About the Contributors

Carmen de Pablos Heredero is a Professor in the Business Administration Area at the Rey Juan Carlos University in Madrid, Spain from 1994. She is the main researcher for the Openinnova group centered on the research of Open innovation and is responsible for the Master’s degree and Doctoral program on Business Administration and Organization Theory. She is specialized in the impact of information technologies over organizational systems and entrepreneurship where she develops main research. She has presented communications in different international venues and has published in specialized journals. She has also worked as a consultant in the area of IS management at Primma Consulting.

David López Berzosa is with Department of Operations and Technology at I.E Business School. He holds a PhD in Telematic Engineering by the Technical university of Madrid, he is also MBA by the I.E Business School. Dr. David has more than 10 years of professional and academic experience intertelecommunications and healthcare. He has consulted for firms such as IBM, Ericsson, Telefónica, Vivendi and several public agencies. His research interests are related to knowledge-intensive servicing, open innovation and complex systems.

***

Raghad Abusharek is a Management Information Systems graduate from the United Arab Emirates University in Al Ain. This female team comprising of two Emiratis and one Palestinian have specialised in investigating how Middle East culture may impact Enterprise Resource Planning system success in terms of innovation, risk and knowledge management.

Amina Al Rawshdi is a Management Information Systems graduate from the United Arab Emirates University in Al Ain. This female team comprising of two Emiratis and one Palestinian have specialised in investigating how Middle East culture may impact Enterprise Resource Planning system success in terms of innovation, risk and knowledge management.

Ahoud Al Shamisi is a Management Information Systems graduate from the United Arab Emirates University in Al Ain. This female team comprising of two Emiratis and one Palestinian have specialised in investigating how Middle East culture may impact Enterprise Resource Planning system success in terms of innovation, risk and knowledge management.
Luis Miguel Arroyo is Associate Professor of the Department of Management (Administration, Organization and Management) in the Rey Juan Carlos University, Madrid. He received a Degree in Industrial Engineering from the UPM, Master in Business Administration and Master in Business Studies from the Instituto de Empresa, Madrid. He worked in strategic consultancy for Roland Berger and has held several management positions in the industry. His lines of research are in the fields of business strategy, strategy implementation and operations, in particular Customer centric strategies, Mass Customization, Open innovation and Customer lead innovation. He has published in congresses and workshops.

Rudi Bekkers works at the School of Innovation Sciences at the Eindhoven University of Technology. His main research interests include standardization and intellectual property rights (IPRs), university-industry knowledge transfer (“technology transfer”), and economics and policy in the area of telecommunications. He also works for Dialogic innovatie & interactie, a private research agency focusing on policy and innovation research. Apart from his academic publications, he also conducted studies for the OECD, the EC and other national and international organizations and private firms. Papers and further information are available at http://home.ieis.tue.nl/rbekkers/.

Diana Benito Osorio is Associate Professor of the Department of Management (Administration, Organization and Management) in the Rey Juan Carlos University, Madrid. She received a Bachelor in Business and Administration, Diploma of Advanced Studies in the Business Administration Doctorate Program and Master in Management. Her main research interests and work are in: corporate strategy, conciliation of the family and work life, education innovation and open innovation. She is author and coauthor of different papers, essays in books, conference proceedings and posters published in national and international journals, congresses and workshops. In concrete, in Open Innovation area she has several essays published in books. Moreover, she has participated in different specialized courses like “Open Innovation strategies in the international Context” and she has selected presentations too as “Relathionship between diversification based on knowledge and open innovation: A theoretical analysis”.

Cristiane Biazzin Villar is PhD student in Business Administration (Fundação Getulio Vargas – EAEESP - São Paulo – Brazil). Cristiane has worked for 18 years as Purchasing and Supply Chain Executive in brazilian organizations as Itautec Philco and multinational enterprises as Owens Illinois, SKF and Faiveley Transport. Her research interests are: supply chain management, collaborative networks, innovation, operations strategy and international operations network.

