About the Contributors

Mehmet Zahid Sobaci is an Assistant Professor of Department of Public Administration at Uludag University. He received his PhD in Public Administration from Uludag University. His research interests are administrative reform, e-government, e-participation, policy transfer, governance, and new public management. He teaches courses on Public Administration, Local Governments, Public Personnel Management, and Administrative Reform. He is the author of Administrative Reform and Policy Transfer: The Diffusion of the New Public Management (in Turkish) and Public Administration in Theory and Practice (in Turkish). He is also the author of several articles and chapters published in national and international journals, books, and international conferences.

***

Malik Aleem Ahmed is a PhD candidate in the Faculty of Technology, Policy, and Management at the Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands. He holds a Master’s degree in Business Administration with specialization in Information Technology Management. His areas of research interests are ICT and ethics, e-government, and ICT for governance in developing countries. His PhD research concerns the usage of ICT for better governance in developing countries. The main emphasis of the research is on public sector institutional strengthening with the help of ICT in developing countries, and the effect of intercultural variations of values. He has worked in different capacities in the field of Information and Communication Technology for seven years in Pakistan. His last job was in the capacity of “IT Advisor” for Pakistan Legislative Strengthening Project. He has also been involved in the field of teaching at the university level.

Sergio Braga is a Professor of Political Science at Federal University of Paraná, in Curitiba/Brazil and got his PhD in Economic Development. His current researches focus on the impact of the internet in Political Representation processes and about the use of the internet by the legislative bodies and parliamentary elites in Latin America. He is also author of The role of ICTs in the institutionalization of democracy; a study about the informatisation of the Legislative Bodies in South America with emphasis on Brazil (published by Brazilian Chamber of Deputies, 2007), among other papers about the impact of ICTs in the political systems of Latin American democracies.

Kelvin Joseph Bwalya is a PhD candidate at the University of Johannesburg researching on e-Government adoption and synthesis in Zambia. He is full-time Lecturer at the University of Botswana teaching information systems. Kelvin has a Master’s Degree in Computer Science from Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology and a Bachelor’s of Engineering and Technology in electrical engineering from Moscow Power Engineering Technical University.
Kadir Dede is a Research Assistant and Doctoral Student in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at Hacettepe University, Turkey. He received his undergraduate degree at Kocaeli University in 2005 and graduate degree at Hacettepe University in 2008. His research topics are Turkish politics, political history and nationalism.

Tolga Demirbaş is an Assistant Professor at Uludağ University, Faculty of Economics and Administrative Sciences in Bursa, Turkey. He received his PhD in Public Budgeting and Fiscal Planning from the Institute of Social Sciences, Uludağ University in 2006. His research interests concern public budgeting reforms, performance budgeting and auditing, local government finance, and fiscal transparency.

Neringa Vegyte Descarrega is an Assistant of the European Information Office of the Parliament of Lithuania. She has studied her Bachelor in Political Science at the Vilnius University, Lithuania (2001-2005), University of Iceland, Iceland (2004). She has taken Master’s degree in Public Administration (e-government specialization) at the Mykolas Romeris University, Lithuania (2007). She had professional internship with HRM and e-government service projects (Iceland). In 2008, she was the Head of Lithuanian Pavilion in the Expo 2008 (Spain). She also worked as a Personal Confidence Assistant to the Chairman of the Committee on Economics of the Parliament of Lithuania. She has prepared several publications on e-participation and representative government together with Prof. Dr. Rimantas Petrauskas.

J. Ramon Gil-Garcia is an Associate Professor in the Department of Public Administration and the Director of the Data Center for Applied Research in Social Sciences at Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas (CIDE) in Mexico City. Currently, he is a Research Fellow at the Center for Technology in Government, University at Albany, State University of New York (SUNY) and a Faculty Affiliate at the National Center for Digital Government, University of Massachusetts Amherst. Dr. Gil-Garcia is the author or co-author of articles in The International Public Management Journal, Government Information Quarterly, Journal of the American Society for Information Science and Technology, European Journal of Information Systems, Journal of Government Information, and International Journal of Electronic Government Research, among other international academic journals. His research interests include collaborative electronic government, inter-organizational information integration, adoption and implementation of emergent technologies, information technologies and organizations, digital divide policies, and multi-method research approaches.

Dimitris Gouscos is a Lecturer with the Faculty of Communication and Media Studies of the University of Athens and a Research Fellow of the Laboratory of New Technologies in Communication, Education and the Mass Media, where he contributes to co-ordination of two research groups on Digital and Reflective Games-Based Learning and Electronic Governance, Digital Deliberation and Civic Media. He holds a BSc (1990) and a PhD (1998) from the Department of Informatics and Telecommunication of the University of Athens. He has co-ordinated the digital games-based learning research group of the EPINOISI R&D project for production of digital games-based learning material for students with mild intellectual disability and the development of the Magic Potion digital game for learning, which received the Comenius Edumedia Medal in June 2009.
Nigel Jackson (Reader in Persuasion and Communication, University of Plymouth) spent a number of years as a political lobbyist in the UK and then public relations practitioner. Since returning to academia he has specialised in research on online political communication. He is particularly interested in the campaigning, and persuasive and representative uses of the Internet. In addition, he has written about political marketing and political public relations. He has had published some 20 academic journal articles on the use of the Internet within political discourse. He is the co-author, along with Darren Lilleker of Campaigning, Elections and the Internet: US, UK, Germany and France (2011) Routledge.

