About the Contributors

Yasmin Ibrahim a Reader in International Business and Communications at Queen Mary, University of London. She researches on new media technologies exploring the cultural dimensions and social implications in the appropriation of ICTs in different contexts and has written on a diverse range of issues which affect humanity and society through our everyday interactions. Her forthcoming book on The Politics of Gaze; Image Capture and Consumption on Digital Media with Intellect examines human vulnerabilities in the digital age when the body embedded with mobile technologies is burdened through new forms of subjectivity where it becomes part data and part content. Beyond new media and digital technologies she writes on political communication and political mobilisation from cultural perspectives. Her other research interests include globalization, migration, Islam, visual culture and memory studies. She is a visiting professor at MYRA School of Business in Mysore, India.

***

Mark Beech, full-time student, part-time teacher and sometime unemployed career politician. He is known to be something of a wordpress mangler and a camera wrangler. He is also a radio ham, a collector of uranium glassware, quite a slow runner, and a connoisseur of fine ales.

Marija Bekafigo is a political scientist at Northern Arizona University. Her publications can be found in Social Science History, Social Science Computer Review, and Comparative Political Studies.

Jonathan Bishop is an information technology executive, researcher and writer. He founded the Centre for Research into Online Communities and E-Learning Systems in 2005, now part of the Crocels Community Media Group. Jonathan’s research and development work generally falls within human-computer interaction. He has over 75 publications in this area, including on Internet trolling, cyber-stalking, gamification, cyberlaw, multimedia forensics, Classroom 2.0 and Digital Teens. In addition to his BSc(Hons) in Multimedia Studies and various postgraduate degrees, including in law, economics and computing, Jonathan serves in local government as a councillor, and has been a school governor and contested numerous elections, including to the UK Parliament and Welsh Assembly. He is a fellow of BCS, CILIP, the InstAM, the RAI, the RSS and the RSA, senior member of IEEE and a member of the IMarEST with MarTech. Jonathan has won prizes for his literary skills and been a finalist in national and local competitions for his environmental, community and equality work, which often form part of action research studies. In his spare time Jonathan enjoys listening to music, swimming and chess.
Aileen Blaney is Faculty at Srishti Institute of Art, Design and Technology, India, where she is Course Leader in the MA in Screen Studies. She has published in the areas of film and photography studies, and is co-editor of Photography in India: from Archives to Contemporary Practice (2017).

Michael S. Bruner earned his Ph.D. in Rhetoric and Communication from the University of Pittsburgh. His current research is on public discourse about food issues. He is co-editor of The Rhetoric of Food (Routledge, 2012) and a contributor to the new SAGE Encyclopedia of Food Issues. His recent journal articles have appeared in M/C Journal and Communication and Critical/Cultural Studies.

Berenice Ceja is an alumna of Humboldt State University, currently working in Southern California. As a Research Fellow, her expertise is in Feminism and Social Media.

Francis Dalisay (PhD, Washington State University) is an Assistant Professor at the Communication and Fine Arts program of the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences at the University of Guam. His research interests include international and intercultural communication issues in the Pacific Islands.

Kerill Dunne is an unaffiliated, independent researcher. He received his PhD from the University of Surrey in 2008. His PhD examined the ability of online forums to reverse political disengagement. His primary areas of research are E-Democracy and E-Participation.

Christopher Holmberg is a PhD candidate in Food and Nutrition at the University of Gothenburg, with a focus on online food communication utilizing an epidemiological and health promotion perspective. Mr. Holmberg has an interdisciplinary background with an MSc in Public administration, and he is also a registered psychiatric-mental health nurse (PMHN). Christopher has worked as a ward manager overseeing an acute psychiatric ward, and was previously a consultant for the World Health Organization department of Mental Health Policy and Service Development. Christopher is also a former research fellow at the National Center of Neurology and Psychiatry (NCNP) in Japan and is a member of Japan Society for the promotion of Science (JSPS), the European Association for the Study of Obesity (EASO), and International Society of Behavioral Nutrition and Physical Activity (ISBNPA).

Anita Howarth is a senior lecturer at Brunel University and researches on politics, communication and social issues. Her research focus is media interventions in policy and her concern is to investigate how and why the media legitimize or challenge, resist or disrupt policy. She has published on food poverty and food banks, migration and refugees as well as environmental and health risks.

