About the Contributors

Eris D. Schoburgh, is Associate Dean in Faculty of the Social Sciences and Senior Lecturer in the Department of Government, at The University of the West Indies, Mona Campus where she teaches courses in public and policy management at the undergraduate and graduate levels. She currently coordinates the Public and Policy Management Unit. Her general area of academic specialisation is public policy analysis and management with special focus on comparative subnational government/governance; subnational/local (economic) development. Current research interests are comparative public administration/policy/management, comparative local governance and local economic development, organisational change and development and public (policy) sector reform. She has twenty two (22) publications among which are two books and several journal articles that have appeared in leading international and regional journals.

Roberta Ryan is a leading social researcher and policy, program evaluation and stakeholder engagement practitioner with over 30 years’ experience in both the public and private sectors. With a strong interest in the relationship between people and places she has worked in and with local government in areas of community services, strategic planning, land use planning, sustainability, organisational change and development and citizen engagement. Roberta is the Director of the Institute for Public Policy and Governance (UTS:IPPG) and the UTS Centre for Local Government (UTS:CLG) at the University of Technology Sydney.

* * *

Christopher Boachie is a lecturer of Central Business School, Central University College in Ghana, an academic and a practising Chartered Accountant (ACCA-UK) with specialization in corporate finance, international trade, auditing, financial statement fraud and financial risk management. He was educated in Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology in Kumasi Ghana, Technical University of Freiberg in Germany and the London School of Accountancy (UK). He is currently reading his PhD at Open University of Malaysia. He has considerable, teaching, consulting and practical experience in the application of accountancy and finance theory and risk management.

Kareem Buyana is an associate lecturer at the Uganda Management Institute, Department of Public Administration. He is a sociologist with a PhD from the School of Humanities and Sciences, Stanford University California, USA. His recent publications have focused on gender inequality and climate change adaptation, urban governance, migratory lifestyles and resource management.
About the Contributors

Tinashe Carlton Chigwata is a post-doctoral fellow at the Multilevel Government Initiative (MLGI) of the Dullah Omar Institute for Constitutional Law, Governance and Human Rights; University of the Western Cape (South Africa). His research focus areas include federalism, decentralisation and peace building. He holds degrees from the universities of Zimbabwe and the Western Cape including the higher doctorate (Doctor of Public Law) from the University of the Western Cape. He also holds a Diploma in Federalism, Decentralisation and Conflict Resolution from the University of Fribourg (Switzerland).

Sean Connelly is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Geography at the University of Otago. His research interests are in sustainable community development, local food systems and rural and regional development.

Sonia D. Gatchair holds a PhD in Public Policy from the Georgia Institute of Technology with a specialization in economic development. She is interested in growth strategies and currently undertakes research on public management reforms, organizational innovation, and change. She also has a special interest in technology, innovation and entrepreneurial strategies to improve livelihood opportunities. Sonia has more than 15 years training and experience in production and operations management in the manufacturing sector.

Bligh Grant is Senior Lecturer at UTS Institute for Public Policy and Governance (UTS:IPPG). He holds a PhD and BA (Hons, Politics) from the University of New England. He is one of Australia’s best published local government scholars, co-authoring two recent books, Funding the Future (2013) and Councils in Cooperation (2012), both with Brian Dollery and Michael Kortt and has published articles in political studies, public policy, political economy, comparative politics, sociology, regional studies, gender studies and applied ethics as they relate to local government and regional governance in leading national and international journals. Bligh has also published in a range of other fields, including strategic management theory and leadership, business education and wine economics.

Nick Gray is a Doctoral Researcher and Research Associate at Newcastle Business School, Northumbria University UK. His research interests include local and regional development, subnational governance, labor markets and welfare reform. Nick is North East England chair of the Regional Studies Association and was previously a Policy Advisor in local government, specialising in economic analysis, social inclusion, and migration.

Enrico Guarini, PhD, is Assistant Professor of Business Administration and Management at the University of Milano-Bicocca, Italy. He also holds an ancillary position as Professor of Public Management & Policy at SDA Bocconi School of Management. He is Co-Chair of the Special Interest Group on Local Governance at the International Research Society for Public Management. His research interests include public financial management, fiscal transparency and accountability, public management, local government and governance.

Jenny Hodgson has been the executive director of the Global Fund for Community Foundations (GFCF) since 2006 when the Fund was first a pilot project. She has overseen the development of the organisation from its inception as a pilot project to a fully-fledged global grantmaking fund which has disbursed over U.S. $3.6 million in grants to more than 160 community philanthropy organisations in over...
About the Contributors

Jenny has worked in the field of philanthropy and development in Uganda, Russia, Kenya, Singapore and Thailand. Jenny has a BA (Hons) in English from Emmanuel College, Cambridge and an MA in International Relations (African Studies) from Johns Hopkins School Advanced International Studies (SAIS). She is based in Johannesburg, South Africa and is on the board of WINGS (Worldwide Initiative on Grantmaker Support), the African Philanthropy Network, and Enset, a U.S.-based NGO that seeks to develop and promote a transparent, accountable and connected online global community of NGOs.