Marcel Bogers obtained his PhD in Management of Technology from the Ecole Polytechnique Fédérale de Lausanne (Swiss Federal Institute of Technology). He currently works at the University of Southern Denmark where he does research and teaching in the area of innovation management. His main research interests include the management and organization of innovation, openness in innovation processes and systems, and the role of users in innovation. Further information is available at http://www.sdu.dk/staff/bogers.aspx.

Gonzalo Camarillo works for Ericsson Research in Finland. He received M.Sc. degrees in electrical engineering from the Stockholm (Sweden) Royal Institute of Technology and from Universidad Politecnica de Madrid (Spain). His research interests include signaling, multimedia applications, transport protocols, and networking architectures. He has authored a number of RFCs, books, patents, and scientific papers on these areas. Gonzalo has co-authored, among other standards, the SIP (Session Initiation Protocol) specification (RFC 3261). He has served on the IAB (Internet Architecture Board) and has chaired a number of IETF (Internet Engineering Task Force) working groups. Currently, Gonzalo is the director of the RAI (Real-time Applications and Infrastructures) area at the IETF.

Javier Alfonso Cendón was born in Leon (Spain) in 1983. He is PhD in Engineering by the University of Leon, Master MBA by the Polytechnic University of Madrid, Master in Renewable Energies by the University of Leon, Master in Security by University of Leon / INTECO, and Computer Engineer by the University of León and CCSU (Central Connecticut State University). He has many specialized courses in the fields of engineering and communication technologies and business management. He is Associate Professor in the area of engineering projects in the University of León. He has won and managed more than seven national projects and has more than 20 national and international publications in the field of ICT. Since April 2010 he works in the Spanish National Institute of Communication Technologies (INTECO) with a postdoctoral research contract “Torres Quevedo” from Spanish Ministry of Science and Innovation.

María A. de Vicente y Oliva is full profesor in the University Rey Juan Carlos, Madrid (Spain). She holds a degree in Mathematics by the University Complutense (Madrid) and has a speciality on Operations Research. She holds a PhD in Business and Administration by the same University Complutense. Her research has always been related to the development and application of multivariate techniques of statistical analysis and, overall, multicriteria analysis and decision. The applications have been mostly in Social Sciences. She has national and international publications and research projects where she works and applies techniques relating multivariate statistical analysis and multicriteria decision aid. Over the last years her works have been applied to Knowledge and Technology Transfer, Research and Development and Innovation, and as an specific field Open Innovation.

María Isabel Encinar is Associate Professor of Economic Theory at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain). She has edited with Carolina Cañíbano and Félix-Fernando Muñoz Economía del conocimiento y la innovación. Nuevas aproximaciones a una relación compleja, Pirámide (Madrid, 2008). She has published several scientific papers and chapters in collective books, as ‘On novelty and economics: Schumpeter’s paradox’ (Journal of Evolutionary Economics), ‘Evolving capabilities and innovative intentionality: some reflections on the role of intention within innovation processes’ (Innovation Management: Policy and Practice).

Michele Esteves Martins is - MSc in Business Administration from Fundação Getulio Vargas (FGV- EAESP; Sao Paulo, Brazil) with an executive career that has been developed mostly in service operations, hospitality and human resources management in companies such as Walt Disney World, Hyatt Hotels and Resorts, American Beverage Company (Ambev) and Senac São Paulo. Michele has a Bachelor of Science in Tourism (Universidade de São Paulo - USP) and was an international exchange student at New York University (NYU) during her graduate studies at FGV. Her research interests include: service operations, collaborative networks, innovation, supply chain, hospitality management, entertainment and human resources management.
Rocío Guede Cid studied Industrial Engineering, specializing in Business Organization, in the University of Vigo, and is Master in Marketing at Rey Juan Carlos University. She has worked for five years for several companies in different activity branches: consulting, industrial, aeronautic and financial services enterprises. In 2005 she started to work at Rey Juan Carlos University to develop a research project about technology transfer offices, and since 2006 she has been working as a lecturer teaching several subjects related to mathematics and statistics applied to business. She has researched in innovation and open innovation, and her doctoral thesis is about the efficiency in technology transfer for Public Research Organizations in Spain.

