We would like to thank many of our colleagues and friends who have encouraged us to write this book so that others will benefit from learning about problem-based learning.

Our thanks also go to the many current and past students who have given us very positive feedback about their experiences of problem-based learning and how it has helped them in their studies and careers. There have also been many students who have participated in the research that led to this book.

We would like to thank Chew Swee Cheng for her wealth of experience and understanding of problem-based learning and for sharing so much in the many hours that we discussed PBL issues. We would particularly like to thank Carol Swift, for her encouragement and comments on the manuscript.

We would also like to express our thanks to our respective spouses, Ian Uden and Sara Beaumont, who have encouraged and supported us throughout.

Last, but not least, we would like to express our gratitude to God who has given us the grace and strength to undertake a difficult task during a very busy teaching schedule.
