Acknowledgment

I have lived these months as a very rich and empowering opportunity, as a person and as a professional. For this, my very first thanks are addressed to IGI Global for affording me the chance to edit this book, and to their qualified team, in particular Kayla Wolfe and Christine Smith, who have patiently answered my queries, provided advice, guidance, and support.

I wish to express sincere thanks to all the authors for having shared their work, failures, and successes. Their expertise and experiences have provided excellent contributions and have made this book possible.

I also thank all the reviewers who carried out constructive and accurate evaluations of the chapters. This has allowed me to better accomplish my role of editor.

My heartfelt thanks go to Professor Tommaso Leo for his inspiring foreword. His insights into innovative research issues have enlightened me for some years.

One thing these contributors share is a passion for and commitment to a new vision of learning. This has been energising for me, and I’m sure it will be motivating for the audience of this book.

Online collaboration is a powerful solution to enrich individuals, and has made possible a book that will hopefully inform, support, and encourage practitioners and researchers to venture into the synergic integration of formal and informal eLearning environments for adult lifelong learners.

Finally, a very special thank you goes to my joyful family for their endless and loving encouragement over the months it’s taken to complete this work.
