracy Ideals in Namibia and Tanzania ............................................. 118
Ullamaija Kivikuru, University of Helsinki, Finland

Chapter 9
Cultural Pluralism and Democratic Ideation - An African Story: The Case Study of SABC’s
Three Ethnic Minority Radio Stations .................................................... 147
Brilliant Mhlanga, University of Hertfordshire, UK

Chapter 10
The Changing State of the South African Nation: Political Proximity to Business from a
Rhetorical Perspective ........................................................................... 168
Irina Turner, Bayreuth University, Germany

Section 2
Technologies of Change: Understanding Africa’s New Media Landscape

Chapter 11
Revolution 2.0: New Media and the Transformation of the Egyptian Political and Communication Landscapes ..................................................................... 188
Sahar Khamis, University of Maryland, USA

Chapter 12
Twitter Frames: Finding Social Media’s “Influentials” During the “Arab Spring” .................. 202
Aziz Douai, University of Ontario Institute of Technology, Canada
Mohamed Ben Moussa, McGill University, Canada

Chapter 13
A Grassroots Approach to the Democratic Role of the Internet in Developing Countries: The Case of Morocco ......................................................................................... 218
Mohamed Ben Moussa, McGill University, Canada

Chapter 14
Twitter and Africa’s ‘War on Terror’: News Framing and Convergence in Kenya’s Operation
Linda Nchi .................................................................................................. 241
Duncan Omanga, Bayreuth University, Germany
Pamela Chepngetich-Omanga, Bayreuth University, Germany
Chapter 15
Use of New ICTs as “Liberation” or “Repression” Technologies in Social Movements: The Need to Formulate Appropriate Media Policies
Brandie L. Martin, The Pennsylvania State University, USA
Anthony A. Olorunnisola, The Pennsylvania State University, USA

Chapter 16
Social Media and Youth Interest in Politics in Kenya
Auma Churchill Moses Otieno, Nation Media Group, Kenya
Lusike Lynete Mukhongo, Moi University, Kenya

Chapter 17
Twitter as Virtual Battleground: The Case of HSM Press in Somalia
R. Bennett Furlow, Arizona State University

Chapter 18
Political Use of Internet During the Benin 2011 Presidential Campaign: Fad Effect or Mid-Term Strategy?
Bellarminus Gildas Kakpovi, University Libre Bruxelles, Belgium

Chapter 19
The Impact of Social Media on the Social, Political and Economic Environments in Africa
Oluwabukola Adelaja, University of New South Wales, Australia

Chapter 20
Public Opinion on Nigeria’s Democracy: Why the Arab Spring Stopped in the Desert
Anthony Olorunnisola, The Pennsylvania State University, USA
Ayobami Ojebode, University of Ibadan, Nigeria

Chapter 21
New Media and the Changing Public Sphere in Uganda: Towards Deliberative Democracy?
Kennedy Javuru, Journalist & Independent Scholar, UK

Chapter 22
Rethinking the Democratization Role of Online Media: The Zimbabwean Experience
Tendai Chari, University of Venda, South Africa

Chapter 23
Social Media, New ICTs and the Challenges Facing the Zimbabwe Democratic Process
Nhamo Anthony Mhiripiri, Midlands State University, Zimbabwe
Bruce Mutsvairo, University of Twente, The Netherlands