About the Contributors

Miriam Delgado Verde is Assistant Professor of Business Administration at Universidad Complutense de Madrid, Spain. She was a Fellow at Manchester Institute of Innovation Research (Manchester Business School-University of Manchester) from 2008 to 2009. Also, Professor Delgado Verde has worked in several research projects and she is author and co-author of several papers, books, and book chapters on the Resource-Based View, Intellectual Capital, Technological Innovation and Knowledge Management, which have been published in international and national journals as well as editorial groups.

* * *

Salma Alguezaui has got a BA in business engineering from ‘Al Akhawayn University’ and a Master in e-business from the ‘e-business management School’, Scuola Superiore ISUFI, Universita’ del Salento. Actually, she is a PhD student and she is ending her research at ‘e-business management School’, Scuola Superiore ISUFI, Universita’ del Salento. She has published several papers in peer reviewed conferences and her research interests include social capital, knowledge management and innovation at industrial districts, regional and country level.

Pablo Blasco Bocigas is a professor of Business Economy at the Complutense University of Madrid. He received his Bachelor in Business Administration and Economic Science from the University of Zaragoza and his Master in Human Resource Management from ESIC Business School. Currently he is doing his PhD in Business Administration at the Complutense University of Madrid and his research interest is based on the analysis of the social capital impact on firms’ outcomes from the strategic management perspective. In addition he is combining this academic work with the domain of consultancy. He is working as a consultant in different organizational projects related to the business management.

Eduardo Bueno is Professor of business administration and the Chair of the Knowledge Management and Business Innovation Research Institute (IADE) at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. He received his Ph.D from Universidad Complutense de Madrid in economy. His current research focuses on knowledge and strategic management, intellectual capital and innovation management.

Yuan-Chieh Chang is associate professor, Institute of Technology Management, National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan. He earned a Ph.D. in Science and Technology Policy and Management, University of Manchester (2001), England and a MBA in management of technology at the Asian Institute of Technology (1996), Thailand. He was visiting scholar in Copenhagen Business School, Denmark (2006), Tsing
Hua University, China (2008), and Stanford University, the US (2008). Dr. Chang is Deputy General Secretary, Chinese Society for Management of Technology (CSMOT) in Taiwan. His current research interests are measuring intellectual capital, science and technology policy and R&D management. He serves editorial advisory boards of R&D Management and International Journal of Innovation Systems Management. He published papers in the journals of Research Policy, Regional Studies, Scientometrics, R&D Management, Research Technology Management, Technology in Society, and International Journal of Technology Management.

Hui-Ru Chi is a Ph.D. student in the Graduate institute of Human Resource Management at National Changhua University of Education in Taiwan. Her major is in the areas of technology management and organizational innovation management. She is also a lecturer in the Department of Finance at National Taichung Institute of Technology in Taiwan.

Jorge Cruz González got a degree in business management and is PhD candidate in business management at Universidad Complutense de Madrid (Spain). The author has participated in several research projects developed in the Department of Business Administration and funded by various public and private institutions. He is member of the research group about “Strategy, Knowledge and Innovation” in the firm (E.C.I.) at Universidad Complutense de Madrid. His main research topics are focused on the analysis of Dynamic Capabilities, Absorptive Capacity, Innovation Management and Organizational Adaptation through Learning. At these topics he has presented theoretical and empirical studies at national and international scientific conferences.

Charles (Kalev) Ehin is an Emeritus Professor of Management and former Dean of the Gore School of Business at Westminster College in Salt Lake City, Utah USA. He is a recognized authority on innovation dynamics having published three groundbreaking books on the subject. They include Unleashing Intellectual Capital (Butterworth-Heinemann, 2000), Hidden Assets: Harnessing the Power of Informal Networks (Springer, 2005) and his latest work The Organizational Sweet Spot: Engaging the Innovative Dynamics of Your Social Networks (Springer, 2009). Ehin is also the author of Aftermath (Publish America, 2004), which is a personal account of the origins and after effects of World War II in Europe. He received his undergraduate degree from Colgate University, his MBA from Syracuse University and his Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma. His e-mail address is kalev1@msn.com and his website is www.UnManagement.com.

