Acknowledgment

I acknowledge with thanks the preparation of this research project and book to a list of collegial contributors who enabled its successful completion. The result is a rare scholarly contribution in a slim but intensifying theme in recent times. The book as a research project has brought into the academic forum for the first few scholarly attempts the setting up of monotheistic law in the ontological working of the world-system. Within this research project, it has been possible to introduce the theme of human consciousness centered in a rigorously analytical socio-scientific epistemological enterprise.

Towards my accomplishment, I thank the College of Commerce and Economics at Sultan Qaboos University, which awarded me a book preparation research grant, 2010-2011, for the completion of this project under its Internal Research Grant Program. I thank the Department of Postgraduate Studies and Research at Sultan Qaboos University for approving my Research Leave to carry on the research work.

My thanks are to Professor Jack Quarter, Director of the Social Economy Center at the University of Toronto, for offering me a Summer Visiting Professorship, 2011. I spent this time writing and preparing the book towards its completion. The Social Economy Center and the abundant facilities of the University of Toronto libraries were richly instrumental in helping me realize this project.

My thanks go to IGI Global Publications for awarding me a contract for the publication of this book, considering its system and cybernetic methodological overview. In the field of innovation, epistemic evolutionary learning regarding the functioning of the generality and the specifics of issues and problems of the world-system plays a central role. The theme of the monotheistic law (God) is thereby studied in a systemic way (world-system) that examines and consciously embeds the monotheistic episteme in the study of selected issues of science and society.
Finally, my thanks are to Professor Emeritus Dr. Mohammad Nejatullah Siddiqi of Aligarh University, India for embellishing this book with his erudite Foreword. I consider the scholarly message that this book reaches out to the informed reader on the ontological functioning of the monotheistic law in the details of the world-system as a singular feat of great rarity. This alone remains my greatest sense of comfort and confidence.
