About the Author

Catherine Schifter, PhD is an associate professor in Curriculum, Instruction and Technology in Education at Temple University, USA, a Carnegie Scholar (2000-2001). She was the director of the Temple Online Learning Program from 1996 through 2000. From 2002 through 2004, Dr. Schifter established the Temple University Teaching and Learning Center to support faculty in all endeavors of teaching and learning in traditional and online environments. She is the chair of her department beginning in fall 2007. Recent scholarship includes reviewing national trends for distance education faculty support models in higher education, and evaluation of staff development programs for infusing technology into classrooms in K-12 education. Her teaching responsibilities include infusing technology into teaching into K-12 classrooms, overseeing of the senior seminar, teaching overall research design as well as qualitative research methods.