About the Authors

Salustiano Martínez-Fierro is a lecturer at the University of Cádiz, Spain. His research focuses on strategic alliances and entrepreneurship. He earned his PhD in management from the University of Cádiz. His articles and papers have been published by: Academy of Management Meetings; International Conference of Iberoamerican Academy of Management; European Academy of Management; Anales de Economía y Administracion de Empresas; International Journal of Cross Cultural Management; International Society for the Study of Work and Organizational Values (ISSWOV), AEDEM and ACEDE Conferences; and Meeting Luso-Espanholas de Gestao Cientifica. He has contributed to three books on strategic alliances and work values. He is a member of the entrepreneurial session of ACEDE and AEDEM, and he participates in several research groups on strategic management and human resources and creation of cultural firms. He is a member of the Regional Entrepreneurship Monitor in Andalusia (Spain), which is part of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM) international project, developed by Babson College and the London Business School. He was a reviewer of the ACEDE Conference of 2003 and 2005, and 4th International Meetings of Iberoamerican Academy of Management.

José Aurelio Medina-Garrido is a lecturer at the University of Cádiz, Spain. His research interests include the enabling role of information systems for strategic networks and dynamic capabilities development. He was a visiting fellow at the University of Warwick (UK) and at Real Colegio Complutense at Harvard. He has contributed to several books on IT and published articles and papers in: International Journal of Information Technology, Investigaciones Europeas de Dirección y Economía de la Empresa, the International Conference on the Dynamics of Strategy (University of Surrey), European Academy of Management International Conference, and the AEDEM and ACEDE Conferences. He is a member of the Regional Entrepreneurship Monitor in Andalusia (Spain), which is part of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM) international project, developed by Babson College and the London Business School. He participates in several research groups on dynamic capabilities and strategic change, strategic management and human resources, and creation of cultural firms. He has been a consultant for several firms.

Jose Ruiz-Navarro is a professor of management and dean of the Department of Business Administration, University of Cádiz (Spain). He has been a visiting professor at Purdue University Kranner School of Management. Ruiz-Navarro has been a consultant for the Chamber of Industry and Commerce in Cadiz, as well as for the following industries: automotive (Ford), aeronautic (Construcciones Aeronauticas, now EADS), food, and shipping. He has been CEO at ZUR (a Promotion Office of the Spanish Ministry of Industry), Gestion I (Consultancy), Free Zone Port of Cadiz, INI (Spanish Industrial Public Holding), and Astilleros Españoles, S.A. (Shipyard Industry). His articles and conferences have been published by: Long Range Planning; Eastern Academy of Management; International Conference on the Dynamics of Strategy (University of Surrey); EGOS (European Group of Organizational Studies); Strategic Management Society; Conference of Management and Organizational Cognition; and Strategic Management Journal. He is an expert evaluator of the European Commission DG XII. He was a reviewer of the International Congress of Academy of Management—Organization and Management Theory Division, 2000; Iberoamerican Academy of Management, 1999; I, II & III Workshops on Human Resources and Strategy (Spain); and Revista Europea de Dirección y Economía de la Empresa.

* * *

Özen Aşık earned her BA in psychology at Bogaziçi University, Istanbul (1997). After a period of professional experience in the private sector, she returned to academia and earned her MA in human resource management at Marmara University, Istanbul (2001). She is currently a PhD candidate in management at Bogaziçi University, and works as a research and teaching assistant at Yildiz Technical University. Her research interests include career management, psychological contracts, organizational justice, leadership, and strategic human resource management.
Cristina Bayona-Sáez is an associate professor of business organisation at the Department of Business Administration, Public University of Navarre. She holds a PhD in business administration from the Public University of Navarre (Spain). She teaches business economics and operation management at the degree level. Her major research interests are centered on cooperative R&D (firm’s motivations for cooperative R&D, the selection of partners, the type of research, the impact of alliances on the information set). Her work has been published in R&D Management, Research Policy, Journal of High Technology Management Research, Management Research, and Journal of Asset Management.

