Acknowledgment

The editor acknowledges the support and efforts of a number of colleagues. First and foremost, I would like to thank the contributors to this book: the 25 authors and co-authors, from academia as well as industry from around the world that collectively developed and submitted a total of 17 chapters. Without their efforts in developing quality chapters conforming to the required guidelines and meeting often the strict deadlines, this text would not have been possible. Their names and expertise are listed in a separate section in this book.

Secondly, my grateful thanks are due to the members of the advisory and editorial board of this book who willingly volunteered their time in reviewing the book chapters and providing further advisory and editorial support. Their names and affiliations also appear in a separate section in this book.

Finally, I would like to thank members of my immediate family – Rehana, Zoya, Imran, Hanya and Ozair – for their encouragement and moral support – and for happily allowing me time to devote to the development of this 2nd in a series of reference books on electronic government. Initially, they thought I was developing yet another book on Cloud Computing but now they know better.

Thank you all.
