Rocci Luppicini, PhD is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Ottawa in Canada. He is co author of the Handbook of Research on Technoethics (with Dr. R. Adell), the first comprehensive reference work in the English language. He has published in a number of other areas including virtual learning communities and practice (Quarterly Review Of Distance Education), research methodology on online instruction (Journal of Distance Education), issues in Higher Education, instructional design (Canadian Journal of Learning and Technology), and design research (International Journal of Technology and Design Education). Recent authored and edited books include, Online Learning Communities in Education (2007), the Handbook of Conversation Design For Instructional Applications (2008), and Trends in Educational Technology and Distance Education in Canada (2008).

Alison Anderson, PhD, is Professor in Sociology at the University of Plymouth, UK. Prior publications include Media, Culture and the Environment (University College London and Rutgers University Press, 1997). Her recent articles on journalistic portrayals of environmental risks, nanotechnologies, genetics and terrorism have appeared in Science Communication, Knowledge, Technology and Society, Genetics and Society and Health, Risk and Society.

Deb Gearhart, PhD, recently became the director of eCampus for Troy University. Previously Deb served as the founding Director of E-Education Services at Dakota State University in Madison, South Dakota and was there for the 11 years. Before joining Dakota State she spent 10 years with the Department of Distance Education at Penn State. Deb is an associate professor for educational technology at Dakota State University teaching at both the undergraduate and graduate levels.
She has co-authored a textbook entitled Designing and Developing Web-Based Instruction. Dr. Gearhart has earned a BA in Sociology from Indian University of Pennsylvania. She earned a M.Ed. in Adult Education with a distance education emphasis and an M.P.A. in Public Administration, both from Penn State. Deb completed her Ph.D. program in Education, with a certificate in distance education, from Capella University.

A. Pablo Iannone, PhD, is Professor of Philosophy at Central Connecticut State University, studied engineering, mathematics, philosophy and literature at the Universidad Nacional de Buenos Aires, received a B. A. in philosophy from U.C.L.A. and an M.A. and a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and pursued graduate studies in business and economics at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and Iowa State. He taught at Canada’s Dalhousie University, Perú’s Universidad Inca Garcilaso de la Vega, and the U.S. universities of Wisconsin-Madison, Texas at Dallas, Iowa State, and Florida. His publications include nine philosophy books, two literature books, and articles and reviews.

Mathias Klang, PhD, currently holds positions both at the University of Lund and the University of Göteborg. In Lund he is conducting a copyright research project aimed at developing the state of Open Access at university libraries in Sweden. In Göteborg Mathias conducts research in the field of legal informatics with particular interest in copyright, democracy, human rights, free expression, censorship, open access and ethics. He has published several articles in these topics.

Lorenzo Magnani, PhD, is a Professor in the Department of Philosophy and Computational Laboratory at the University of Pavia in Italy and the Department of Philosophy at Sun Yat-sen University in China.

Lynne Roberts, PhD, is a Research Fellow at the Crime Research Centre at the University of Western Australia. Lynne has conducted both quantitative and qualitative research in and about virtual communities. Based on this research she has had 13 journal articles and book chapters published on social interaction, relationship formation, sense of community and gender-switching online; and ethical and methodological issues in conducting research in virtual environments.

Neil C. Rowe, PhD, is Professor and Coordinator of Research in Computer Science at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School where he has been since 1983. He has a Ph.D. in Computer Science from Stanford University (1983), and E.E. (1978), S.M. (1978), and S.B. (1975) degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His main research interest is the role of deception in information processing, and he has also done research on intelligent access to multimedia databases, image processing, robotic path planning, and intelligent tutoring systems. He is the author of over 140 technical papers and a book.
Martin Ryder, M.A, is a development engineer for Sun Microsystems. He also serves on the adjunct faculty at the University of Colorado at Denver, teaching research methods in Information and Learning Technologies.

May Thorseth, PhD, Associate Professor at the Department of Philosophy, NTNU Norwegian University of Science and Technology. Director of Programme for Applied Ethics, NTNU. Main research field is political philosophy, ethics and argumentation theory in the context of globalisation and multicultural conflicts. Ongoing research project: “Worldwide Deliberation and Public Use of Reason Online”. Current member of the Regional Research Ethical Committee in Medicine in Mid-Norway, the National Research Ethical Committee in Medicine in Norway, and previous member of the Clinical Ethics Committee at St. Olavs Hospital, Trondheim.