Sebastián Bruque-Cámara is a professor of management in the Department of Business Administration, Accounting and Sociology at the University of Jaén (Spain). He currently conducts research on organisational factors affecting IT adoption and social network’s effects on workers’ adaptation to technological changes. He has been a visitor researcher at the University of Nijmegen (The Netherlands) and his research has appeared in the European Journal of Information Systems, Internet Research, Journal of High Technology Management Research, and Strategic Management and Technology Analysis and Technovation.

César Camisón has a PhD in economic and business sciences and is a principal professor at University Jaume I (Spain). He has been a visiting professor at the University of Texas, Università Commerciale Luigi Bocconi de Milán, University of Surrey, University of Vienna, and Université de Montpellier I. He has also served as director of Strategy, Knowledge Management and Organizational Learning Research Group (GRECO). His areas of specialization are strategic management and competitiveness, entrepreneurship (SME and familiar enterprises), knowledge management, strategic alliances, and industrial districts. He has participated in five European projects in ESPRIT, FORCE, and FEDER programs. He has managed and developed more than 40 European and Spanish research projects. He is the author, co-author, and coordinator of 52 books and more than 150 articles and papers to congresses. Among reviews where he has published articles are: Environment and Planning A, Organization Studies, Management Research, International Business Review, International Journal of Technology Management, Quality Management Journal, International Journal of Quality & Reliability Management, Total Quality Management, Tourism Management, The Tourist Review, and International Journal of Hospitality Management.

Ana Rosa del Águila-Obra is an associate professor of management at University of Málaga (Spain). She holds both BA and PhD degrees in business administration. Ana has authored various books, edited by RA-MA Editorial and Alfaomega Grupo Editor, and has published in different journals including Technovation, Facilities, Journal of Global Information Technology Management, Internet Research, and Electronic Networking Applications and Policy. She has published chapters in reviewed books edited by Kluwer Academic Publishers and Idea Group Publishing. Her research interests include Internet technology adoption, business-to-business electronic commerce, inter-organizational trust, and supply chain management.

Guadalupe Fuentes-Lombardo is an associate professor of strategic management in the Department of Business Administration, Accounting and Sociology at the University of Jaén (Spain). Nowadays, she is finishing her PhD on internationalization process of the family business through strategic alliances. She has been a researcher in the Family Business Chair at the University of Jaén, since it was founded in 2000. She has taught several courses at postgraduate level in the Central American University of Managua (Nicaragua). Thus, she is developing several research projects about the internationalization strategy of the family business. Her publications are about distinct topics related to family businesses.

Esteban García-Canal is an associate professor of management at the University of Oviedo (Spain) and an associate member of the Instituto Empresa y Humanismo at the University of Navarra, where he also previously taught. He earned his PhD in business administration from the University of Oviedo. His research interests are focused on the confluence between organizational economics, corporate strategy, and international business. Currently, he is a member of the editorial boards of the Journal of International Business Studies (JIBS) and Revista de Empresa.

Teresa García Marco is an associate professor of business organisation at the Department of Business Administration, Public University of Navarre. She holds a PhD in business administration from the Carlos III University (Spain) and she has been a visiting scholar at the Kellogg Graduate School of Management. She teaches business economics and economics of organizations at the degree level and corporate finance in the PhD program. Professor García-Marcos research interests center on corporate governance and cooperative R&D. Her work has been published in the Journal of Banking and Finance, R&D Management, Research Policy, and Journal of High Technology Management Research.
Fátima Guadamillas Gómez is a professor of strategic management at the Department of Law and Social Sciences in Toledo, Spain. She has a degree in economics and obtained her PhD from the University of Castilla-La Mancha. She coordinates the MBA and human resources management of this university. She teaches courses at the degree level on strategic and general management and at the MBA and PhD level on knowledge management, innovation, and strategic management. Her research focuses on innovation, knowledge management strategies, and the factors related to resource sharing and knowledge transfer. Her works have been published in specialized journals and books.

Yonca Gürol is an associate professor in management in the Department of Economics and Administrative Sciences at Yildiz Technical University. She earned her BA in business administration in 1991 at Istanbul University, Department of Business Administration, Istanbul. Two years later, she received her MBA in the same department, with an emphasis on organization and business policy. She also received her PhD in the same department in 1998, on management and organization. She is currently associate professor of management in Yildiz Technical University where she teaches Introduction to Business, Management and Organization, Strategic Management, and Management of Intellectual Capital. Her research interests include intellectual capital management, strategic management, organization theory, human resource management, and international management.

