As senior editor for this volume, I would like to give special thanks and acknowledgement to my coeditor, Mary Hricko, who first envisioned this project and then so graciously invited and encouraged my involvement. I will always cherish the opportunity that Mary and the publisher for this volume, Idea Group, have given me to work so closely with the 47 authors of and 26 reviewers for the 18 chapters included in this volume. They have collectively raised the body of theoretical and applied knowledge in this burgeoning field. These professionals are truly pioneers who have helped chart the way for many administrators, teachers, trainers, learners, and online assessors to follow.

All the authors join me in acknowledging again each of the 26 reviewers whose expertise, insights, and suggestions have added so much to the quality and value of the chapters in this volume. I have listed alphabetically by last name all reviewers who generously contributed to this volume: Scott Bergstrom, Tim Bothell, Bryan Bradley, Paul Byrd, Susan Clark, Luke Fernandez, Lee Glines, Justin Johansen, Paul Jones, Jerry Larson, Barbara Lawrence, Duane Lemley, Alan Meredith, Adisack Nhouyvanisvong, Jim Olsen, Leslie Pelton, Tim Pelton, Hal Sanderson, Lynn Sorenson, Steve Taggart, Ron Terry, Jon Twing, Nancy Wentworth, David Williams, Peter Williams, and Bud Wood.

Special appreciation is also due to Dianne King and Chellae Brooks of Brigham Young University, Division of Continuing Education, for the numerous and invaluable editing contributions they and their staff have provided to the chapter authors and volume editors. Special thanks also go to Jan Travers, managing editor for the publisher, and her team at Idea Group for their professional support and personal encouragement.

This project would not have been possible without the generosity and support of the dean of the Division of Continuing Education at Brigham Young University, Dr. Richard Eddy, who enthusiastically made possible my involvement and that of others within the division to make this project a reality. To Brianne Gillespie, my assistant, thank you for organizing the many details of this endeavor and for making sure I did not overlook anything. To my mentors over the years who instilled within me a love and respect for assessment and instructional science, I give heartfelt acknowledgement, in particular to my former faculty advisors, Dr. Richard Sudweeks and Dr. Paul Merrill, and my professional colleagues Dr. Dwight Laws and Ron Malan. Finally, I thank my wife, Lori, and our seven children for their constant love and encouragement.