Ove Granstrand was educated at Chalmers University of Technology, University of Gothenburg, Sweden and Stanford University with graduate degrees in mathematics, economics and engineering and a PhD degree in industrial management and economics. His work experience includes teaching, research and consultancy in various Eastern and Western countries. He serves as Professor in Industrial Management and Economics at Chalmers University of Technology since 1986 and is a.o. founder of CIP – Center for Intellectual Property Studies at Chalmers, with longstanding experience of patenting and licensing. His research interest concerns economics and management of technology and innovation. In particular, he has studied innovation, corporate strategy and diversification in multi-technology corporations in Europe, Japan and the USA, as well as various issues related to R&D, intellectual property and intellectual capital more generally. He has authored and edited over 15 books and 150 articles on these topics. Further information is available at http://www.chalmers.se/tme/EN/organization/personliga-sidor/granstrand-ove.

Ainhoa Herrarte is Associate Professor at the Department of Economic Analysis of the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain), where she teaches Macroeconomics. Her main research interests are labor economics, exchange rates economics and micro econometrics. She has published several research papers and book-chapters about different topics of the Spanish labor market: evaluation of active labor market policies, immigration and its effect on natives’ opportunities, maternity and female labor participation, education and salaries, family economics, etc. She belongs to the Research Group in Labor Economics at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid where she develops many research projects on applied labor economics using microdata.

Tony Jewels is an Australian practitioner/academic currently teaching and researching in the United Arab Emirates. His specialization is in project management for information systems implementations and his current research is focusing on the impact of cultural issues on ERP success.

Montserrat Jiménez Partearroyo is Associate Professor of the Management Department (Administration, Organization and Management) in the Rey Juan Carlos University of Madrid (Spain). She received a Doctorate in Industrial Engineering in 2004. Her main research interests and work are in: Implications of Information technologies in Business Administration, Operations Management, education innovation and open innovation. She has ample lecturing experience teaching in several Universities (Carlos III, UNED, Antonio de Nebrija) and industry experience as Information Systems Consultant. She is author and coauthor of different papers, books, conference proceedings and posters published in national and international journals, congresses and workshops. In concrete, in Open Innovation area she has some essays in books as: “Innovations and Intellectual Property, New Trends”. Moreover, she has participated in several seminars about open innovation.

Sean Kask is a doctoral researcher at INGENIO (CSIC-UPV), the Institute of Innovation and Knowledge Management in Valencia, Spain. He received an MBA from International University Audentes in Tallinn, Estonia, and a BSc (Hons.) from Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, Canada. Sean has worked in several international firms, including TÜV Rheinland, Gartner, and a professional services firm in Switzerland. His research interests include innovation, strategic management, and leadership.

Antonios D. Livieratos is Lecturer of Business Strategy at the Department of Economic Sciences of the University of Athens. Moreover, he is business incubator coordinator and strategy consultant for the BIC of Attika incubator at the Lavrion Technology Park as well as a member of the PESOR Laboratory at the University Paris Sud 11. His research interests cover open innovation, business strategy, knowledge and knowledge management, ‘New, Technology-Based Firms’ as well as qualitative research methods.

Manuel Lorenzo is Head of the Technology & Innovation Unit of Ericsson Spain. His unit performs IPR Management and Strategic Research integrated in Ericsson’s Corporate Technology function as well as New Business Development and Innovation projects performed in close coordination with market operations and in cooperation with national and European institutions and technology and business partners. Manuel holds a B. Eng degree in Telecommunication by Universidad Politécnica de Madrid with specialization in Computer Networks. Since 1994 he has developed his professional career in Ericsson (Spain, Sweden, Ireland) in several technology and business fields including Telecom Management, Mobile Internet Infrastructure and Applications, Network Databases and Digital Identity among others. His profile combines a broad technical knowledge acquired in R&D (as Design Technical Coordinator, Master Systems Architect and Senior Specialist) with business orientation and skills developed in Market Unit assignments (Program Manager, Chief Solution Architect and Business Consultant). In 2006 he joined the Leadership Team of Ericsson R&D Center in Madrid, as Head of the Technology & Innovation Unit and Chairman of the Innovation Management Board. Manuel is member of Ericsson-wide communities and initiatives including the Ericsson Global Innovation Forum and Ericsson New Business Development Network. He also actively promotes the networking among companies as well as between the industry and academic worlds with the aim of exchanging, extending and applying knowledge and best practices in Management of Technology and Innovation.

