Acknowledgment

I would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the collation and review process of the book, without whose support the project could not have been satisfactorily completed. In particular, I would like to thank Dr. Jody Howard for providing graduate assistant funds for some of the research on this work, particularly when those funds were in high demand. I would also not have been able to complete this work in the timeframe it was developed without the help of Jennifer L Burzenski, previously a graduate student in information science and now a practicing and thriving professional.

Special thanks also go to the publishing team at IGI Global, whose contributions throughout the whole process have been invaluable. In particular to Monica Speca, who was always responsive to my emails and questions, without exception, and who kept this project on schedule and with a high quality of editorial review. I would also like to thank the reviewers of this work, and though I do not know their identity, they provided excellent and helpful comments and suggestions for improving the work. Finally, I would like to thank Jan Travers for constructing the contract for this process, and to my friend Neil Salkind for his help in thinking through some issues around writing and publishing this work from an author’s perspective.
