About the Contributors

Jingyuan Zhao holds a PhD in Management Science from the Chinese Academy of Sciences and a PhD in Engineering from the University of Science and Technology, China. Dr. Zhao also completed postdoctoral programs in Technology, Economy, and Management from the Harbin Institute of Technology, China, and in Management of Technology from the University of Quebec in Montreal, Canada. She currently serves as a research fellow with the Department of Political Science at the University of Toronto. She is also a Professor with the School of Management at Beijing Union University. Her primary research interests include regional innovation management, high-tech industry cluster, knowledge management, technology diffusion, organizational learning.

Patricia Ordóñez de Pablos is an Economics Professor in the Department of Business Administration and Accountability with The University of Oviedo, Spain. Her teaching and research focuses on strategic management, knowledge management, intellectual capital measuring and reporting, organizational learning, and human resources management. She currently serves as Executive Editor of the International Journal of Learning and Intellectual, the International Journal of Strategic Change Management, and Co-Executive Editor of the International Journal of Chinese Culture and Management.

Robert D. Tennyson is a Professor of Educational Psychology at the University of Minnesota. He serves as an editor for the professional journal, Computers in Human Behavior. He also serves on numerous editorial boards for other peer-reviewed journals. His research and publications address topics in problem solving, concept learning, intelligent systems, testing and measurement, instructional design, and advanced learning technologies. He has directed a number of sponsored workshops and advanced study institutes in Germany, Greece, Norway, Spain, and Taiwan. He has authored over 300 journal articles, books, and book chapters.

* * *

Salwa Al-Hamoudi holds a Ph.D in Knowledge Management from University of Portsmouth, UK. Msc Public Administration from King Saud University, Msc Research Methods from Portsmouth University. PgD office management from Institute of Public Administration, PgC Learning and teaching from University of Portsmouth. She is an Assistant Professor in Institute of Public Administration in Saudi Arabia. Serving as a Lecturer or Trainer and Consultant specializing in Public Administration, knowledge management, Balance Score Card. Collaborations as trainer and consultant with King Saud University, Princess Noura bint Abdulaziz University. Research interests in Knowledge Management, Strategic Management, Balance Score Card, and E-government.
Neeta Baporikar holds a D.Sc in Management Studies and a PhD in Management. She also holds an MBA with distinction and a Law (Hons.) degree. She is a Professor of Strategic Management and Entrepreneurship and is currently on sabbatical. Previously, she served as Head of the Scientific Research Department, Sultanate of Oman, Ministry of Higher Education, CAS-Salah. Prior to entering the world of academia, Baporikar earned over a decade of professional experience in industry, consultancy, and training. Additionally, she is certified as an Accredited Management Teacher, Qualified Trainer, Doctoral Guide, and Board Member of Academics and Advisory Committee in accredited B-Schools. She is also a reviewer for numerous international journals and has published several refereed research papers and authored books in the areas of entrepreneurship, strategy, and management education.

Nicola Bellantuono holds a Laurea Degree in Management Engineering (2004) and a PhD in Environmental Engineering (2008). He is currently a research fellow in Business and Management Engineering at Politecnico di Bari, Italy, where he has also served as a contract Professor and a research fellow in Operations Management. Bellantuono has also previously served as a visiting scholar with the Anderson Graduate School of Management at the University of California, Los Angeles. His main research interests include coordination and exchange mechanisms for supply chain management, open innovation, social innovation, and corporate social responsibility.

Tao Chen is an Associate Professor of Organizational Behavior and Human Resource Management at the University of Sanjiang’s School of Business. His research interests include management information systems and decision-making.

Donatella Ettorre is a PhD student in Mechanical and Management Engineering at Politecnico di Bari, Italy. She is also earning her PhD in Product Innovation and Development Management through the university’s Interpolytechnic Doctoral School (SIPD). She holds a Masters in Industrial Engineering and has attended several classes in Open and Social Innovation. Ettore’s primary research interest is Social Innovation and its application to business models. In keeping with this focus, she is currently coordinating a Social Innovation project in Italy. Her project is financed by the Italian Ministry of Education, University, and Research.

Salman Iqbal earned a B.E. in Pakistan and an M.B.A. from the University of Wollongong, Australia. He recently defended his PhD thesis at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand. Throughout his PhD program, Iqbal attended five international conferences and presented his work to numerous professional audiences. Iqbal currently works as a lecturer in Pakistan. He has contributed numerous chapters for peer-edited books. He has also published articles in Human Resources Magazine (HRINZ). His research interests include HRM, knowledge management, and organizational innovation capability. He is currently an Assistant Professor, and HoD of Management and Organisation, in University of Central Punjab, Lahore, Pakistan.

Muhammad Khalique holds a PhD in Business from the University of Malaysia, Sarawak, where he is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Business Management. He currently teaches Operational Management at the graduate level and Business Mathematics, Statistics for Economics and Business, Management Science, and Product Development Strategy at the undergraduate level. He has published numerous articles in international refereed journals, conference proceedings, and book chapters. His research focuses on intellectual capital management, knowledge management, entrepreneurship, innovation, SMEs and organizational performance. He is currently involved in two research projects which are sponsored by Ministry of Higher Education (MOHE) Malaysia.

Yunshan Lian is a recent doctoral graduate from the H. Wayne Huizenga School of Business and Entrepreneurship at Nova Southeastern University. Previously, he served as Senior Manager and Senior Engineer for a Fortune Global 120 company in the automotive industry. He earned first-hand international business experience through his work in Africa, Asia, Europe, and the U.S. His teaching and research focuses on global supply chains, entry modes, FDIs, and international marketing.