Jaime Manera Bassa is full professor in University Rey Juan Carlos, Madrid (Spain). He holds a degree in Geological Sciences by University Complutense (Madrid) and a PhD in Economy and Administration by the Universidad Complutense of Madrid, spain.. He also has a degree in Foreign Commerce and an MBA by the IE business School in Madrid. His research has always been related with the development and application of marketing techniques applied to different areas. He is author of more than 20 books. He has national and international publications and research projects where he works and applies marketing techniques. Over the last years her works have been applied to Knowledge and Technology Transfer, Research and Development and Innovation, and as an specific field Open Innovation.
About the Contributors

Johan Henk Maarse is a lecturer at the University of Southern Denmark. He has created and taught courses in ‘Management of IT’, ‘Innovation & Creativity’, ‘Market Intelligence & Entrepreneurship’, ‘Cradle to Cradle Business Development’, and ‘Business Model Innovation’. The book chapter: ‘An Integrative Model for Technology-Driven Innovation and External Technology Commercialization’ is based on Johan’s work with a Danish new technology based firm. His main interests include entrepreneurship and new ventures, cradle to cradle and green business development, and business model innovation. Further information is available at http://www.jhmaarse.nl.

Andrés Leonardo Martinez has a master degree in Computer Science by the Polytechnic University of Madrid. Currently he is a BlueVia Developer Program Engineer in O2 Uk, in Global New Services Unit (prev. Innovation Unit) of Telefonica Corp., spec. Applications and Global Internet Companies. Since 2007 till September 2010 he was an OSS specialist in Telefónica R&D. During the period from 1998 till 2002 he was an engineer of R&D department of Teldat, a network infrastructure maker and from 2002 till 2007 he was an active member of the research group GyC/LibreSoft of the Rey Juan Carlos University, where he was a teacher of Operating System, Distributed System and Robotics. He also is member of the IEEE, Computer Society and ACM.

Eva-María Mora-Valentín is Associate Professor of Management at Rey Juan Carlos University. She received her PhD in Business Administration from the Rey Juan Carlos University in 2002. Her research interests include strategic alliances, cooperative agreements and firm-research organizations relationships. Her research has been presented at the Strategic Management Society and European International Business Academy Annual Meetings and published in Industry and Higher Education, Science and Public Policy, International Journal of Technology Management and Research Policy among other journals. She is reviewer of specific business and management journals such as Universia Business Review, Canadian Journal of Administrative Sciences, Technology Analysis and Strategic Management, Research Policy, Cuadernos de Economía y Dirección de la Empresa (CEDE), International Journal of Technology Transfer and Commercialization and, IEEE Transactions on Engineering Management, among others.

Félix Fernando Muñoz is Associate Professor of Economic Theory at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain). He is co-author with María Isabel Encinar of several scientific papers and chapters in collective books. He is co-editor of Procesos de Autoorganización (Unión Editorial, Madrid 2003) and Estudios de Teoría Económica y Antropología (Unión Editorial, Madrid 2005). He is Fellow of the Instituto de Investigaciones Económicas y Sociales Francisco de Vitoria (Spain).

Demetrios B. Papoulias is emeritus professor at the Department of Economic Sciences of the University of Athens. He has extensively taught Strategic Management and Operational Research for enterprises of the public and private sector. He has published relevant books and many papers in international journals. He has accumulated practical experience in the corporate world as chairman of the board for the Hellenic Communications Company and the Greek Power Corporation.
Marta Ortiz-de-Urbina-Criado is an Assistant Professor of Management at the University Rey Juan Carlos of Madrid, Spain. She received his PhD in Management from the Rey Juan Carlos University. Her research focuses on alliances, mergers and acquisitions, innovation and entrepreneurship. Her research has been published in Group Decision and Negotiation, Service Industrial Journal, Canadian Journal of Administrative Science, International Journal of Technology Management, Universia Business Review, Service Business: An International Journal, among others journals.

