About the Contributors

Christina M. Akrivopoulou holds the post of Committee President in the Greek Refugee Appeals Authority. She has received her PhD in Constitutional Law and has been a Postdoctoral Researcher in the Greek Scholarship Foundation and the Aristotle University Research Committee. Her main research interests concern human and constitutional rights, the protection of the right to privacy, data protection, the private-public distinction, asylum and citizenship. She has lectured in the Faculty of Political Sciences of Democritus University of Thrace, in Hellenic Open University, in Aristotle University of Thessaloniki and in the EMA Unesco Chair Inter-University Master class. She also works as an Attorney-at-Law at the Thessaloniki Law Bar Association. She is collaborating with several Greek law reviews and she is an active member of many non-governmental human rights organisations in Greece and abroad.

***

Celalettin Aktaş is a graduate of Middlebury Institute of International Studies at Monterey, USA and Professor of Communication Sciences at the Communication Faculty of Istanbul Commerce University, Turkey. His writing and research interests include topics Information and Communication Technologies and New Media. He is also the Head of Media and Communication Systems Department at the same university. He is the editor of Intermedia International Peer-Reviewed E-Journal of Communication Sciences.

Soumi Banerjee is interested in different emerging issues in international politics, especially on the areas of global security policies, conflict resolution, poverty reduction and development studies. Her interest on international relations grew further during her studies at the Department of Political Science, Presidency University & Department of International Relations, Jadavpur University. She has presented paper in international conference and her articles are being published with different national and international publishing house. Presently, apart from her academic studies in Jadavpur University, she is also engaged in doing further research on various aspects of global politics and conflict resolution, especially in South Asian region.

Hossein Davari received his MA in linguistics in 2005 from Tarbiat Modares University (TMU), Tehran, Iran, his MA in TEFL in 2011 from Payam Nour University (PNU), Tehran, Iran and his PhD in linguistics from TMU in 2015. He is currently an assistant professor at Damghan University, Damghan, Iran. His research interests include applied linguistics and sociolinguistics. He is the author of several books and book chapters and has published and presented papers in these areas.

Alexia-Nefeli Douma was born in 1993 in Thessaloniki and holds a Bachelor's Degree in Law from Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. Her main interests evolve around Public International Law placing main emphasis on International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights Law. She considers herself a passionate member of simulation conferences and programmes alike. During the course of her studies at Law School, she successfully represented the Faculty at various academic occasions, such as the Oxford Moot Court Competition, the ELSA Human Rights Moot Court Competition at the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, as well as before the International Criminal Court at the Hague. Ever since her first experience at a Model United Nation Conference at the age of 15, she felt that international affairs intrigued her and would constitute an utterly significant drive in the career choices she would make in the future. She is mostly interested in pursuing a career at the United Nations, working towards the fostering of the Refugees’ Human Rights and functioning as an ambassador to the best interest of Greece at international fora.

Szilárd Gáspár-Szilágyi is a postdoctoral researcher affiliated with PluriCourts Oslo (from 12 May 2016). Prior to this he was a postdoctoral researcher at the Amsterdam Centre for European Law and Governance and was a lecturer at the Hague University of Applied Sciences. He obtained his PhD in 2015 at the University of Aarhus, Denmark. During his PhD he was a visiting researcher at the TMC Asser Instituut (The Hague) and a Grotius Research Fellow at University of Michigan Law School (USA). He obtained his 2 year LLM degree (top 3% of students) from Maastricht University, with two exchanges at Bucerius Law School (Germany) and Stellenbosch University (South Africa). His LLB degree (first of class) was awarded by Babeș-Bolyai University (Romania) during which he was an exchange student at Utrecht University. His main research interest focuses on EU External Relations, EU Investment Law and EU Criminal Law.
Saloni Jain is presently a final year student at the National Law University Delhi, located in the capital of India. She is set to join a top tier law firm after graduation to fulfill her passion towards corporate laws. Besides being interested in the corporate world, she feels that it is her duty as a responsible citizen to contribute towards the society in more ways than one. To attain that sense of fulfillment, she authors, inter alia, articles on pressing issues affecting the society such as farmer suicides, rights of sex workers, inheritance rights, evergreening of patents and trademark squatting, which have been published or are slated to be published in leading journals like the ABA journal for Indian Laws.

Peter G. Kirchschlaeger is visiting fellow in Ethics at Yale University, senior research fellow at the Faculty of Theology of the University of Lucerne, and guest-lecturer at the Leuphana University Lueneburg. He is private lecturer in Theological Ethics at the Faculty of Theology of the University of Fribourg, fellow at the Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law, and a research fellow at the University of the Free State, Bloemfontein. In 2013 he was visiting scholar at the University of Technology Sydney, and 2013-2014 guest-professor at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven. From 2011-2015 he was chair ad interim and from 2013-2015 dean of research at the Chur University of Theology. He is consultative expert for international organizations (e.g. UN, UNESCO, OSCE, Council of Europe, European Union), governments, NGOs, and the private sector. MA Theology and Judaism University of Lucerne 2001, MA Philosophy, Religious Studies, and Political Science University of Zurich 2003; PhD University of Zurich 2008, Habilitation University of Fribourg 2012.

Isabelle Lee is a third-year undergraduate student from Korea, studying a Bachelor of Laws at the City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong. Through her elective studies of International Human Rights Law and Law and Gender, she has explored through investigating Asian war crime, discriminations from different perspectives, which has deepened her understandings of the stigma that surrounds minority social groups. She aims to contribute further to protection of freedoms for minorities in the global society. Her previous publications include: Navaratnam, R. and Lee, I. (2015) ‘Same sex marriage in Hong Kong: a right is more than a referendum’, Int. J. Human Rights and Constitutional Studies, Vol. 3, No. 3, pp.220–227.

