

About the Contributors

Daniel Ochieng Orwenjo holds a Doctor of Philosophy degree in linguistics from the University of Frankfurt, Germany. He is currently a senior lecturer in the Department of Languages and Communication Studies, Technical University, Kenya. He has published widely on various topics in linguistics in internationally acclaimed journals.

Omondi Oketch is a Senior Lecturer and Chairperson of the Department of Language and Communication Studies at the Technical University of Kenya. He began his career as a lecturer in 1998 at Maseno University before proceeding to University of the Western Cape, South African where he graduated with a doctorate degree in Linguistics in 2006. Dr. Omondi Oketch taught Linguistics to both undergraduate and postgraduate students at Maseno University before joining the Technical University of Kenya in 2012. Besides lecturing, he has supervised and examined both Master's and Doctorate students, locally and internationally. He has research interests in Multimodality, Social semiotics, Systemic Functional Linguistics, Critical Discourse Analysis and Multilingualism, where he has published over sixteen journal papers, book chapters and seminar proceedings.

Asiru Hameed Tunde is a lecturer and a Ph.D research Fellow in English and French Department, Umaru Musa Yar'adua University, Katsina, Nigeria and English and Linguistics Department of Kenyatta University, Nairobi respectively. His research interests include: Critical Discourse Analysis, Semantics, Media Discourse and Pragmatics.

* * *

Samson Angulu Abaya is a senior lecturer with the Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria –Nigeria. He holds a B.A from the University of Maiduguri-Nigeria, M.A and PhD from the famous Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria-Nigeria. His area of specialization is Pragmatics, Stylistics, Semantics and Applied Linguistics. And currently, he is into Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA).

Gboye Adeyanju has held several honours like the 2013 19th Congress of Linguists Scholarship at the University of Geneva, Switzerland; the 2012 British Association for Applied Linguistics/Chris Brumfit International Scholarship, University of Southampton, United Kingdom as well as the 2011 Nigerian and the African Continental Region Awardee to the International Systemic Functional Linguistics Association at the University of Lisbon, Portugal. Similarly, he was awarded the 2009 Scholarship by the International Systemic Functional Linguistics Association/John Yuk Wah Chan Memorial Fund, Hong Kong, to the 36th International Systemic Functional Linguistics Congress, Tsinghua University, Beijing, Peoples' Republic of China. Since 2013 he has been Junior Research Fellow, at the Institut Francais de Recherche en Afrique, IFRA, Institute for African Studies, University of Ibadan-Nigeria. Gboye Adeyanju was educated at the Universities in Jos and Abuja-Nigeria and holds a tenured appointment at the University of Abuja-Nigeria. His teaching and research areas are Discourse Analysis, Systemic Functional Grammar, Language of Religion, and Advertising.

Sammy Gakero Gachigua is a final year PhD student in Applied Linguistics at Lancaster University UK. Using a Discourse-Historical perspective, Gachigua's thesis focuses on the tensions between political power elite interests and public good in Kenyan parliamentary debates. Gachigua also teaches Communication and Media at Egerton University, Kenya. His teaching and research interests include: critical discourse analysis; argumentation theory and analysis; conceptual metaphor analysis; parliamentary, political and media discourses and communication; communication and law; and political cartoon analysis.

Amaryllis Maria Georges holds a BA from Kings College London and an MSc from University College London in Democracy and Democratization. She is currently a terrorism and human rights researcher at TRENDS Research & Advisory a research institute based in Abu Dhabi, UAE, where she studies radicalization and extremism, de-radicalization, reintegration and counter-radicalization. Her general research interests include: women and children in jihad, relationship between the media and terrorism, human rights, democracy and democratization, public policy and political identity. She is furthermore interested in the impact of media on public policy and political identity as well as Greek politics and society.

Onwu Inya has Bachelor and Masters of Arts in English Language from Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria and University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He lectures in the General Studies Department of the Federal University of Technology, Akure and he is a PhD candidate in the Department of English, University of Ibadan. His current research interest is on using corpus-based methodology to investigate contextual features of legislative debates in the Nigerian Senate.

Ernest Jakaza (PhD) is a senior lecturer in the Department of English and Communication at the Midlands State University. He has more than ten years experience as a lecturer of linguistics and applied linguistics. He has published articles and book chapters in the area of parliamentary discourse, argumentation discourse, appraisal discourse, newspaper discourse, socio- linguistics and political discourse. His PhD thesis was on Zimbabwean parliamentary discourse and its representation in newspaper discourse. He also has a lot of experience in presenting papers and posters at national and international conferences.

Ikenna Kamalu, PhD, is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English Studies, University of Port Harcourt, Nigeria. His research interests include stylistics, discourse analysis, and metaphor analysis. Some of his articles have appeared in reputable international journals including African Literature Today (ALT). He is the editor of Working Papers: Journal of English Studies, University of Port Harcourt.

About the Contributors

Yowei Kang (Ph.D.) is Assistant Professor at Degree Program of Creative Industries and Digital Films, Kainan University, Taiwan. His research interests focus on digital game research, technology and rhetoric, composition pedagogy using digital game technology, and teaching English as a second language (ESL).

