About the Authors

Felix B. Tan is a Senior Lecturer in Information Systems at The University of Auckland, New Zealand. He serves as the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Global Information Management. He is also the Vice President of Research for the Information Resources Management Association and the Editor of the ISWorld Net’s EndNote Resources page. He has held visiting positions with the Department of Information Systems at the National University of Singapore and the Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario. Dr. Tan’s current research interests are in business-IT alignment, electronic commerce, global information management, management of IT, national information policy issues and cognitive mapping methods. His research has been published in MIS Quarterly, the Journal of Global Information Management, the Journal of Information Technology as well as other journals and refereed conference proceedings. Dr. Tan has over 20 years experience in information systems management and consulting with large multinationals, as well as University teaching and research in Singapore, Canada and New Zealand.

* * *

Ana R. del Águila is a Lecturer on Management in the Faculty of Economics and Business at the University of Malaga (Spain). Her main research interests are IT and Management, e-business, and Internet-based electronic commerce. She has published articles in Technovation, Facilities, Internet Research and in the International Journal of Business and Economics and has several articles and books published in Spanish. She has been a Visiting Lecturer in Venezuela, Cuba, and México, and a Visiting Researcher in the United Kingdom. Here-mail address is anarosa@uma.es.

Davood Askarany is currently working as a Management Accounting Consultant and undertaking research at University of South Australia. Davood was former Lecturer of Accounting at the University of Isfahan and former Head of Auditing Department of the biggest Silo builder (Tosehe Silooha) in Iran. His current research project is about diffusion of cost and management accounting innovations. His research interests are in diffusion, innovation, advanced techniques, and, recently, developed cost and management accounting practices.
Sebastián Bruque is an Associate Professor in Business Administration in technological firms. He is currently working at the Department of Business Administration, Accountability and Sociology at the University of Jaen (Spain). His main research interests are IT use and competitive advantage, IT productivity paradox and cultural differences impact on IT management. He has published articles in the International Journal of Information Technology, the Journal of High Technology Management Research, Technovation, Facilities and the Internet Research Journal. He has been a Visitor Researcher at the Nijmegen School of Management in the Netherlands. His e-mail address is sbruque@ujaen.es.

Peter Carr is Director of Athabasca University’s Centre for Innovative Management, its post-graduate business school, which is home to the world’s first online MBA — now educating 25% of Canada’s part-time MBA students. In September 1999, he managed the development and launch of the online MBA in Information Technology Management, Canada’s largest in that field. He leads the research team that conducts the annual Canadian Survey of Information Technology Management, supported by CIO Canada magazine. Peter recently commenced work on the construction a $2.5m online research laboratory that will study online supply chain collaboration.

Amira El Guindi is a graduate of Ain-Shams University in Egypt with a Bachelor of Arts in 1997. She also received an MBA in International Business from Maastricht School of Management in The Netherlands in 2001. Ms. El Guindi works for Coca-Cola Egypt. Her research interests relate to organizational development, multicultural teams conflicts and corporate culture, and she has published a number of articles in these research areas.

Roberto Evaristo is an Assistant Professor at the University of Illinois, Chicago, USA. He is currently involved in several projects related to the management of distributed projects in virtual organizations, with work done in Japan, the U.S., and Europe. He has published in outlets such as the Communications of the ACM, International Journal of Project Management, Database, Journal of Global Information Management, Journal of International Information Management, International Information Systems, and elsewhere.

Tom G. Gough is a Senior Fellow and a PhD Supervisor in the School of Computing at the University of Leeds, United Kingdom.

Carole E. Hill is a Professor Emeritus of Anthropology at Georgia State University, USA. Carole has published research in the areas of health care policy, health behavior, and cultural knowledge in Costa Rica, the U.S. South, and the Middle East. She holds a PhD from the University of Georgia and a post-doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley. She has published eight books and over 60 articles in journals such as American Anthropologist, Social Science and Medicine, Human Organization, and Anthropological Quarterly. She has served as President of the Society of Applied Anthropology.

