About the Contributors

Claretha Hughes is an Associate Professor and past Director of the College of Education and Health Professions Honors Program at the University of Arkansas, USA. She has over 24 years of diverse management, supervisory and administrative experience in organizational and workforce development. She is a member of Association for Talent Development and has published articles in the Human Resource Development Review, the Workforce Education Forum, and New Horizons in Adult Education and Human Resource Development. Her book Valuing People and Technology in the Workplace: A Competitive Advantage Framework won the R. Wayne Pace Book of the Year award in 2012. She has a Ph.D. from Virginia Tech and her MBA is from the Sam M. Walton College of Business at the University of Arkansas.

Matthew W. Gosney is Director of Organizational Development for Hillcrest HealthCare System, USA where he manages the design and implementation of integrated talent management strategy for dozens of hospitals across the US. He has published in The Encyclopedia of E-Leadership, Counseling, and Training and is the co-author of The History of Human Resource Development. Dr. Gosney earned his doctorate in Human Resource and Workforce Development from the University of Arkansas, USA, where he was named outstanding Doctoral Student ‘09-10.

***

Meera Alagaraja is an assistant professor of human resource development at the University of Louisville. Her research interests include strategic HRD, performance interventions, international HRD, and organizational learning. She received the Monica M Lee Research Excellence award (2013) for outstanding article of the year on how organizations mobilize alignment through strategic HRD. She has also published in Human Resource Development Review, Human Resource Development International, and Human Resource Development Quarterly as well as the European Journal of Training and Development.

Julie Gedro is a Professor of Business, Management and Economics with SUNY Empire State College. Dr. Gedro holds a B.A. in Economics and English from the College of William and Mary; an M.B.A. in Information Systems from Kennesaw State University; and an Ed.D. in Human Resource Development from the University of Georgia. Prior to her academic career, Dr. Gedro served in Human Resource Management and Development roles in the technology and telecommunications sectors. Dr. Gedro’s research, teaching and practice interests include workplace civility, nonprofit management, business and environmental sustainability, leadership development and career development.
About the Contributors

Huh-Jung Hahn is a PhD Candidate in the human resource development (HRD) program at the Department of Organizational Leadership, Policy, and Development, University of Minnesota, U.S.A. Huh-Jung is also pursuing a PhD minor in Business Administration at the Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota. Huh-Jung’s research areas are managerial coaching, leadership development, training and development and employability. She has published articles in Human Resource Development Quarterly and Human Resource Development International.

Robert Gordon Hamlin is Emeritus Professor and Chair of Human Resource Development at the University of Wolverhampton, UK. His research interests are focused mainly on perceived “managerial and leadership effectiveness,” “managerial coaching effectiveness” and “mentoring effectiveness” within public, private and third sector organizations in the UK and in various other countries around the globe. The results of his research have been published widely in various management and HRD related international refereed journals and national practitioner magazines in the UK. He has contributed over twenty authored and co-authored chapters to numerous HRD-related books, and is author of Universalistic Models of Managerial and Leadership Effectiveness: A cumulative and multiple cross-case empirical study of effective and ineffective managerial behaviour. VDM Verlag Dr Muller. He is also the lead co-editor of Organizational Change and Development: A reflective guide for managers, trainers and developers. FT Prentice Hall. Bob serves on the Editorial Boards of Human Resource Development International, Human Resource Development Quarterly, the European Journal of Training and Development, the International Journal of Management Practice, the International Journal of Evidence-based Coaching and Mentoring, and he is also a reviewer for the Human Resource Management Journal.

Ann Herd, SPHR, CPC, is an Assistant Professor of Human Resources and Organization Development in the Organizational Leadership and Learning program at University of Louisville. She researches, teaches, and regularly provides services to industry and the military in the areas of strategic HR, global leadership assessment and development, executive coaching, competency modeling, assessment centers, and talent acquisition and management. Her work has been published in Human Resource Development Review, Human Resource Development International, New Horizons in Adult Education and Human Resource Development, Sex Roles, and Journal of Organizational Behavior.

Catherine N. Kyeyune is an Assistant Professor of human resource development at Jackson State University. She is a recipient of the 2015 teaching award in the College of Education and Human Development. Her research areas include career development, workforce diversity, mentoring, talent management, cultural competence and international human resource development. She has presented academic papers in human resource development at international, national and regional professional conferences.

Sambhavi Lakshminarayanan is a full Professor in the Department of Business Administration. She joined the department in 2002, and has been teaching courses in the areas of Business and Management. Dr. Lakshminarayanan has a BA (Honors) degree in Mathematical Statistics from Lady Shri Ram College for Women, and a Master of Statistics degree from the Indian Statistical Institute, both in New Delhi, India. Her PhD. is from the University of Texas, Dallas. Dr. Lakshminarayanan has published in several journals including the Journal of the Operations Research Society, the Journal of Management Policy & Practice, Discrete Applied Mathematics, Linear Algebra and Its Applications, the Journal of Sustainable Development and Marketology. Recently, she has also written and published cases in The Case Journal and Journal of Critical Incidents.
Chandan Maheshkar is a Management Research Fellow at University of Indore, India and also associated as a visiting lecturer with different management institutions in the region. Higher education management, management teaching pedagogy, competency mapping of university teaching personnel and organizational behavior are his core research areas. He is known in the region particularly for teaching statistical methods in business studies.

Shari Peterson is an Associate Professor in the Department of Organizational Leadership, Policy, and Development at the University of Minnesota. She recently served as the Coordinator of the Human Resource Development (HRD) program, one of five programs in that Department. Most recent publications are on the related topics of (a) coaching, (b) organizational culture, and (c) managerial employee turnover. Dr. Peterson primarily teaches research courses (at both the master’s and doctoral levels) and strategic HRD.

Oleksandr Tkachenko is a PhD Candidate in the human resource development (HRD) program at the Department of Organizational Leadership, Policy, and Development, University of Minnesota, U.S.A. Oleksandr is also pursuing a PhD minor in Business Administration at the Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota. Prior to joining his PhD program, Oleksandr worked as a trainer, manager, and consultant in Ukraine and in the Netherlands. Oleksandr’s research interests include workplace learning, organization development, leadership development, international HRD, and theory building. He has published articles in such journals as Human Resource Development International, Journal of Workplace Learning, and Zarządzanie Zasobami Ludzkimi (HRM/ZZL).