Braulio Pérez-Astray is Technical Director for the Promotion of Innovation and Manager at the Office for the Transference of Research Results (OTRI) at University of A Coruña Foundation. Since 1992, he has had a long professional activity in terms of university-enterprise relationships. He has worked at the Madrid University-Business Foundation as manager in the Service of Technological Information of the Madrid Universities (SUMIT). Moreover, he has been member of the research team EPOC (Sciences Political Evaluation) at Salamanca University. He has collaborated as technical consultant with the National Forum of Knowledge Transference Units (UTCs) of Brazil, and with the Dominican Republic Government defining the innovation and technology policy strategy. Currently, he is Manager at the Gallaecia Business Link Centre and member of the European Innovation Relay Centre Network. Finally, he is the director of some European projects such as REDOMIC and CREATINN.

Sandra Charreire Petit is Professor of Strategic Management at the University Paris South 11. She is head of the graduate school of law, economics and management at the University and leads a Master 2 entitled “Strategies and Management”. Her areas of expertise include organizational learning, the management of change and the knowledge management through management tools. More recently, she publish on CSR and on the learning process in innovative high tech companies backed by venture capital. She supervises theses on the innovation process, and the strategy and governance of clusters.

Raúl Riesco Granadino was born in Madrid (Spain) in 1978. He is Master Degree in Telecommunication Engineering by the Polytechnic University of Madrid. He has different professional certifications, among them, certifications in networking Cisco, management of IT services (ITIL), ISACA Security and management of Research & Development (R&D). He has carried out positions of different responsibility levels since 1999 in multinational companies from the ICT sector like HP, BT and T-Systems, actively participating and leading different ICT international projects for several customers. Since 2007 he is leading innovative projects inside Spanish National Institute of Communication Technologies (INTECO) and in 2010 he becomes the new INTECO-LABS Manager, the innovation core unit inside the company which is in charge of the evolution & deployment of all the innovative value added initiatives inside their strategic R&D lines: Security, Accessibility (e-Inclusion), Quality and Digital TV.

Alberto Romero Ania is a lecturer at the department of Applied Economics at Rey Juan Carlos University in Madrid, Spain. He holds Masters Degrees in Business Administration and International Economic Analysis. He received an award for Excellence when achieving his Degree in Business Administration and Management and is undertaking his Doctorate in Economics. He has gained experience as Visiting Professor at international universities, such as the IMC University of Applied Sciences in Krems, Austria, and the University of Hué, Vietnam and acted as Visiting Researcher at the International Telecommunication Union (United Nations) in Geneva. He performed advanced research in economics, has participated as a speaker at international economic congresses and has published different kinds of academic writings. He is the academic secretary of the Iberoamerican Master in Business.

Angela Ruriko Sakamoto is PhD from School of Business Administration of São Paulo, the Fundação Getulio Vargas (FGV-EAESP; Sao Paulo, Brazil) and was a visiting doctoral student at the Center for Small and Medium Enterprises at Warwick Business School in 2010. Angela has worked for over 20 years as IT professional, and in recent years has combined activities as business consultant, researcher and teacher. Her research interests are: collaborative networks, innovation, technology management and impact of social structures and SMEs networks.

Frank Wippich is the Product Development Manager at Blindsight Corporation, leading the hardware and software development activities for mobile devices and assistive services for independent living of individuals with access needs. He has also spearheaded the design, implementation and market introduction of in-car navigation, audio and connectivity devices in the automotive industry at Visteon Corporation for Ford, BMW and Fisker Automotive. Throughout his career, he has built and led globally distributed teams fostering innovation, collaboration, cultural diversity and creative performance through his extensive professional work and academic experience in Asia, the United States and Europe. His academic achievements include an MBA degree from Henley Business School (UK); he also holds a Bachelor’s degree in Engineering and Technology Management from University of Huddersfield (UK) and Jena University of Applied Sciences (Germany).