About the Contributors

Eyal Lewin is Chair of the Department of Multidisciplinary Studies at Ariel University. He is a research fellow at the Kinneret Center on Peace, Security and Society. He is also the director of the annual longitudinal survey of national resilience, conducted by the Center for National Security Studies at the University of Haifa. Additionally, he serves as the secretary of the Association of Civil-Military Studies in Israel. Lewin is the author of academic papers and books focusing on general socio-political phenomena such as patriotism, national resilience, and national ethos.

Etta Bick is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Middle East Studies and Political Science at Ariel University. She specializes in comparative politics, religion and politics and studies in citizenship. She has published widely on the role of American Jews in Israel-U.S. relations, Israel’s political parties, rabbis in Israeli politics and most recently a series of articles on national civilian service in Israel. She is currently writing a book on the politics behind the expansion of national civilian service in Israel.

Dan Naor is a researcher in the Department of Middle Eastern Studies at Bar Ilan University and Ariel University. His research interests include Lebanese history, politics and society, and the Lebanese-Syrian relations. He has published several articles in journals such as Middle Eastern Studies, British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies and Israel Affairs.

* * *

Tabassom Fanaian has Mphil degree in Political Psychology from Oslo University. she is pursuing her PhD degree in Psychology of Religion. Theocracy, Democratization, Political Behaviour; Social Movement and Ethics are her interests for research.
About the Contributors

Nurit Gillath, Ph.D., Israeli born, served for two years in the I.D.F (Israel’s military, trained as an officer). She was among the founders of the Feminist Movement in Israel in the 1970’s and one of the activists and nominees of the women’s party NESS that ran for the Knesset in the 1977 elections. Both her Masters and PhD focused on women’s role in war. Her M.A. (Political Science department, Haifa University) focused on women’s movement against the Lebanon war (1982). Her Ph.D. filled a vacuum in the research on Israel’s female soldiers’ service. Nurit is an active lecturer and writer on women’s status and women in the Israeli military. As a former government employee, she continues her work as a volunteer managing the Internet site of the Citizen Advice Bureau. She is married, a mother of two and a grandmother of six.

Tehila Kalagy is a Teaching Fellow in the Conflict Management & Resolution Program at Ben Gurion University of the Negev. Research associate on “ultra-Orthodox in Israel” at the Israel Democracy Institute. She specializes in public policy in the context of changes among minority groups in Israel, as well as being involved with research projects that combine research with social action.

Nissim Leon teaches sociology at Bar-Ilan University and Ariel University Center. His main researches focus on ethnic and religious relations in the Israeli Society. His book ‘Ultra-Orthodoxy and the Mizrachim Masortim in Israel’ is soon to be published by Itzhak Ben-Zvi Institute, Jerusalem.

Marc Neugröschel holds a MA in Sociology and is a PhD candidate at the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Keren Sasson is a PhD candidate from the department of International Relations at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. She received her BA from California University, Northridge and her MA from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Her research interests include identity and international relations, globalization, regional security organizations and regional security governance. Her present research focuses on institutional identity as shaping variations in concepts and notions of regional security governance in a comparative perspective, drawing on Latin America and the Arab Middle East.

Yuri Teper is an adjunct lecturer at Ariel University and a postdoctoral fellow at the Department of Russian and East-European Studies at School of Arts, Languages and Cultures at the University of Manchester, UK. He specializes in Russian domestic policy, namely, nationalism, political mobilization, officialdom discourse, the Russian political system, and identity issues.
About the Contributors

Dorit Zimand-Sheiner is a faculty member at the School of Communication at Ariel University. She is also a research fellow at the Institute for New Media, Society and politics at Ariel University. In the summer of 2014, she defended her PhD. thesis on “Myths in advertisements in Israeli daily newspapers in 1948-2008. The use of myths in the advertising industry as a reflection of societal and economic changes. The exodus myth as a case study” at Paris 8 University, and passed with distinction. Her academic career was prefaced by a long career as senior manager at international advertising agencies in Israel.