Michael Wabomba Masinde is currently a student at Moi University in Kenya, where he is pursuing his Master of Laws (LLM) degree. He is also an Advocate of the High Court of Kenya. He has a keen interest in Human Rights & Constitutional law and has published a number of Human Rights related Articles in both Local and international Journals.
Moazzam Naseer is an early career academic, Graduate from Sodortorn and Stockholm University, Sweden. He is currently pursuing his PhD. His major research is focused on New Media and Digital Humanities with emphasize on political economy of mass media, behavioral studies and media literacy; he had attended and earned PhD credits from Copenhagen University, Aarhus University, Southern Denmark University, Denmark, University of Milan Italy, Yeditepe University, Turkey, Gujrat University, Pakistan. He had published research article in peer reviewed research journal of Political Science of Punjab University. Authored a manuscript published from Germany with major focus on the Engagements of Youth with Digital Devices and Social Capital. He had attended several national and international conferences and is engaged with teaching, research and development at International Islamic University Islamabad, Pakistan.

Reannon Navaratnam is a final year undergraduate student, studying a Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Laws at Western Sydney University, New South Wales, Australia. On student exchange to the City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, she enrolled in the elective study units of International Human Rights Law and Law and Gender, which deepened her understanding of the intrinsic value of human rights on a global scale. She aims to further her contributions in the fight for the protection of freedoms for minority groups in society. Her previous publications include: Navaratnam, R. and Lee, I. (2015) ‘Same sex marriage in Hong Kong: a right is more than a referendum’, Int. J. Human Rights and Constitutional Studies, Vol. 3, No. 3, pp.220–227.

Paul Hendry Nkuna is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of African Languages at the University of South Africa. He has a doctorate in language policy in higher education that he obtained from the University of South Africa (UNISA). He also has a Master of Business Administration degree from the Management College of Southern Africa (MANCOSA). He has 23 scientific publications. Most of the publications are focusing on language matters including language management, folklore, linguistics and issues on language policy and language teaching in higher education. Dr Nkuna has presented papers on language policy and language management in various conferences, seminars and workshop both nationally and internationally. He is the author of books such as The 11 Official Languages: An Advantage of South Africa and BrainPower Strategy: The Six Gear Strategic Thoughts. Dr Nkuna’s interest is on language management, development and promotion. He has doctoral and masters students.
About the Contributors

Oluwafifehan Ogunde is a doctoral candidate at the University of Nottingham with his area of research being child rights protection in Nigeria. He obtained his Bachelor of Laws (LLB) certificate at the University of Sheffield in 2010. He also has a master’s degree in Human Rights Law obtained from the University of Nottingham in 2014. He is in addition a qualified barrister and solicitor of the Supreme Court of Nigeria, having been called to the Nigerian Bar in January 2012.

Susana Borràs Pentinat is a senior lecturer of Public international law and International Relations in the Department of Public International Law and International Relations in the Universitat Rovira i Virgili (Tarragona-Spain). She has a Master’s Degree in Environmental Law (2004) and a PhD degree on environmental law (2007). She is a researcher in the Research Group on environmental Law, Immigration and Local Government of the Center of Environmental Law Studies at Universitat Rovira i Virgili (www.cedat.cat). Currently, she coordinates the Master degree Programme on Environmental Law at Universitat Rovira i Virgili. She has been research fellow at Committee on Challenges of Modern Society (NATO/CCMS) in Belgium researching on several environmental law issues and visiting researcher at Max Planck Institut für ausländisches öffentliches Recht und Völkerrecht, Heidelberg (Germany), at the Center of International Environmental Law (CIEL) in Washington (EUA) and at the Centre de Recherche of The Hague Academy of International Law and International Relations on the Implementation of Environmental Law. Her research, conferences and publications have been focus on the access and benefits sharing derived from the utilization of the genetic resources, the bioprospection, the environmental refugees, the climate change, human rights and environment, the register, evaluation and the authorization of substances and prepared chemists (REACH) and the participation of the local entities in the European Union.

Evgenia Polychronidi is an Attorney at Law registered with Athens Bar Association and is currently registered as a PhD student at Dokuz Eylul University of Izmir, Turkey. She holds a Master in Human Rights Law from the University Lumiere Lyon 2 in France. She has worked at the Appeals Authority of the Asylum Service of the Ministry of Interior and Administrative Reconstruction in Athens, Greece and has a five years experience in migration and refugee issues both as a volunteer and as an academic researcher in France, Greece and Turkey.

Jasper Sugars is currently studying his law degree in Darwin, Australia which has within its bounds the Wickham Point detention centre - commonly referred to as the end of the line for persons being deported from Australia, including refugees. Deeply fascinated by the workings of law more generally, Jasper aspires to one day join a law firm and practice as a barrister and solicitor. Having previously published an article for the International Journal of Human Rights and Constitutional Studies, Jasper continues to write for other sources on a variety of topics among which the kafkaesque nature of International Law as a theory and practice.
About the Contributors

Zafeiris Tsiftzis (BSc, LLM) is a Ph.D. researcher in International Human Rights Law in the School of Law at the University of Bolton (Bolton, United Kingdom). His research interests are based on human rights law and humanitarian law and also on international law and international criminal. His doctoral research is on the international preventive framework for human rights abuses committed by private military and security companies.

Jolanda van der Vliet is a lecturer in immigration law and international law at the Hague University of applied sciences. She is also a researcher at the research group International Peace, Justice and Security at The Hague University of applied sciences. She received a ‘doctoral grant for teachers’ from NWO for her research on international legal protection regimes for environmentally forced displacement. Her PhD research is based at the international law department of Leiden University. Her research was nominated for the PimBreebaart Research Award.