About the Contributors

Tomas Gabriel Bas is the Director of Institute of Innovation based in Science. Director M.Sc. in Technology Management. Vice-Rector for innovation and Technology Transfer (University of Talca). Ph.D. in Technology Management and Marketing of Innovation from University of Quebec (Canada). He has a M.Sc. in Environment of University of Montreal (Canada). He has two post-doctoral in Technology Innovation Clusters from University of Quebec (Canada) and in Knowledge and Technology Innovation in Natural Resources Industries from University Adolfo Ibañez (Chile). His research projects focus on biotechnology, nanotechnology and bio materials management, technological innovation, clusters, knowledge in natural resources and public policies. He is professor of technology and innovation management at the University Talca (Chile) and consultant for World Bank, United Nations, IDRC, Statistics Canada and many multinationals firms. Honors: “Who’s Who in the World”, “Top 100 Scientists 2011” International Biographical Centre, Cambridge, England. “2000 Outstanding Intellectuals of the 21st Century – 2011”. International Biographical Centre, Cambridge, England. “Bright Minds - Brain World Class”. One of the 10’s most influential researchers of Chile in Economics and Management (according to international citation index ISI).

Jingyuan Zhao is a research fellow at University of Toronto, Canada. She was a professor at Beijing Union University (China). She obtained her PhD in Management Science and Engineering from University of Science and Technology of China (China) and completed a postdoctoral program in Management of Technology from University of Quebec at Montreal (Canada). Dr. Zhao’s expertise is on regional innovation system, high-tech industry cluster, knowledge management, technology diffusion, organizational learning.

Neeta Baporikar is currently Director/Professor (Business Management) at Harold Pupkewitz Graduate School of Business (HP-GSB), Namibia University of
About the Contributors

Science and Technology, Namibia. Prior to this she was Head-Scientific Research, with Ministry of Higher Education CAS-Salah, Sultanate of Oman, Professor (Strategic Management and Entrepreneurship) at IIIT Pune and BITS India. With more than a decade of experience in industry, consultancy and training, she made a lateral switch to research and academics in 1995. Dr. Baporikar holds D.Sc. (Management Studies) USA, PhD in Management, University of Pune INDIA with MBA (Distinction) and Law (Hons.) degrees. Apart from this, she is also an External Reviewer, Oman Academic Accreditation Authority, Accredited Management Teacher, Qualified Trainer, Doctoral Guide and Board Member of Academics and Advisory Committee in accredited B-Schools. Reviewer for international journals, she has to her credit 5 conferred doctorates, several refereed research papers, and authored books in the area of Entrepreneurship, Strategy, Management and Higher Education.

Catherine Beaudry, Rhodes Scholar, has a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Oxford where she also obtained an M.Phil. in economics. From her first degree in electrical engineering specialised in satellite technology, she has kept a strong interest on technology, science and innovation. She is a professor at the Mathematics and Industrial Engineering Department of Polytechnique Montréal where she also holds a Tier I Canada Research Chair on the Creation, development and commercialisation of innovation. Her current research focuses on open innovation in high technology industries, on the impact of university-funded research as well as on the commercialisation of nanotechnology. In addition, her main research interests are the analysis of innovation networks, collaboration, partnerships and alliances, industrial clusters, and how they influence innovative firm performance and survival. As such, she is interested in the interaction between clusters, regional systems of innovation and networks. Her expertise is the economics of science, technology and innovation using applied econometrics for its analysis.

Mauricio Poblete Bustamante, M.Sc., is Adjunct Researcher and Technology Manager at Centro de Biotecnologia de los Recursos Naturales, Departamento de Ciencias Forestales, Universidad Catolica del Maule. He graduated from the Medical Technology Program of the Universidad de Talca, and holds a Master Degree in Technology Management as well as a Master Degree in Horticulture from the same university. For more than 15 years he has been studying the productive sectors and university-firms-state relations in the Maule Region, specially, biotechnology tools and applications in the berries sector.

Dilek Cetindamar is a Professor, School of Management, Sabanci University. She received her BS degree from the Industrial Engineering Department and her MA degree from the Economics Department at Boğaziçi University, then completed her PhD degree at the Management Department of Istanbul Technical University. As visiting professor, she has been at Case Western Reserve University (US), Portland State University (US), Chalmers University of Technology (Sweden), University of Cambridge (UK), and MIT (US). She participated in many international projects and has more than 90 publications, including 36 papers published in various international journals. She received an ‘Encouragement Award’ from Turkish Academy of Sciences in 2003. Her main interest and research topics are Entrepreneurship and Technology Management.

Marina Frangioni began her career nearly 20 years ago, as advisor to major aerospace companies in France. In 1998 she continued her career in Quebec, first with the Government of Quebec on the international stage for the information technology sector and in the private sector with the development of the first industrial cluster in Quebec: InVivo. In 2002, she continued her career in Toronto; she founded his consulting group and is consultant to several economic development organizations. In 2004, Marina was recruited by the City of Montreal and will handle special projects which more specifically Montreal Technopole which aims to develop scientific and technological entrepreneurship in Montreal. Marina has received several grants and awards, including Provigo Excellence Award and the Excellence Award of the Foundation of the University of Sherbrooke, and is recognized as a high quality speaker in Quebec and the ‘foreign. Marina is now assistant Professor at the William Shool of Business at Bishop’s University. She teaches Entrepreneurship, Innovation Management and Business Management. She is also affiliated with several research centers including: CIRANO and HEC-MOSAIC. She holds a Doctorate in Business Administration from Université de Sherbrooke.

Jingyan Fu, PhD, professor of Economics College in Jinan University, China. The research interest is international trade, industrial regulation and sustainable development.