Chipo Kanjo is a Senior Lecturer in Computer Science at Chancellor College, University of Malawi. She is currently a PhD student at the University of Oslo in Norway in the department of Informatics. Her current research interests include health informatics, e-democracy, e-governance, and Internet governance issues, and role of ICT in developing countries. She holds two Masters’ degrees from the University of Newcastle upon Tyne in the UK. She has done some consultancy and research in the field of ICT. She is a Diplo Foundation alumnus and currently an expert for the research writing phase of the Diplo Internet Governance program. Before joining the PhD program, she was the Chairperson for the National ICT Working group for Malawi.

Martin Karlsson is a doctoral candidate in Political Science enrolled in the doctoral program of the Örebro School of Public Affairs at Örebro University, Sweden. His research centers on the relationship between political participation and political representation. He has studied interaction between citizens and representatives focusing on new arenas for political communication such as E-participation projects and the blogosphere. Martin was part of the team of researchers conducting the official evaluation of the European citizens’ consultations (ECC) for the European Commission. He was also the Project Manager of ECC in Sweden.

Georgios Lappas is Associate Professor of Informatics and the Head of the Public Relations and Communication Department at the Technological Educational Institution (TEI) of Western Macedonia, Greece. His research interests: multimedia and Web communication (Web 2.0, social media, Semantic Web, Web marketing, e-government, politics and the Web, e-campaigns), artificial intelligence (pattern recognition, neural networks, machine learning), and combination of the above fields (social computing, Web mining, intelligent Web, intelligent multimedia). On these topics he published over 50 articles in international journals and conference proceedings and was the editor of two conference proceedings and one journal special issue. He serves as an Editorial Board Member and referee in six journals including the Journal of Information Technology and Politics and as a PC member in over 25 int. conferences, chairing 3 of them. He is the Scientific Coordinator of 4 EU founded research projects.

Darren G. Lilleker is Senior Lecturer in Political Communication at the Media School, Bournemouth University and Director of the Centre for Public Communication Research. His research focuses on the ways in which politicians interact with society and citizens, recent publications include Political Marketing in Comparative Perspective (MUP, 2004), The marketing of political parties (MUP, 2006), Voters or Consumers (CSP 2007) and Political Campaigning, Elections and the Internet (Routledge, 2011) as well as a number of journal articles. Dr. Lilleker is also Chair of the Political Studies Association Political Marketing Group, Convenor of the Political Communication Stream of the European Consortium of Political Researchers and on the editorial board of the Journal of Political Marketing and the Journal of Communication.
Aspasia Papaloi is a PhD Candidate in the Faculty of Communication, Education and the Mass Media of the University of Athens and a Research Fellow of the New Technologies Laboratory in Communication, Education and Mass Media. In 1999, she graduated from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki with a bachelor in German Language and Literature. In 2006, she completed her postgraduate studies in Rhodes (University of the Aegean, Faculty of Humanities, Department of Pre-school Education and Educational Planning), obtaining a MA in “Models of Designing and Planning of Educational Units” and with specialization in “Management of Information and Communication Technologies.” Her dissertation was based on informal learning and in particular on the educational portals of the Hellenic Parliament and the ways of advancing its interactive activities. As far as her interests are concerned e-parliaments, e-government and e-participation is the focal point of her current research.

Andréa Perna holds a Master’s Degree in Information Science and a Post Graduate Degree in Management both from University of Brasilia, Brazil. In addition, she also holds a Post Graduate Degree in Information Technology from Catholic University, Brasilia. During her post graduate studies, Perna took part in a United Nations Development Program course on regional democracy. The study led her to researches on e-Democracy and information management in Latin American parliaments. In the public sector, Perna served as legislative governance projects manager in the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies. While there, her emphasis was on the development of the “Twenty Years of Citizen Constitution Project” and the “e-Democracy Program.” Prior to that, Perna served as adviser to the Parliament Center for Documentation and Information Director, as well as Staff Librarian in various other government institutions. Currently, Andréa Perna is the Projects, Programs and Portfolio Coordinator at the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies.

Rimantas Petrauskas is the Professor of Department of E. Business, Mykolas Romeris University, Lithuania. Foreign fellowships of Prof. Rimantas Petrauskas include Limerick University, Ireland (2000), Kiel University, Germany (1999), Jyvaskyla University, Finland (1997), Utrecht University, the Netherlands (1996). He also served as a Guest Lecturer in Universities of Austria, Spain, Finland, Belgium, Poland, Turkey, and Croatia. Petrauskas is a Local Coordinator and Supervisor of some major European and Lithuanian research and monitoring projects, national monitoring groups in e-user, e-accessibility, e-signature, e-inclusion, et cetera. He is a member of program committees, a reviewer or area chair in some international scientific conferences, and a member of editorial board of several scientific journals. He has prepared more than 100 publications focusing on development of e-governance and information society, general issues of information technology and public administration, business, law, and education.