Tony Jackson has wide experience in academia and practice in planning and development issues, both within developed and developing countries. Extensive publications on fiscal resource equalisation and project appraisal.

Daniel Klimovský is assistant professor at the Comenius University in Bratislava, Slovakia. He deals with sub-national governance and he has already been involved in several international research projects (e.g. nowadays, he is involved in the COST IS 1207 “LocRef”, as well as POLLEADER). He is author or co-author of more than 100 publications and scientific papers which have been published in eleven different languages.

Barry Knight is a social scientist who has worked for Cambridge University, the British Government and a range of nonprofit organisations. Currently, he is the Director of the Webb Memorial Trust and an Adviser to the Global Fund for Community Foundations.

Alex Lawrie is an urban planner with a major in demographics and an emerging leader in the fields of urban planning, public policy design, analysis and evaluation, and stakeholder and community engagement. He is a highly skilled researcher with a strong ability to identify strategic linkages between policy and program needs, activities, outputs and outcomes. Alex has particular research interests in urban governance and the governance of metropolitan regions, urban renewal and regeneration, and evidence-based policy and planning.

Shuaib Lwasa is an associate professor in urban geography and spatial planning. His recent work has been in the fields of climate change mitigation, adaptation of cities to climate change, urban environmental management, spatial planning, and disaster risk reduction, as well as urban sustainability.

Peter McKinlay has worked nationally and internationally over many years as a researcher and adviser on local governance and local government. He is both Executive Director of McKinlay Douglas Ltd (www.mdl.co.nz) and a Research Associate with the Institute of Governance and Policy Studies at Victoria University of Wellington leading the development of the Institute’s work on local governance. He has worked extensively in Australia, including NSW, Victoria and South Australia. This has included advising a number of NSW councils throughout the current reform process, and undertaking a major report for the NSW Independent Local Government Review Panel on options for sub-Council governance. He is a member of the Research Advisory Group of the Commonwealth Local Government Forum, and an active contributor to CLGF’s work.
About the Contributors

Beáta Mikušová Meričková is professor of public economics and services at the Faculty of Economics, Matej Bel University in Banská Bystrica, Slovakia. She has focused her research activities in the areas of public sector, public finances and new approaches to the provision of public services. These activities are documented by several monographs, many research studies and articles published in current academic journals and conference proceedings at home and abroad. In addition, her research activities include cooperation in projects of international and national significance.

Keith Miller is a former Town Clerk of the Kingston and St. Andrew Cooperation and served as a director of economic development at the Social Development Commission. He worked in managerial positions in the public and private sector before becoming a full time consultant on local government reform in the Ministry of Local Government and Community Development in Jamaica.

Etienne Nel is a Professor in the Geography Department at the University of Otago. His research interests lie in the areas of regional and local development and urban geography and he undertakes research work in Southern Africa and Australasia.

Juraj Nemec is professor of public finance and public management at the Faculty of Economics and Administration, Masaryk University in Brno, Czech Republic and at the Faculty of Economics, Matej Bel University Banska Bystrica, Slovakia. He published as author, co-author or editor more than 400 books and articles. He is editor in chief of the NISPAcee Journal in Public Administration and Public Policy, serves as the vice-president of IRSPM and of IASIA.

Anna Francesca Pattaro, PhD, is Assistant Professor of Business Administration and Management at the Department of Economics “Marco Biagi” of the University of Modena and Reggio Emilia, where she teaches Public Sector Management. She has been Marie Curie Research Fellow for “European Doctoral School on Knowledge and Management” (EUDOKMA) at Department of Business Studies of Uppsala University (Sweden) and Visiting Scholar at Public Management Institute (Instituut voor de Overheid) of the Katholieke Universiteit of Leuven (Belgium). Her research interests include local government management and governance, public financial management, fiscal transparency, public management, inter-governmental & inter-organizational collaborations for public services delivery, ICTs contribution to public management and eGovernance.

Abraham Allec Londoño Pineda – Economist - Universidad Nacional de Colombia, Medellín. MBA- Universidad de Medellín, Colombia. PhD Student Sustainable Development- Universidad de Manizales. Full time teacher and Coordinador of the International Relations and Business Group School as Economic and Administrartive Sciences- Universidad de Medellín, Colombia.
Lee Pugalis is Professor of Urban Studies at the Institute for Public Policy and Governance, University of Technology Sydney. His research interests include entrepreneurial governance and regional development, to which he has published widely. Lee is an expert advisor to the Assembly of European Regions, a World Social Science Fellow and an editor of several journals including Local Economy and Regional Studies, Regional Science.

Brid Quinn works at the Department of Politics & Public Administration in the University of Limerick. She specialises in Irish and European local governance, EU territorial policy and administrative reform. She has carried out consultancy work on local governance in Ireland and many European countries.

