The editors would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the production of the book, without whose support the project could not have been satisfactorily completed.

Most of the authors of chapters included in this book also served as referees for articles written by other authors. Thanks go to all those who provided constructive and comprehensive reviews. Additionally, several other people helped the project by providing advice that was important in keeping the team moving forward. Especially important throughout the process were G. David Garson of North Carolina State University, Abby Goodrum of Ryerson University, David Wyld of Southeastern Louisiana University, and Walter Brasch of Bloomsburg University. Without your kind words, advice, and “gentle prodding” along the way, this book would not be the same. Support of the School of Public and International Affairs at North Carolina State University is acknowledged for computing resources used throughout this project.

Special thanks also go to all the staff at IGI Global, whose contributions throughout the whole process from inception of the initial idea to final publication have been invaluable. In particular, to Kristin Roth, who provided us with timely information, exceptional advice, and kept us on track via e-mail and phone calls.

Special thanks go to G. David Garson for providing me with this opportunity. I hope this book lives up to the vision you had for it. And last but not least, to my family, Siobhan, Jade, Brenna, and Joseph, for their unfailing support and encouragement during the months it took to give birth to this book. I love you very much.

In closing, I wish to thank all of the authors for their insights and excellent contributions to this book. I also want to thank all of the people who assisted me in the reviewing process. I learned much during the compilation of this book. I hope the readers of this book find it as interesting and informative as I do.