Brooke C. Kelly is currently attending the University of Central Florida and is enrolled in the Industrial/Organizational Psychology Doctoral Program. She received an MA from Boston College in counseling psychology. Her research interests include shared cognition, leadership, and coaching.

Mario Javier Donate Manzanares is an associate professor at the University of Castilla-La Mancha. He teaches courses on strategic management and entrepreneurship at the Department of Law and Social Sciences in Ciudad Real, Spain. His research mainly focuses on knowledge management, technological innovation, and strategic alliances. He is currently working on his PhD, which investigates the relationship between knowledge management and technological innovation strategies and its effect on firm performance in industrial settings.

Alfonso Miguel Márquez-García is an associate professor of strategic management in the Department of Business Administration, Accounting and Sociology at the University of Jaén (Spain). He is currently finishing his PhD on cooperation relationships analyzing the role of trust according to the target where trust is placed. He has been complutense fellow at the Real Colegio Complutense at Harvard University (USA) and has had a stay at the University of Oxford (UK). His research has appeared in Revesco, ICADE, Managing in Uncertainty, Kluwer Academic Publishers, the Workshop on Trust Within and Between Organisations (EIASM), and Conference Proceedings of the European Academy of Management (EURAM).

José Moyano-Fuentes is a professor of management in the Department of Business Administration, Accounting and Sociology at the University of Jaén (Spain). He currently conducts research on the effect of the ownership structure on firm performance. He also has interests on the role of technology in organizations, with current emphasis involving social networks influence on employees’ technology acceptance. His research has appeared in the Journal of Management Studies, International Journal of Management Reviews, and Strategic Management and Technology Analysis.

Antonio-Rafael Ramos-Rodríguez is a lecturer at the University of Cádiz, Spain. His research interests include bibliometric analysis of entrepreneurship research. He received his PhD in management from University of Cádiz. His articles and papers have been published in Investigaciones Europeas de Dirección y Economía de la Empresa, Strategic Management Journal, and the AEDEM and ACEDE Conferences. He is a member of the Regional Entrepreneurship Monitor in Andalusia (Spain), which is part of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM) international project, developed by Babson College and the London Business School. He participates in several research groups on Dynamic Capabilities and Strategic Change and Strategic Management and Human Resources. He is a member of the entrepreneurial session of ACEDE.

Michael A. Rosen is a PhD student in the Applied Experimental and Human Factors Psychology Program at UCF. He is a graduate research assistant at the Institute for Simulation and Training where he works on several research projects including the Multidisciplinary University Research Initiative (MURI) and the Operator Performance Under Stress (OPUS) project investigating the effects of stress on team performance as well as the FuLL TiLT project developing a scenario-based training tool for leaders of multicultural teams. His research interests include individual and team decision making, human-computer interaction, and team performance.

Eduardo Salas, PhD, is currently a professor of psychology and trustee chair at the University of Central Florida where he also holds an appointment as program director for Human Systems Integration Research Department at the Institute for Simulation and Training. Previously, he was a senior research psychologist and head of the Training Technology Development Branch of the Naval Air Warfare Center Training Systems Division for 15 years. During this period, Salas served as a principal investigator for numerous R&D programs focusing on teamwork, team training, decision making under stress, and performance assessment. Salas has co-authored over 200 journal articles and book chapters and has co-edited 11 books.

Jesús David Sánchez de Pablo González del Campo is an assistant professor of general management at the University of Castilla-La Mancha. He teaches courses on economics and general management in the Department of Chemical Sciences, Ciudad Real (Spain). His research focuses on strategic alliances and cooperation between firms. He has published some articles about leadership styles and cooperation. He is currently working on his PhD, which is about firm cooperation strategies in Spanish firms.

Pablo Sánchez-Lorda is an assistant professor of management at the University of Oviedo (Spain). He received his PhD in business administration from the University of Oviedo. His research interests include mergers and acquisitions, alliances and inter-partner relationships, corporate governance and organizational economics.

Copyright © 2006, Idea Group Inc. Copying or distributing in print or electronic forms without written permission of Idea Group Inc. is prohibited.