This journey for me has been enlightening, fulfilling, and enriching. The experience has been happy and memorable. The ability to focus has been truly great. Indeed, I managed to piece all my research ideas and knowledge about IT and business strategy for the construction industry and present them coherently through a series of chapters in the book. Before this, they remained in thought – at times, fuzzy. Now, everything is so much clearer and precise in words!

I should like to thank IGI Global for giving me this rare opportunity to challenge myself to write a book in 14 months. My very special thanks go to Myla Merkel who constantly showed care and guided me with patience and wisdom throughout the entire project. I am also grateful to Erika Gallagher and Jan Travers who have been instrumental in designing the project and facilitating progress by setting realistic milestones for it. I also owe my sincere gratitude to the two anonymous reviewers who have provided invaluable suggestions on how to improve many parts of the book.
