About the Contributors

Stephen Egharevba holds a (Ph.D) in Social policy/Criminology, University of Turku, Finland. He is a consultant and Research director at Cosconsult International. His research interest includes Policing, Minority rights, and the intersection of race in criminal justice system as well as cultural criminology and anti-discrimination law. He has published several articles and book chapters on immigrants and police relations, injustices, and inequality in the criminal justice systems. His current research explores newcomers’ perception of the legal authority in Finland.

***

Peter A. Barone, Esq., Ph.D., has been in law enforcement since 1975 at the city, county, state, federal and military levels. He is the Chair of a Criminal Justice Management and Pre Law Programs at Webber International University in Florida; a Researcher and Consultant in the area of Police Use of Force and Officer Involved Shootings. He has investigated and prosecuted hundreds of cases involving juveniles over his police career which encompasses five decades.

Kudakwashe Chirambwi is a lecturer in peace, leadership and conflict transformation. He trains police in alternative to violence, leadership and community policing. He is currently pursuing PhD in Peace Studies at the University of Bradford (UK).

Perpetual Crentsil is a (medical) anthropologist and a postdoctoral researcher at the Social and Cultural Anthropology, University of Helsinki, Finland. Her research interests include migration, diaspora and ethnicity, gambling and remittances among African migrants in Finland. She has also conducted extensive ethnographic research on HIV/AIDS in Ghana, reproductive health, medical systems, kinship, mobile technology, gender and health in Ghana.
About the Contributors

Kyrie Hernandez-Peterson is a criminal justice and forensic psychology BS & MS graduate from Trine University. Her research interest is in forensic psychology and she will be working towards her PsyD in the next year. She is married with 2 children and 4 stepchildren.

Erica Hutton is a Criminal Psychologist, Criminal Profiler, and Professor specializing in criminal and offender profiling, crime scene investigations, and psychological autopsies. She has worked on over 620 cases and obtains extensive knowledge and experience with studying the criminal mind and has provided assistance to law enforcement and prosecutors alike. She is known and respected for her groundbreaking development of profiling typologies for home-invasion offenders. Dr. Hutton is an author, practitioner, and researcher; she is published nationally as well as internationally. In addition, she and her associates have published several peer-reviewed journal articles and she is currently writing a textbook on forensic psychology.

Ekunwe Ikponwosa (Ph.D) is Post-Doctoral Researcher at University of Tampere. School of Social Sciences and Humanities. And Academy of Finland Post-Doc Research Fellow. He has researched, written, and lectured primarily on corrections, Convict Criminology, Critical Criminology, political crime, Policing multicultural society, violence and Criminal behavior. His current research is on immigrants’ perception of the legal authority in Finland.

Daniel Larsson is an associate professor at the Department of Sociology, Umeå University, Sweden. His research concerns labour market, poverty, white-collar crime and the self-employment. His work has e.g., been published in Critical Criminology, International Journal of Social Policy and Journal of European Social Policy. He and Tage Alalehto has recently recently published the article Measuring trust in the police by contextual and individual factors in International Journal of Law, Crime and Justice.

Usman Adekunle Ojedokun, PhD, is a lecturer at the Department of Sociology, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He specializes in Criminology. He has published many articles in the areas of policing, violence, child health, trafficking and transnational crimes in reputed international journals.
Ron Ousley completed his Master of Science in Criminal Justice degree, with a concentration in forensic science, at Trine University. Ron has a plethora of knowledge of the American Criminal Justice System from his past, and current, work experience; this experience includes law enforcement, corrections, and problem solving, courts, research, education, and investigations. He currently works as a leading investigator, professor of criminal justice, and coordinator of an adult drug treatment court, but is ultimately dedicated to the cause of forensic-related research and investigations.

Ulrika Schmauch is Senior lecturer (associate professor) at the Department of Sociology, Umeå University, Sweden. Her research concerns ethnic relations and critical race studies as well as urban sociology. Her work has been published in e.g. ACME: An International E-Journal for Critical Geographies and Gender, Place and Culture. She is currently working on a project regarding policies of co-creation in relation to the European Capital of Culture in Umeå 2014.

Demetra Fr. Sorvatzioti is an Assistant Professor in the Law Department of the University of Nicosia and has been practising law since 1990, in Greece and as of 2005 in the Cypriot jurisdiction. She is the Associate Chair of the Law Department and she holds a Ph.D. in Criminology. She heads the Cyprus Center for Law and Justice (C.C.L.J) and the Institute of Criminal Studies and Criminology at the University of Nicosia.

Nikolaos Stamatakis (Ph.D., Ph.D., M.Phil., LL.M., M.A., PG Dipl., B.A. Hons) is currently an Assistant Professor at the Institute for Criminology and Public Safety of the University of Trinidad & Tobago. Previously, he completed a post-doctoral research on police violence against youth in Brazil at the Centre for the Study of Violence - University of Sao Paolo. His research interests are mainly focused on restorative justice, juvenile delinquency, crime prevention and rehabilitation, institutional violence, and prison reform.
About the Contributors

Roberto J. Velasquez obtained his doctorate in counselling psychology from Arizona State University; master’s in counselling and consulting psychology from Harvard University; and bachelor’s degree in psychology from the University of California, Riverside. He completed a post-doctoral fellowship in survey methods at the University of Michigan. Dr. Velasquez is a retired faculty member in psychology from San Diego State University where he taught for 21 years and mentored hundreds of students into masters and doctoral programs. He has published over 100 research articles and book chapters and made hundreds of presentations at professional conferences. He is the co-editor of “The Handbook of Chicana and Chicano Psychology and Mental Health” (2004) and has served on several editorial boards for journals in the social sciences. He is currently completing a second master’s degree in criminal justice at New Mexico State University. He has a wealth of experience in treating persons who have been in prison, political and economic refugees, war veterans, and persons who are marginalized due to poverty and mental illness.