Tanya du Plessis is a Lecturer at the Department of Information and Knowledge Management, University of Johannesburg, and specializes in legal research competitive intelligence tools and techniques and VLE content integration. She is also involved in CI projects of the Centre for Information and Knowledge Management. She holds a D Litt et Phil (Rand Afrikaans University, South Africa), with the focus on information and knowledge management in support of legal research in a digital information environment.
Chris Rensleigh is a Senior Professor at the Department of Information and Knowledge Management, University of Johannesburg, and specializes in Internet Information infrastructures and related technologies. He has a PhD in the commerce field specializing in Informatics.

Claudia Ribeiro is the Director of Technical Support and Secretarial Services in the Portuguese Parliament (Assembleia da República). While being a legal adviser for the last 20 years at the Portuguese Parliament, she was Head of Department of Parliamentary Committees Office, between January 2006 and December 2009. She developed her experience in training (as Director of the Training Center of the Parliament, between 2004 and December 2005) and established contacts with all parliaments of the European Union, the ones of the Euro Mediterranean Partnership and CPLP. She has a Law Degree (Faculty of Law - Universidade de Lisboa – 1988) and Post-graduate studies in European Law (Faculty of Law - Lisbon University – 1989) and in Logistics and Legal Science (Faculty of Law - Lisbon University -2006).

Rodrigo Sandoval-Almazán is an Assistant Professor in the Research Center of Business College in the Autonomous State University of Mexico, in Toluca City and a Research Fellow at the Center for Development of Information Technologies and Electronics of the ITESM. He has lectured on topics such as Information Systems for business, Information Systems strategy for business; electronic commerce development; Digital Divide in emergent countries; Organization Theory, Database Applications, Statistics, Web Development, Quantitative Analysis and Modeling, Research Methods, Public Administration Theory, and Local Government Management. Dr. Sandoval-Almazán is the author or co-author of articles in Handbook of Research on Public Information Technology; Journal of Information Technology for Development; Electronic Journal of Information Systems Research, and Espacios Públicos. His research interests include electronic government, information technologies and organizations, social networks, digital divide technology, and multi-method research approaches. Dr. Sandoval-Almazán has a Bachelor’s Degree in Political Science and Public Administration, a Master’s in Management focused on Marketing, and a Ph.D. in Management with Information Systems.

Enrico Seta is currently the Head of European and Foreign Affairs Unit at the Research and Study Department of the Chamber of Deputies of Italy and coordinates several projects related to the digitalization of parliamentary information resources. His background work has been as Librarian at the Library of the Chamber of Deputies, involved in projects aimed at digitalization of paper collection. He has been a member of the working group for the standard formalization efforts for the XML-based representation of Italian normative documents (e.g., national laws) in the NormeInRete project and he is currently a member of the National Steering Committee of the project “Normattiva,” aimed at the creation of a public database of Italian legislation in force. He has been involved, since 2005, in activities of interparliamentary cooperation in the framework of UN DESA and Interparliamentary Union joint initiative “Global Centre for ICT in Parliament.”

Ahu Sumbas is currently a Doctoral Student and Research Assistant in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at Hacettepe University, Turkey. She graduated from the Department of International Relations in 2003 and received her M.A. at the same university in 2006. She is interested in ethnic identities and its relation in political life, representation of women in local politics, and democracy discussions.
About the Contributors

Yanina Welp is currently the Regional Director for Latin America at the Center for Research on Direct Democracy (C2D), Zentrum für Demokratie Aarau (ZDA), and is Research Associate at the e-Democracy Center, both at the University of Zurich (Switzerland). She earned her PhD in Political and Social Sciences at Pompeu Fabra University (Barcelona, Spain) and has been Researcher at the Internet Interdisciplinary Institute, Catalonia Open University (2004-2006), Pompeu Fabra University (2001-2003), and the University of Buenos Aires (1997-1999). She holds a degree in Political Science (1998) and in Social Communication Science (1997) from the UBA (Argentina).

Prodromos Yannas is Professor of International and European Relations and Dean of the Kastoria Campus at the Technological Educational Institution (TEI) of Western Macedonia, Kastoria, Greece. He is a member of the editorial boards of the Journal of Political Marketing and the Journal of E-Government Research. In 2007, the European Association of Communication Directors featured him as one of the leading communications intellectuals in Europe. His research in political communication concentrates on political marketing and the role of internet in politics. He was the Editor of the Proceedings of the 2nd Int. Conference of Political Marketing and the editor of two special issues in the Journal of Political Marketing. He is the Scientific Coordinator of 7 EU Founded Research Projects.