Acknowledgment

We thank IGI Global for its patience with us as we put this book together. We appreciate the help from IGI, particularly our editorial staff of Christine Smith, Vince D’Imperio, and Allison McGinnis. We thank the many scholars who were willing to review manuscripts for this book.

Lenny especially wants to acknowledge and thank two University of Southern Maine professors. One is his co-editor, Jeff Beaudry, who is the original “map guy” at USM, who brought the idea of mapping to us. Jeff has been steady and patient and resilient in the face of those of us who did not catch on quickly to the merits of mapping. He must also thank Professor John Broida, a Professor of Psychology at USM, who made it possible for Lenny to analyze the data in the study. They are two generous gems amongst us.

Jeff wants to thank Lenny for his scholarly pursuit of effective and engaging pedagogy, his collaborative spirit, and his endless appetite for discussion. He has offered many versions of workshops about concept mapping over the years, but realized that for the work to go forward he needed to collaborate. From what he can see, we are mapping out a bright future. Most of all Jeff thanks his wife Judy; she has been the silent writing partner throughout the formation and production of this book.