Ibrahim Sani Kankara is a lecturer in History Department of Umaru Musa Yar'adua University, Katsina. He holds a B.A, MA (BUK Kano) and Ph.D (UDSM) Tanzania. His area of interests include: Political Sociology and Cultural anthropology. He has published in International Journals and participated in many international conferences.

Natalia Knoblock is an Assistant Professor of English at the Saginaw Valley State University in Michigan, USA. Her research interests lie mostly in political and cognitive linguistics. Some of her research focused on the US presidential debates with attention to semantic structures and candidates' strategies utilized in the discourse, a sociolinguistic experiment linking dialectal features and political identity and ideology, and she is currently working on several projects associated with the ongoing political, social, and military crisis in the Eastern European country of Ukraine.

Tom Onditi Luoch is an Associate Professor of English and Linguistics and Dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at the United States International University – Africa in Nairobi, Kenya. He holds a PhD in Linguistic Science from the University of Reading in Reading Berkshire, England and a Master of Arts in Linguistics and African Languages from the University of Nairobi. He taught Linguistics and Second Language Acquisition and supervised graduate and doctoral research students between 1987 and 2001 at Kenyatta University before moving to the United States International University – Africa where he has taught and coordinated courses in General Education. His research and publications are in Second Language Acquisition, Multilingualism, and Sociolinguistics.

Konstantinos Margaritis read law at Democritus University of Thrace. He holds an LLM in International and European Public Law from Tilburg University and a PhD from the Law School of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens examining the novelties that the Lisbon amendment has brought to the protection of fundamental rights in the EU from an institutional standpoint. He has published in the fields of European Institutional Law, Constitutional Law and Human Rights Protection in Europe. He is a licensed Attorney at Law.

David Mugambe Mpiima holds a Masters in Gender Studies and a BA (Social Sciences) both degrees attained from Makerere University. He is an Assistant Lecturer in the School of Women and Gender Studies, College of Humanities and Social Sciences, Makerere University where he mainly teaches both Social and Feminist Research at Undergraduate and Post Graduate levels; Gender, Politics and the State as well as Gender and the Information Society at PGD Local Economic Development. His research interests include gender analysis of; governance, politics as well as Information Communication Technologies (ICT).

Mickias Musiyiwa teaches oral literature, popular music, literary theory and African culture, in the Department of African Languages & Literature at the University of Zimbabwe. He holds a PhD in African languages and popular songs (Stellenbosch University, 2013). He has published several articles and chapters in books on popular music, folklore, gender and literature, children's literature, Zimbabwean literature, politics and oral literature. His research interests are in popular music and society, onomastics, children's literature, folklore, gender, urban performances, and cultural and narrative theories.

Wendo Nabea is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Literary and Communication Studies at Laikipia University College, Kenya. He did his Bachelors and Masters studies at the University of Nairobi, and later enrolled for PhD studies at the University of Vienna, Austria. The author has research interests in political and media discourse, language policy, multiple literacies and Kiswahili studies, and has published in the same fields. He is currently the Director of Naivasha Campus, Laikipia University.

Esther Akumbo Nyam holds Bachelor and Masters of Arts in Theatre Arts and film technology from University of Jos Nigeria. She is presently a PhD student in the Department of Theatre Arts And Film Technology, Kenyatta University, Nairobi. She specializes in Community Theatre and Development. Her current research interest spans youth, women and children in violent conflict in Jos, Northern Nigeria and the need for transformation, conscientization and change.

Collen Sabao is a Lecturer of Pure and Applied Linguistics in the Department of English and Communication at Midlands State University in Zimbabwe. He is also an American Council of Learned Societies' (ACLS) African Humanities Program (AHP) Postdoctoral Fellow of Linguistics in the African Languages Department at Stellenbosch University (South Africa). His research interests are, among others Phonetics, Phonological Theory, Discourse Analysis, Journalism and Politics. He read for his PhD at Stellenbosch University. His thesis was a comparative discourse linguistic analysis of journalese in three journalistic cultures from an Appraisal Theoretic perspective.

Christopher Strelluf is Assistant Professor of English at Northwest Missouri State University, United States. His research interests include language variation and change, dialectology, language politics, and composition pedagogy.

Marianna Visser is professor in African languages at Stellenbosch University, South Africa. Her teaching and research revolves around linguistic phenomena that lie at the interfaces of lexical-semantics, morphosyntax and discourse semantics in African languages. Her research in formal syntax assumes a generative approach. Her research on discourse analysis is concerned with information structural properties, genre analysis and lexico-grammatical properties specifically media discourse and political genres. She has a keen teaching and research interest in second and additional language teaching and learning, with specific interest in focus-on-form issues and the relationship between cognitive task complexity and linguistic complexity language teaching within a Task-based framework.

Kenneth C. C. Yang (Ph.D.) is Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Texas at El Paso, USA. His research focuses on new media, consumer behavior, and international advertising. Some of his many works have been published in Far Eastern University Communication Journal, International Journal of Consumer Marketing, Journal of Intercultural Communication Studies, and Telematics and Informatics.