About the Contributors

Abigail Bakke is an Assistant Professor of Technical Communication at Minnesota State University, Mankato.

Estee Beck is an assistant professor of technical and professional writing/digital humanities in the Department of English at The University of Texas at Arlington.

Kristine L. Blair is Professor of English and Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences at Youngstown State University. The author or co-author of numerous publications on gender and technology, the politics of distance learning, electronic portfolios, and feminist pedagogies, Blair currently serves as editor of both the international print journal Computers and Composition and its separate companion journal Computers and Composition Online. She is also a recipient of the Conference on College Composition and Communication’s Technology Innovator Award and the Computers and Composition Charles Moran Award for Distinguished Contributions to the Field.

Jonathan S. Carter is a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Nebraska. His research focus how emerging technologies, especially the digital, afford and constrain the rhetorical production of new politics and social identifies.

Maura R. Cherney is a current Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Communication at the University of Wisconsin – Milwaukee. Her research focuses mainly on communication technologies and interpersonal communication.

Andrew W. Cole received his PhD in Communication from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in 2014. He is currently a Communication Instructor at Waukesha County Technical College. His research focuses on communication and technology, particularly at intersections of health and education.

Rosalina Pisco Costa is a sociologist and assistant professor at the University of Évora, where she has been teaching social research methodologies for over fifteen years. She is also a researcher affiliated at the Research Centre for the Study of Population, Economy and Society (CEPESE, Portugal). She works mainly in the Sociology of the Family, Childhood, Everyday Life and Consumption Studies, while crosswise exploring different methodologies. Her current research interests cover family, gender and personal life; social time and ages of life; ritualization, memory and familiar aesthetic; everyday life, consumption and mobilities; history and institutionalization of Sociology in Portugal; ethics in social sciences; QDA software, qualitative, sensory and creative social research methodologies.

Daniel Cochece Davis is an Assistant Professor in Illinois State University’s School of Communication. His research focuses on the intersection of organizational, leadership and intercultural communication, especially those dimensions containing a neurological/physiological basis. He is coauthor of the upcoming “Communicate Bond Belong Theory” of human relationships in the journal of Communication Theory.

Samaa Gamie received her BA in English language and literature from the University of Alexandria, Egypt in 1995. She received her MA in Professional Writing from the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth in 2003 and her Ph.D. in English with concentration in Rhetoric and Composition from the University of Rhode Island in 2009. She is currently an Associate Professor of English at The Lincoln University, PA. She is also the Director of the Writing and Reading Center and the Assistant Director of the Writing Proficiency Program. She has published poems, reviews, and essays in AEE, EAPSU, MLS, JCW, and has book chapters published by IGI Global, Columbia University Press, and Syracuse University Press and has other forthcoming publications by NYU Press and IGI Global.

Jill R. Kavanaugh, MLIS, is a solo embedded Librarian at the Center on Media and Child Health, in the Division of Adolescent and Young Adult Medicine at Boston Children’s Hospital. Jill provides research support, assists in creating content for the Center’s various tools, co-authors papers and publications, and monitors research related to youth, media, technology, and health.

Shana Kopaczewski is currently an Assistant Professor at Indiana State University. She holds a PhD in Interpersonal Communication from the University of Iowa. Her research is centered mainly on intersections between interpersonal communication and new media, particularly online dating, stigma in online spaces, and discourses of the body in online environments.

Candice Lanius is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Communication and Media at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. As a data sociologist, she studies how big social data and ubiquitous data collection are changing daily life. She is co-chair of the Research Data Alliance’s interest group on Ethics and Social Aspects of Data and a member of the Big Data, Ethics, and Society Network.

Sarah Lefkowith is an American researcher and creative professional based in London. She holds an MSc (Distinction) in the Social Science of the Internet from the University of Oxford and a BA in Media, Technology, and Social Action from New York University’s Gallatin School of Individualized Study.

Bartlomiej A. Lenart, Ph.D., is a Lecturer in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Alberta. His research interests are at the intersection of Philosophy, Health Care Ethics, and Information Science. He is also currently pursuing an MLIS.

Lluïsa Llamero, PhD (ORCID number: 0000-0001-5150-3343), is an active member of the research group Digilab: Media, Strategy and Regulation, School of Communication and International Relations Blanquerna-Ramon Llull University. Her research focus are on the field of New Media reception, with a particular interest in the cognitive processes of credibility assessment. She is also exploring interdisciplinary dialogue in fields like health communication, economy and tourism. She collaborates with the research institute Incom-UAB (Autonomous University of Barcelona) and the Medical Anthropology Research Center-Universitat Rovira i Virgili.
About the Contributors

Alison Lukowski is an Assistant Professor of Rhetoric and Writing at Christian Brothers University in Memphis, TN. Her research interests include digital rhetoric, the history of rhetoric, and professional writing. She is currently developing a book manuscript about the rhetoric of revolution in new media discourse.

Sandra Metts is a professor emeritus in the School of Communication at Illinois State University, Normal, IL. She served as president of the Central States Communication Association and was recently inducted into the CSCA Hall of Fame. She has been the editor of Communication Reports and associate editor of Journal of Social and Personal Relationships. Her research interests include emotions in families and close relationships, face theory, and sexual communication. Recent publications include “The experience and expression of stepchildren’s emotions at critical events in stepfamily life” in the Journal of Divorce and Remarriage and “Logging on, hooking up: The changing nature of romantic relationship initiation and romantic relating” in Human bonding: The Science of Affectional Ties.

Alison N. Novak is an Assistant Professor of Public Relations and Advertising at Rowan University in Glassboro, New Jersey. She received her Ph.D. from Drexel University’s doctoral program in Com-unication, Culture, and Media. Her work explores youth engagement in digital media, online credibility, and political engagement. She is the author of “Millennials, Media, and Politics,” and the co-editor of “Defining Identity and the Changing Scope of Culture in the Digital Age.”

Nathan Rodriguez, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Sean R. Sadri, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor at Old Dominion University teaching courses in journalism and media studies. He is a California native who has attended UC Davis and Syracuse University as well as received a Doctorate of Philosophy in Mass Communication from the University of Florida.

Thomas A. Salek received his Ph.D. in Rhetoric and Public Culture from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. He is currently an Assistant Professor at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Erika M. Sparby is a PhD candidate in English at Northern Illinois University, specializing in digital, feminist, and visual rhetoric. In particular, she is interested in the rhetorical function of memes and trolling in digital spaces. Her dissertation examines how users create and maintain collective identities in digital social media spaces such as 4chan, Reddit, Facebook, and Twitter.