M. Gordon Hunter is currently an Associate Professor in Information Systems in the Faculty of Management at the University of Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada. Gordon has previously held academic positions at universities in Canada, Hong Kong, and Singapore. He has held visiting positions at universities in Germany, U.S., and New Zealand. He has a Bachelor of Commerce degree from the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada. He received his doctorate from Strathclyde Business School, University of Strathclyde in Glasgow, Scotland. He is an Associate Editor of the Journal of Global Information Management. He serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Global Information Technology Management, and the Journal of Information Technology Cases and Application. He has conducted seminar presentations in Canada, U.S., Asia, New Zealand, Australia, and Europe. His current research interests relate to the productivity of systems analysts with emphasis upon the personnel component, including cross-cultural aspects, and the effective use of information systems by small business.

Lech J. Janczewski, MEng (Warsaw), MSc (Toronto), DEng (Warsaw), has over 30 years’ experience in Information Technology. He was the Managing Director of the largest IBM installation in Poland, and Project Manager of the first computing center in the Niger State of Nigeria. He is currently an Associate Professor at the Department of Management Science and Information Systems of the University of Auckland, New Zealand. His area of research includes management of IS resources, with special emphasis on data security and information systems investments in under-developed countries. Dr. Janczewski has published over 60 articles in scientific journals, conference proceedings, and chapters in books. He is the Chairperson of the New Zealand Information Security Forum, as well as a Fellow and National Counsellor of the New Zealand Computer Society.

Sherif Kamel is an Assistant Professor of Management Information Systems at the School of Business, Economics and Communication of the American University in Cairo and is currently the Associate Director of the Management Center of the university. He was the Director of the Regional IT Institute during the period 1992-2001. From 1987 to 1992, he worked at the Cabinet of Egypt Information and Decision Support Center, where he co-established and managed its training department. In 1996, he was one of the co-founding members of the Internet Society of Egypt. Dr. Kamel has published over 60 articles in IT transfer to developing countries, electronic commerce, human resources development, decision support applications, and knowledge management. He serves on the editorial and review boards of a number of information systems and management journals and is the Associate Editor of the Annals of Cases on Information Technology Applications and Management in Organizations. Dr. Kamel is currently the VP for Communications for the Information Resources Management Association (IRMA). He is a graduate of the London School of Economics and Political Science (UK) and the American University in Cairo (Egypt).

Elena Karahanna is an Associate Professor of MIS at the Terry College of Business, University of Georgia, USA. Her current research interests include the adoption, mandatory adoption, implementation, use, and infusion of information technologies, the effect of media choice and use on individuals and organizations, and cross-cultural issues. Her work has been published in Management Science, Organization Science, MIS Quarterly, Database, The Journal of Organizational Computing, Electronic Commerce, Information & Management, and elsewhere.

Abdulwahed Moh. Khalfan is an Assistant Professor in the Computing and Information Systems Department at the College of Business Studies in Kuwait. He holds a PhD in IS from the University of Leeds, UK. He has published numerous papers in leading IT journals as well as in international conferences. Dr. Khalfan has served as a reviewer for a number of journals. and prestigious IT conferences. He is also an IT consultant for a number of organizations in Kuwait. He has interests in IT outsourcing, e-commerce adoption, knowledge management, and IT strategic planning.

Chung S. Kim is a Professor in the Department of Computer Information Systems at Southwest Missouri State University, USA. She received her PhD in MIS from Texas Tech University. Her current research interests include system development methodologies, business reengineering, and cultural issues in system development practices. She has published in numerous journals, including Information & Management, Journal of Global Information Management, Journal of International Information Management, Journal of Computer Information Systems, Journal of Global Information Technology Management, and the International Journal of Information Management.

Karen D. Loch is an Associate Professor and Director of the Institute of International Business in the J. Mack Robinson College of Business at Georgia State University, USA, Karen’s current research interests span international IT studies, security and ethical concerns, and global e-commerce. She holds a Ph.D. in MIS from the University of Nebraska. Loch has published in journals such as Journal of Global Information Management, Communications of the ACM, MIS Quarterly, Information Systems Journal, Academy of Management Executive, Data Base, and Journal of Informatics and Education. She is a co-editor and contributor of Global Information Technology Education: Issues and Trends. She serves as Associate Editor for Journal of Global Information Management, The Journal of Global Information Technology Management, and as review board member for Information Resources Management Journal.