Raffaele Filieri is the Research Fellow at Dipartimento di Sociologia e Comunicazione, Università degli Studi di Roma ‘La Sapienza’, Italia; and Kemmy Business School, University of Limerick, Limerick, Ireland. Her research interests include knowledge sharing, innovation, social networks, process reengineering, marketing intelligence, tourism management. Her previous studies and academic experience include being a visiting PhD at e-Business Management School - Scuola Superiore ISUFI, Universita’ del Salento 92005- 2008), as well as being a PhD student at Industrial Complex Systems PhD School (SICS) within the University of Roma ‘Roma 3’ (2005-2008), her PhD thesis defence, ‘Overcoming knowledge sharing barriers through communities of practice’ (January 2009) and a BA/MSC in Communication Studies at Faculty of Social Sciences. Previous (non academic) positions include consultant at Focus Management, Upper Saddle River, NJ: at Clio S.r.l., Lecce, Instructor at Lattanzio & Associati, Milano, and Project Manager, Cittadinanzattiva (n.g.o.).
About the Contributors

Bruce Heiman’s education includes an A.B. in psychology from Stanford (1981), an M.S. from Stanford (General Engineering, Product Design (1983), an M.B.A. from Universiteit Nijenrode (1990) and a PhD from UC Berkeley, Haas School of Business (2002). He has published eclectically in a substantial number of journals and conference proceedings. Research interests include transaction cost economics, problem finding and solving, and design thinking, He has worked previously as a faculty member at Universiteit Maastricht, NL, Faculty of Economics. Prof. Heiman has over 12 years experience working full time or consulting in strategic management, with an emphasis on innovation processes.

Janet Holland completed a Ph.D. in Teaching and Leadership, Instructional Design and Technology, with a minor in Communications from the University of Kansas. Dr. Holland currently serves as an Assistant Professor at Emporia State University, teaching pre-service teachers and master degree students of Instructional Design and Technology. Research interests include improving curriculum pedagogy issues including, service learning, affective learning communities, peer mentoring, and the globalization of instruction. As an instructional designer, new technologies are continually examined in an effort to inspire innovative teaching and learning practices. Dr. Holland’s goal is to create authentic, relevant, meaningful, engaging learning experiences.

Joe Holland has a Ph.D. degree in Nuclear Engineering (N.E.) from Texas A&M University and a M.S. (N.E.) and a B.S. (N.E.) from Kansas State University. Dr. Holland currently is the Chief Engineer and Scientist of Advatech Pacific, Inc. which is an aerospace oriented research, development and engineering services organization. Advatech Pacific’s current research areas range from advanced system engineering for space vehicles, launch systems, tactical communications systems and advanced structural analysis of non-isotropic materials. As Chief Engineer/Scientist, Dr. Holland is continually investigating new technologies, processes and tools, and more importantly finding and training personnel to use them.

Pia Hurmelinna-Laukkanen is a Professor of International Marketing (acting) at the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration at University of Oulu, a Senior Researcher in Business Law at School of Business, and a project manager at the Technology Business Research Center (TBRC) at Lappeenranta University of Technology (Finland). She has published her work in over 25 refereed articles in journals such as R&D Management, Technovation, and International Journal of Production Economics, over 70 conference papers, and in other scientific and managerial publications.

Carlos Kan is a Panamanian. He received his first degree in Electronic Engineering, Universidad Santa Maria La Antigua, Panama. Recently, he obtained MBA degree in Technology Management, College of Technology Management, National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan.

Amir Khanlari is PhD student of Marketing Management in the management faculty of University of Tehran. He received a master degree in information technology management. His research interests include customer relationship management, knowledge management, and business intelligence. He has published his papers in the Journal of Computers and Industrial Engineering, Iranian Journal of Accounting & Auditing Review and several local journals.
Mónica Longo is an adjunct professor of financial economy and accounting at Universidad Complutense de Madrid and researcher of IADE at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. She is studying for a PhD in Business Administration at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. Her current research interests include organizational identity, knowledge management and strategic management.