Petr Hanel, PhD and MEng., is Professor emeritus of Economics at the Université de Sherbrooke and emeritus researcher of the Centre interuniversitaire de recherche sur la science et technologie (CIRST) in Montreal, Canada. He is the co-author with John R. Baldwin of Statistics Canada of “Innovation and Knowledge Creation in an Open Economy”, published by Cambridge University Press, 2003, 2007. He published numerous articles, studies and technical reports dealing with economic aspects of technological change, industrial, regional and international economics, industrial and commercial policies and their evaluation. Professor Hanel consulted the World Bank, Canadian International Development Agency, USAID, Statistics Canada, Industry Canada and other organizations. He served as a personal consultant to the
About the Contributors

Czech Minister of Economy in 1994 and 1996. Lately, his main research interest has been the diffusion of biotechnology in emerging countries, especially in China.

Jie He is full professor of Economics at University of Sherbrooke, Quebec, Canada. She received her degree of Bachelor from University of Sun Yat-sen, and her master and Ph.D from CERDI (Centre des Études et des Recherches sur le Developpement International), Université d’Auvergne in France. Before taking the professor position in University of Sherbrooke, she worked as consultant for World Bank and participated project management with United Nation Environment Programme (UNEP). She was an invited researcher of Katholic University of Leuven in Belgium (2006-2007) and visiting professor in Hong Kong Polytechnic University (2008-2009) and University of Sun Yat-sen (2012-2014). Since 2005, she published over 30 research papers on trade-environment relationship for China and on non-market valuation in well-ranked international academic journals.

Joël Levasseur is a Graduate in Industrial Engineering with a Master degree in Technology and Innovation management with over 7 years experience in different fields as research, innovation, process improvement, logistic and project management.

Jorge Niosi is Professor in the Department of Management and Technology at the Université du Québec à Montréal since 1970. He received his doctorate at the Ecole pratique des hautes études in Paris in 1973. He is the author, co-author, editor or co-editor of 15 books, as well as some 60 articles in refereed journals including the Cambridge Journal of Economics, Industrial and Corporate Change, Journal of Business Research, Journal of Development Studies, Journal of Evolutionary Economics, Journal of Technology Transfer, Management International Review, Research Policy, R&D Management, Small Business Economics, Technovation and World Development. From 2014 to 2016 he was the president of the International Schumpeter Society, and in January 2016 he became an Emeritus Professor at the School of Management of the Université du Québec à Montréal.

Carolina Oliu is a professor and international innovation agent in the Institute of Innovation Based on Science from University of Talca, Chile. The expertise area is the strategy and technology management, particularity in high-tech, marketing of R&D, technology transfer and trading, public policy, and intellectual property.

Silvia Ponce, Ph.D., is Associate Professor at HEC Montreal, the Business School affiliated to University of Montreal. She holds a Degree in Chemistry (Licenciatura) from Facultad de Ciencias Quimicas y Farmaceuticas, Universidad de Chile, a Master Degree (M.Sc.A.) in Chemical Engineering from École Polytechnique,
About the Contributors

Montreal, and a Doctoral Degree (Ph.D.) in Business Administration from HEC Montreal. After an extensive experience in R&D (on fundamental and applied research of polymeric materials), she has been involved in research on innovation management, studying collaborative research (open innovation), in the context of manufacturing, knowledge-based services provided by R&D institutions, and high tech sectors (telecoms, biotech).

Johanne Queenton is an associate professor of strategy and director of Innovation Management Research Team at Université de Sherbrooke, since 2005. She holds a Ph.D in administration and an MSc in public management from Université du Québec à Montréal (Québec, Canada). In her doctoral thesis, she studied the Canadian biotechnology industry and more specifically the links between intellectual capital and SMEs performance. Her research and teaching interests include strategic management, innovation management, academic entrepreneurship, innovation audit, patenting behaviour, strategic alliances, innovation processes, product development, business models innovation, and open innovation in high-technology sectors. She has co-authored journal articles which appeared in International Journal of Management Studies, International Journal of Knowledge-based development, International Institute of Administrative Sciences and Academy of Management. Before her academic career, she held management positions in the hotel and catering industry for 15 years.

Rakhi Rashmi is Barrister England and Wales she is specialised in health policy, human rights, technology policy, IP and human rights. She is also business and Law lecturer at London School of Business and Finance, United Kingdom. Previously, she worked with CNRS GREDEG, France and different High commissions as consultant/ advisor. She has been trained at the WHO and United Nations University.

Susan E. Reid, Professor of Marketing, Williams School of Business, Bishop’s University, has research interests including front-end strategy for new product development and innovation, diffusion of innovation, technology and market vision, branding, networks, the modeling of decision-making in high-tech businesses and marketing history. She has published in refereed journals including: Journal of Product Innovation Management, Technological Forecasting and Social Change, R&D Management, World Development, Business History and International Journal of Technology Marketing. Recently, she co-authored the introductory chapter to a new Cambridge University Press text, “Nanotechnology and Development: What’s in it for Emerging Countries?” She has over 25 years of experience working and consulting for the biopharmaceutical, nanotechnology and aviation sectors.
About the Contributors

Marcia Villasana is part-time faculty at the School of Business, Social Sciences and Humanities, and part of the research group in Entrepreneurship and Leadership at EGADE Business School, both at Tecnológico de Monterrey. She holds a Ph.D. in Public Policy from the School of Government and Public Transformation at this same institution and a BA in Economics from Universidad Autónoma de Nuevo Leon (UANL). She has authored one book and collaborated in two book chapters, and published in international journals. Her research interests are entrepreneurship and innovation, university-industry interactions, and technology transfer.