Joanna Kulesza, PhD, is a professor of international law and Internet governance at the University of Lodz, Poland and an expert on human rights online for the Council of Europe and European Commission, most recently working in Ukraine and Moldova. She is also an expert for the Sino-European Cybersecurity Dialogue (SECD) and serves as Membership Committee Chair for the Global Internet Governance Academic Network (GigaNet). Her most recent publication on “Due Diligence in International Law” (BRILL 2016) follows five other monographs and over 50 peer-reviewed papers on international law and Internet governance. She has been a visiting professor with the Oxford Internet Institute, Oslo University, Justus-Liebig-Universität Gießen, and Westfälische Wilhelms Universität Münster. Kulesza was also a visiting researcher with the University of Cambridge and Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München as well as a scholar of the Robert Bosch Stiftung, Polish Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Foundation for Polish Science. She often engages with various NGOs working on cybersecurity and human rights.

Matthew J. Kushin (Ph.D Washington State University) is an Associate Professor in the Department of Communication at Shepherd University. His research focuses on social media, politics, and civic life.

Sergei Medvedev is a PhD candidate in Media Studies at Dublin Institute of Technology, Ireland. He authored peer-reviewed articles and book chapters on Transmedia Storytelling in Politics and Advertising. His research interests are in the areas of Transmedia Storytelling, E-Politics, Digital Advertising and Science Promotion.

Allison Pingley got her Ph.D. from the University of Florida and is an associate professor of political science at University of South Carolina Upstate. Her focus is on American politics, and specifically U.S. campaigns and elections, voting behavior, and media and politics.

Mahesh S. Raisinghani is currently a Professor in the Executive MBA program at the TWU School of Management. Dr. Raisinghani was awarded the 2016 Fulbright Award, the 2015 Distinction in Distance Education award, the 2008 Excellence in Research & Scholarship award and the 2007 G. Ann Uhrlir Endowed Fellowship in Higher Education Administration. He has edited eight books and he has published over hundred manuscripts in peer reviewed journals, conferences, and book series and has consulted for a variety of public and private organizations on IT management and applications. Dr. Raisinghani serves as the Editor in Chief of the International Journal of Web based Learning and Teaching Technologies; on the board of Global IT Management Association; and as an advisory board member of the World Affairs Council. He is included in the millennium edition of Who’s Who in the World, Who’s Who among Professionals, Who’s Who among America’s Teachers and Who’s Who in Information Technology.

Renira Rampazzo Gambarato is Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Communications, Media and Design at the National Research University Higher School of Economics, in Moscow, Russia. Her Post-doctorate in Film Studies is from Concordia University, Canada and she holds a PhD in Communication and Semiotics from Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo, Brazil; a MA in Communication and Semiotics also from Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo and a BA in Industrial Design from São Paulo State University, Brazil.

Pierlugi Rippa is Assistant Professor in the School of Managerial Engineering at Federico II University of Naples, Italy. He received his PhD in Business Management at the Engineering Faculty of the Federico II. He spent a period as Visiting Researcher at California State University, Chico, USA and at Wayne State University, Michigan. His research interests include information system management, ERP systems, Knowledge Management Systems, Innovation. He is author of papers published in international journals and presented at international conferences, and he received two awards for best paper in two different international conferences. He has been president for 2014 of the Global Information and Technology Management Association.

Rodrigo Sandoval-Almazan is Professor of the Political and Social Sciences School of the Autonomous University of the State of Mexico (UAEM) in Toluca, México. He has been professor of the Graduate School of Public Administration (EGAP) and Business Administration (EGADE) of the Institute of Technology and Superior Studies of Monterrey (ITESM), Campus Estado de Mexico He is a member of the National Researchers System Level 2. He has authored or coauthored more than 40 research papers. In 2013 he won the 2nd Latin American Award for Public Administration (INAP). Former Editor of the Academic Journal RECAI (Journal of Studies on Accounting, Management and Informatics) 2011-2014 sponsored by the UAEM. Dr. Sandoval Almazan is a member of NovaGob and some editorial boards e-government journals. His research interests include e-government, public innovation, information technology organizations, social networks in government and digital divide.

Karissa Valine is an alumna of Humboldt State University, currently working in the Seattle area. As a Research Fellow, her expertise is on Gender and Communication.

Aimée Vega Montiel is a Researcher at the National Autonomous University of Mexico, Center for Interdisciplinary Research in Sciences and Humanities. She is an expert on Gender, Media and ICTs.

Wairagala Wakabi is a long-time a practitioner in the field of ICT4D in East Africa, and completed his PhD in informatics at Örebro University. Wakabi’s research interests include ICT and citizen participation in Africa, the use of new media in authoritarian regimes, securing ICT use for at-risk communities, and open governance. He works with the Collaboration on International ICT Policy for East and Southern Africa (CIPESA, www.cipesa.org) which is based in Kampala, Uganda.

Masahiro Yamamoto (PhD, Washington State University) is an assistant professor in the Department of Communication at the University at Albany, State University of New York. His research interests include communication in community contexts, civic and political participation, and social media.