Celestine Mack holds an Associate of Arts in Ministry, a Bachelor of Arts in Human Services, and a Master of Arts in Leadership from Shorter University. She utilizes this diverse background as an employee for the DeKalb County School System. Mack is a native of Wadmalaw Island, South Carolina. She currently resides in Ellenwood, Georgia, where her husband serves as the pastor of The King’s House Ministries.

Mostafa Mohamad is a doctoral candidate at the Manchester Business School and an Assistant Lecturer with Cairo University, Benisuef. He has published widely on topics related to digital innovation and information systems. His recent studies focus on mobile business solutions, including mobile banking, mobile crowd control, and mobile health as pertaining to the pharmaceutical industry. Previously, Mohamad worked as a Supply Chain Manager in the automotive industry, where he developed fully operational ERP systems.

Bahaudin G. Mujtaba is a Professor of Management at Nova Southeastern University. Bahaudin is the author and co-author of twenty professional and academic books dealing with diversity, ethics, and business management, as well as three hundred academic journal articles. His areas of research include business ethics, cross-cultural leadership, and management. Bahaudin can be reached at: mujtaba@nova.edu.

Li Pang holds a PhD in Economics and currently works as an Economics Lecturer. Her research focuses on regional economy, industrial economy, technological innovation, and enterprise competitive advantage. Many of Pang’s research projects have earned the support of governmental research grants, including “The development path of key areas of service industry in Yangzhou City” and “The evolution mechanism of independent innovation”.

Pierpaolo Pontrandolfo earned his PhD in Engineering of Advanced Manufacturing Systems at Politecnico di Bari, Italy, where he is currently a Professor of Business and Management Engineering. Pontrandolfo also served the university as Head of the Department of Environmental Engineering and Sustainable Development from 2006 to 2009. Since 2009, he has collaborated on numerous projects with the InterNeg Research Centre, John Molson School of Business, and Concordia University in Montreal, Canada. In 1995 and 1997, he served as a visiting scholar at the University of South Florida, Tampa. He is author of numerous internationally published papers in the fields of supply chain management, corporate social responsibility, and green product development.
Ronnie Ramlogan is a Senior Research Fellow in the Manchester Institute of Innovation Research (MIOIR). Previously, he served as a research fellow with the Centre for Research in Innovation and Competition at the Manchester Business School. He has published highly cited journal papers in the areas of evolutionary and complex systems approach to innovation with an empirical emphasis on innovations in medical technology. He is currently at work on a research project which addresses new perspectives on the role of the economy. His research focuses on the medical industry, universities, and mobile financial services.

Rakhi Rashmi works as a Barrister in both England and Wales, specializing in health policy, human rights, technology policy, and IP. She also serves as a lecturer in the London School of Business Finance and a visiting fellow at Kings College. Previously, she served as a consultant and advisor with numerous high commissions, including the CNRS and the GREDEG in France. Dr. Rashmi;s international experience includes travel to 19 different countries and professional work in four countries. She has presented on Indian and Chinese biopharma industries, technology transfer, and patent policy in 17 different nations.

Barbara Scozzi is an Assistant Professor in Business and Management Engineering at the the Polytechnic University of Bari, Italy. She holds a PhD in Business and Management Engineering (2001). Since 1999, she has worked on numerous national and international research projects. Since August, 2000, she has served as a visiting scholar at Syracuse University, New York. Her research primarily focuses on business process management, knowledge management, innovation in small and medium-sized enterprises, open innovation, and corporate social responsibility.

Paul Toulson is a registered Industrial and Organizational Psychologist and an Associate Professor with the College of Business at Massey University, where he has served as a faculty member since 1985. He previously served as an Industrial and Organizational Psychologist and Personnel Director in the New Zealand Armed Forces. Toulson is the Vice President of the Academic Branch of HRINZ, a Life Fellow of the Human Resources Institute of New Zealand, an Associate Fellow of the New Zealand Psychological Society, and a member of the Research and Publications Committee and the Academy of Management. He is also the founding editor of the New Zealand Journal of Human Resources Management. His research interests include human resource management practices, research methods in human resource management, valuing human resources management, and strategic human resource management.

David Tweed is the Associate Pro- Vice-Chancellor for Executive Education in the College of Business at Massey University. He has worked in the field of SME Development for over 10 years and has served as a practicing researcher for over 25 years. Tweed worked with a research team to investigate management competencies which facilitate the uptake of new technology by small firms, earning a three-year FRST contract for $675,000. His research is also widely published in both academic and practitioner-targeted books.

Ike Udechukwu is a lead Business faculty member at Columbia Southern University, Alabama. He has taught courses at doctoral, graduate, and undergraduate levels. He has published in numerous journals, including Public Personnel Management, Human Resources Development Review, and the Journal of Applied Management and Entrepreneurship. He currently resides in the Southeastern United States.
About the Contributors

Suri Weisfeld-Spolter is an Associate Professor of Marketing at the Huizenga School of Business, Nova Southeastern University and Chair of the Doctoral DBA program. Her research interests include consumer behavior, product label claims, cultural influences, eWOM, and education pedagogy. She has published in Marketing Science and other marketing and education journals.

Trevor Wood-Harper is a Professor of Information Systems and Chair in Information Systems & Systemic Change at the Manchester Business School. He has co-authored 11 books and monographs and over 180 research articles on a wide range of topics, including Multiview Methodology, Electronic Commerce, Action Research, Business Process Re-engineering, and IS ethics. In 1990, Wood-Harper established one of the first IS doctoral schools in the UK, combining European and American styles. Previously, he served as the £100,000 Foundation Chair in Computing and Information Systems at the University of Salford and the Director of the Information Systems Research Institute.

Zhiming Zhu holds a Ph.D. in Research Direction: Management Information Systems from Hohai University, where he is also an Assistant Professor with the Business School.