Masahiro Nakagawa graduated from Kyoto University with a bachelor’s degree in science. He received his Ph. D. (industrial engineering and management) from Tokyo Institute of Technology. Nakagawa joined Sumitomo Electric Industries, Ltd. (SEI) and spent a quarter century there. He conducted research and development in manufacturing process on compound semiconductor materials; engaged in management of technology in research and development unit, particularly evaluated profitability and marketability of R&D outcomes. He also started up a new business department from an R&D group. Nakagawa is currently a senior research analyst in Japan Science and Technology Agency (JST); conducting evaluation of outputs and outcomes of government funded basic research programs. His research fields are management of technology, technological innovation, and evaluation of technology.

Iman Raeesi is PhD student of Systems Management in the management faculty of University of Tehran. He received a master degree from University of Tehran in Information Technology management. His research interests include knowledge management, business intelligence, enterprise resource planning and information resources management. He has presented and published his papers in several international and Iranian conferences and journals on knowledge management, e-learning, knowledge sharing and related fields.

Elsa Alama Salazar is a Professor at the Faculty of Economics and Business at the Universidad de Piura, Peru. She obtained the Degree of Doctor in Management from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid in 2008. Her research area is Knowledge Management and Intellectual Capital. She has published several articles in scholar journals, such as, "The role of intellectual capital in technological innovation" which is an application to professional services firms in Spain, in Notebooks of Economics and Business, Issue 40, September 2009, “Intellectual Capital. A proposal to classify and measure”, in Latin American Journal of Management, Volume 37, 2007. Besides, she has participated as a lecturer at different congresses, inside an outside the country, like ACEDE Congress, held in León - Spain (2008), and soon in the Congress of the Iberoamerican Academy of Management to be held in Buenos Aires - Argentina (December 2009).

M. Paz Salmador is Assistant Professor of Strategic Management at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain) and Senior Researcher in the Knowledge Society Research Centre in the Science Park of Madrid. Previously, she was Visiting Researcher at the Japan Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (Ishikawa, Japan), and at the National North-Western University (Resistencia, Argentina), and Senior Fulbright Scholar at Texas A&M University.

Babak Sohrabi is Associate Professor in Department of Information Technology Management, Faculty of Management at University of Tehran. He received his PhD degree in Management Science, from Lancaster University, England in 2000. He is the Editor-in-Chief of IT management Journal at University of Tehran. His research interests include Artificial Intelligence, Knowledge management, electronic commerce, decision support systems and organizational impact of information technology.
About the Contributors

Chihiro Watanabe graduated from Tokyo University with a bachelor's degree in engineering (urban planning) and received his Ph. D. (arts and science), also from Tokyo University. Professor Watanabe joined Japan’s Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) and spent a quarter century there. He is former Deputy Director-General of Technology Development. Professor Watanabe is currently a professor of the Department of Industrial Management of Tokyo Seitous University while a professor emeritus of Tokyo Institute of Technology. He is also a visiting professor of National University of Singapore, an adjunct professor of University of Jyvaskyla, and a guest scholar of the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA). His research fields are technology innovation management, institutional innovation, techno-economics, technology innovation, and technology policy. Professor Watanabe has published 140 refereed papers in the above fields, and awarded Minister of Education, Science & Technology Award, JSSPRM (Japan Society for Science Policy & Research Management) Award, and IAMOT (Intl. Association of Management of Technology) Research Award in 2008.

Pei-Ju Yu is an assistant researcher in the Division of International Economy at Chung-Hua Institution for Economic Research in Taiwan. Her research interests are in the areas of technology management, science, technology and innovation policy, service innovation and service science. Her current projects focus on the transformation of manufacturing as well as advanced manufacturing system.