M. Lynne Markus is Professor (Chair) of Electronic Business at the City University of Hong Kong. She is on leave from the Peter F. Drucker Graduate School of Management, Claremont Graduate University, where she is Professor of Management and Information Science. Professor Markus’ research focuses on electronic commerce, enterprise systems integration, and knowledge management. She is the author of three books and numerous articles in journals such as MIS Quarterly, Management Science, Organization Science, Communications of the ACM, and Sloan Management Review. Markus holds a BS in Industrial Engineering from the University of Pittsburgh and a PhD in Organizational Behavior from Case Western Reserve University.

Victor W. A. Mbarika is Assistant Professor of Information Systems and Decision Sciences at the E. J. Ourso College of Business, Louisiana State University, USA. He holds a BS in Management Information Systems from the U.S. International University in Nairobi, an MS in MIS from the University of Illinois at Chicago, and a PhD in MIS from Auburn University. His research in Telecommunications Diffusion in Developing Countries and his research in Multimedia Learning has been published in several academic journals. He has also presented his research at several national and international conferences on Information Systems. He is author of one book: Africa’s Least Developed Countries’ Teledensity Problems and Strategies

Michael D. Myers is Professor of Information Systems in the Department of Management Science and Information Systems at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. He currently serves as Senior Editor of MIS Quarterly, Editor of the ISWorld Section on Qualitative Research, Editor of the University of Auckland Business Review, and Associate Editor of Information Systems Research. His research articles have been published in many journals and books. He won the Best Paper Award (with Heinz Klein) for the most outstanding paper published in MIS Quarterly in 1999.

Antonio Padilla is a Lecturer on Management and Management Control Systems in the Faculty of Economics and Business at the University of Malaga (Spain) and is the main researcher in an e-business research project. His main research interests are IT and Management, e-business, teleworking, and telecentres. He has published articles in Technovation, Facilities, Internet Research and in the International Journal of Business and Economics, and has several articles and books published in Spanish. He has been Visiting Lecturer in Venezuela, Cuba, and México, and Visiting Researcher in the United Kingdom. His e-mail address is apm@uma.es.

Dane K. Peterson is a Professor of Quantitative Business Analysis at Southwest Missouri State University, USA. He has a PhD in Quantitative and Applied Psychology from Southern Illinois University. His research interests include issues related to global information management and business and computer ethics. He has published in numerous journals, including the Journal of Applied Psychology, Journal of Global Information Management, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, International Journal of Information Management, and the Journal of Business Ethics.

Christina Soh is the Head of the IT and Operations Management Division and the Director of the Information Management Research Center in the Nanyang Business School, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. Her current research includes e-strategy, B-to-B marketplaces, and organizational fit and learning in the context of enterprise-wide package implementation. In the past ten years, she has consulted for both public and private sector organizations in Singapore and Malaysia in the areas of IT policy, IT use in government, IT investment and evaluation. She received her BAcc (Hons.) degree from the National University of Singapore, and a PhD in Management from the University of California, Los Angeles.

Mark Srite is an Assistant Professor of MIS at the University of Wisconsin — Milwaukee, USA. His current research interests include the acceptance, adoption, and use of information technologies, cross-cultural IT issues, and group decision-making. His work has been published in Decision Support Systems, The Journal of Global Information Management, and elsewhere.

Detmar Straub is the J. Mack Robinson Distinguished Professor of Information Systems at Georgia State University, Detmar has conducted research in the areas of Net-enhanced organizations, computer security, technological innovation, and international IT studies. He holds a DBA, in MIS from Indiana University and a PhD in English from the Pennsylvania State University. He has published over 100 papers in journals such as *Journal of Global Information Management, Management Science, Information Systems Research, MIS Quarterly, Organization Science, Communications of the ACM, Journal of MIS, Informa-
R. Subramaniam has a PhD in Physical Chemistry. He is an Assistant Professor at the National Institute of Education in Nanyang Technological University and Honorary Secretary of the Singapore National Academy of Science. His research interests are in the fields of physical chemistry, science education, theoretical cosmophysics, museum science, telecommunications, and transportation. He has published several research papers in international refereed journals.

Leo Tan Wee Hin has a PhD degree in Marine Biology. He holds the concurrent appointments of Director of the National Institute of Education, Professor of Biological Sciences in Nanyang Technological University, and President of the Singapore National Academy of Science. Prior to this, he was Director of the Singapore Science Centre. His research interests are in the fields of marine biology, science education, museum science, telecommunications, and transportation. He has published numerous research papers in international refereed journals.