Technology Supported Learning and Teaching: A Staff Perspective

Table of Contents

Preface ................................................................. vii

Chapter I
Introduction ....................................................................................................................1

John Cowan, Napier University, Edinburgh, UK

Section I: Infrastructural and Cultural Issues

Chapter II
What Lecturers Say Helps and Hinders Their Use of a Virtual Learning Environment to Support Face-to-Face Teaching ......................................................... 15

Sue Morón-García, Loughborough University, UK

Chapter III
Academic Experiences of Using VLEs: Overarching Lessons for Preparing and Supporting Staff ................................................................. 34

Barbara Newland, Bournemouth University, UK

Martin Jenkins, University of Gloucestershire, UK

Neil Ringan, University of Bolton, UK

Chapter IV
Using Asynchronous Computer Conferencing to Support Learning and Teaching in a Campus-Based HE Context: Beyond E-Moderating ........................................... 51

Pat Jefferies, De Montfort University, UK

Roy Seden, University of Derby, UK
Chapter V
Improving E-Learning Support and Infrastructure: An Evidence-Based Approach ... 71
Carmel McNaught, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, China
Paul Lam, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, China
Christina Keing, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, China
Kin Fai Cheng, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, China

Chapter VI
Developing E-Learning Provision for Healthcare Professionals’ Continuing Professional Development ................................................................. 91
Susi Peacock, Queen Margaret University College, UK
Gloria Maria Dunlop, Queen Margaret University College, UK

Section II: Pedagogical Issues

Chapter VII
Staff Perspectives on ILT: Findings from a National Evaluation of the Learning and Skills Sector ................................................................. 106
Colin McCaig, Sheffield Hallam University, UK
Maria Smith, Sheffield Hallam University, UK

Chapter VIII
Drivers and Barriers to the Uptake of Learning Technologies: Staff Experiences in a Research-Led University ..................................................... 125
Alison Davies, University of Birmingham, UK
Kelly Smith, University of Birmingham, UK

Chapter IX
Constructivist E-Learning for Staff Engaged in Continuous Professional Development ........................................................................................................... 146
Roisin Donnelly, Dublin Institute of Technology, Republic of Ireland
Ciara O’Farrell, Trinity College, Republic of Ireland

Chapter X
Staff Using an Institution-Wide VLE for Blended E-Learning: Implications of Student Views ................................................................. 160
Paul Brett, University of Wolverhampton, UK

Chapter XI
Teaching Large Groups: Implementation of a Mixed Model ................................................. 176
Andrea Chester, RMIT University, Australia
Andrew Francis, RMIT University, Australia

Chapter XII
Patchwork E-Dialogues in the Professional Development of New Teachers ........ 192
Moira Hulme, University of Wolverhampton, UK
Julie Hughes, University of Wolverhampton, UK
Chapter XIII
Understanding Roles Within Technology Supported Teaching and Learning: Implications for Staff, Academic Units, and Institutions... 210
Lori Lockyer, University of Wollongong, Australia
Sue Bennett, University of Wollongong, Australia

Chapter XIV
The Role of the Online Instructor as a Guide on the Side 224
Margaret Mazzolini, Swinburne University of Technology, Australia
Sarah Maddison, Swinburne University of Technology, Australia

Section III: Technological Issues

Chapter XV
Online Learning Activities in Second Year Environmental Geography 243
Sally Priest, University of Southampton, UK
Karen Fill, University of Southampton, UK

Chapter XVI
Lessons in Implementing a Learning Management System in a University: The Academic User Perspective 261
Fiona Darroch, University of Southern Queensland, Australia
Mark Toleman, University of Southern Queensland, Australia

Chapter XVII
Learning through Chat: University of the Arts London Case Studies in Online Learning in Art, Design and Communication 277
David Rowsell, University of the Arts London, UK
Tim Jackson, University of the Arts London, UK

Chapter XVIII
From SYnthia to Calma to Sybil: Developing Strategies for Interactive Learning in Music 292
Michael Clarke, University of Huddersfield, UK

Chapter XIX
Lecturing by Streamed Digital Video: Blood, Sweat, Tears and Success 309
Chris Smith, University of Central Lancashire, UK

About the Authors 323

Index 332