Muhammad Sayadur Rahman is an associate professor in Public Administration at Jahangirnagar University, Savar, Dhaka, Bangladesh. He earns his higher studies from Jahangirnagar University and the University of Heidelberg, Germany. His professional career began as a lecturer of BUET, Dhaka and he has also held visiting positions in several private universities. He also worked as program coordinator at World Health Organization (WHO). During more than twelve years of involvement in academic and research work, he has been written several research reports, project papers and research articles which have been published in different refereed national and international journals including Administrative Studies, Public Organization Review, Dynamics of Public Administration, Asian Journal of Political Science and Commonwealth Journal of Local Governance. His research interests center on politics-bureaucracy relations, local governance and development, environmental governance and public health. He is serving as the Editor of the Jahangirnagar Journal of Administrative Studies, ISSN-1999-5946. His doctoral training at the University of Heidelberg enriched with his subsequent research on local politics and comparative public administration in regional as well as global perspectives.

P. S. Reddy is a Senior Professor and local government specialist at the University of Kwazulu Natal in South Africa. He is the Project Director of the Working Group on Sub – national Governance and Development of the International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA) (Brussels). He also serves on the Board of Management representing the African Region. Prof Reddy is also an Alternate Associate Board member of the Commonwealth Local Government Forum (CLGF) (London) representing universities and research organisations. He is the editor/co-editor of nine books focusing on local governance and development and currently serves on the editorial/advisory committee of five journals in South Africa, United States, India and United Kingdom/Australia. He is a rated researcher with the National Research Foundation in South Africa and previously served on one of its specialist committee representing the Discipline of Public Administration. In 2014, he received the Donald Stone Award for being “A Distinguished International Scholar/Practitioner” and for his “Contribution Towards Advancing the Wellbeing of IASIA”.

Oscar Alonso Vélez Rojas, Professional in Educación, Pedagogy and Human Studies, Universidad Pontificia Bolivariana, Medellín. Specialist in ICT for education, MSc in Engineering- Universidad EAFIT, Colombia. PhD Student Sustainable Development-,Universidad de Manizales. Full time teacher International Business - Universidad de Medellín, Colombia.

Ciro Alfonso Serna, Economist, Specialist in population and sustainable development- Universidad de Chile CEPAL. MSc in Social and Education development. PhD in Education- Universidad de la Habana, Cuba. Postdoctoral studies in Environmental Education -Instituto Politécnico Nacional, México. Postdoctoral studies in the Philosophy of Sciences and Sustainability -Universidad Autónoma Nacional de México, UNAM. Director of the PhD program in Sustainable Development – Universidad de Manizales.

Mária Murray Svidroňová is assistant professor at the Faculty of Economics, Matej Bel University in Banská Bystrica, Slovakia. She does both teaching and research activities with focus on non-profit and non-governmental organizations, public services and social innovations. She is author of several dozens of publications and scientific papers and she has already taken part in several international projects. She also works part-time as a project manager and lecturer in several educational NGOs in Slovakia.

Su Fei Tan is a Senior Research Officer with the UTS Institute for Public Policy and Governance. A committed and hardworking professional with more than 10 years’ experience of research and capacity building for local government, Su Fei’s areas of interest and expertise include local democracy and representation, environmental sustainability, strategic planning, and supporting local government in developing countries. These are complemented by a wide range of skills and experience in project management, editing and research.

Ndwakhulu Tshishonga holds a BA (Hons) in Development Studies (UNISA); an MA in Applied Anthropology (Goldsmith College, University of London), MM in Public Development and Management (WITS) and MPA-Public Administration (UWC). His interests are in citizenship and local government and local governance, intergovernmental relations, etc. His teaching interests range from alternative models of development, project management and development planning to micro level strategies in economic community development and co-operatives. His current research is on intergenerational poverty, inclusive and exclusive citizenship and local governance as well as youth development. Ndwakhulu was awarded the Golden Key Award by The University of the Western Cape. His research output entails scholarly conference presentations and publication in journals such as Journal of Public Administration, Agenda, African Journal of Public Affairs, etc. He enjoys reading current affairs, watching historical documents, the outdoors and learning new approaches development. He is passionate about finding ways of alleviating poverty of the mind (education) among the urban youth. He is currently the Lecturer and Post-Graduate Coordinator in Community Development Programme within the School of Built Environment & Development Studies.

Ronald Woods is a lecturer and course coordinator at the Centre for Local Government, part of the Institute for Public Policy and Governance, University of Technology Sydney (UTS:IPPG). With a background in social work, social policy and public administration, he has a particular interest in the intersection of practice, theory and research. He has substantial experience in adult and higher education, including curriculum design, delivery, mentoring, supervision and assessment; social research, including research design and methodology, literature review, qualitative data gathering and analysis, writing and peer review; and local government, including workforce training and development, and the theory and practice of decentralisation and subnational governance. He has written and published in all of these areas of interest.