Victor C. X. Wang (EdD), an associate professor, joined the faculty at California State University, Long Beach (CSULB) in 2002 and has been the credential coordinator of Career and Technical Education and adult education since 2005. Wang’s research and writing activities have focused on workforce education, the foundations of adult education, adult teaching and learning, training, transformative learning, cultural issues in vocational and adult education, distance education, human performance technology and curriculum development. He has published over 100 journal articles, book chapters and books during his seven years at CSULB and has been a reviewer for four national and international journals. He has won many academic achievement awards from universities in China and in the United States, including the Distinguished Faculty Scholarly & Creative Achievement Award in 2009. Wang taught extensively as a professor in Chinese universities prior to coming to study and work in the United States in 1997. He has taught adult learners English as a second language, Chinese, computer technology, vocational and adult education courses, research methods, administrative leadership, human resource management and curriculum development for the past 20 years in university settings. Two of the books he has written and edited have been adopted as required textbooks by major universities in the United States, and in China. In addition, numerous universities worldwide including Howard University, Princeton University, Yale University, University of Chicago, Cornell University, UC-Berkeley and Rice University have cataloged his books and journal articles.

***

Jeff Allen, Professor, Interim Chair, Department of Learning Technologies, University of North Texas. Jeff consults and teaches in the areas of performance improvement, career and technical education, learning technologies and research methods. At the national level, he provides leadership in numerous professional organizations. He has made a special effort to mentor developing scholars.

Pamela Bracey, doctoral student, Applied Technology and Performance improvement, Department of Learning Technologies, University of North Texas. Pam serves as a curriculum specialist for an Education Excellence grant which is funded by the Texas Education Agency and housed at the University of North Texas to develop professional development materials for Career and Technical Education teachers in the Information Technology Cluster. She holds a B.S. in Business Technology Education from the University of Southern Mississippi, M.S. in Higher Education Administration from Mississippi College. Her research interests include: career and technical education, gifted education, and professional development.

Lesley Farmer, EdD, Professor at California State University Long Beach, coordinates the Librarianship program. She earned her M.S. in Library Science at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill, and received her doctorate in Adult Education from Temple University. Dr. Farmer has worked as a teacher-librarian in K-12 school settings as well as in public, special and academic libraries. She chaired the Education Section of the Special Libraries Association, and is the International Association of School Librarianship Vice-President of Association Relations. Dr. Farmer is a Fulbright Scholar, and has received a university Distinguished Scholarly Activity Award, several professional association awards, and national/international grants. Dr. Farmer’s research interests include information literacy, assessment, collaboration, and educational technology. A frequent presenter and writer for the profession, Dr. Farmer has published two dozen professional books, and over a hundred professional book chapters and articles. Her most recent book is Your School Library: Check It Out!, published by Libraries Unlimited in 2009.

Mariya Gavrilova, PHR, doctoral student, Applied Technology and Performance improvement, Department of Learning Technologies, University of North Texas. Mariya serves as a program coordinator for an Education Excellence grant which is funded by the Texas Education Agency and housed at the University of North Texas to develop professional development materials for Career and Technical Education teachers. She holds an M.S. in Training and Development from UNT, BSBA in Marketing and Management, and BA in Spanish. Her research interests include organizational diversity, leadership development in career and technical education, and distance learning evaluation methods.

Victor M. Hernandez-Gantes, received an M.S. in Agricultural Education with concentration in International Agricultural Development, and a Ph.D. in Educational Research and Evaluation from Virginia Tech. He has served as Associate Researcher at the Center on Education and Work, University of Wisconsin-Madison, as Associate Professor at Florida State, and as Senior Educational Researcher in the Center for Educational Technologies (CET)—a center sponsored by NASA—at Wheeling Jesuit University. He currently leads the doctoral program in Career and Workforce Education at the University of South Florida. Over the years he has collaborated with organizations and faculty at a number of universities nationally and internationally. This synergistic collaboration has resulted in a number of research and demonstration projects in the areas of professional development, vocational and technical education, and the integration of mathematics and career education supported by the U.S. Department of Education, National Center for Research in Vocational Education, and NASA. He has published numerous articles on the impact of programs designed to connect school- and work-based learning on student learning and career development. His most recent publication is a book entitled Teaching ELLs in CTE Programs (with B. Blank), published by Routledge.

Susan Isenberg is the supervisor of graduate research at Lindenwood University. She is also a faculty member of the Andragogy Emphasis Specialty Doctoral Program at Lindenwood University. Prior to this appointment, she was a project director at Christian Hospital in St. Louis, Missouri. Dr. Isenberg is also the founder and President of Virtual Coach, Inc, a pioneering company that launched a public Internet subscription membership to Virtual Health Coach for individuals and corporations. In March 2001, Dr. Isenberg was awarded a grant by the GlaxoSmithKline Company in partnership with the Population Health Project of the 375th MDPR at Scott Air Force base to create the interactive CD and Web-based program Virtual Health Coach that is presently available to all branches of military service. Dr. Isenberg holds a PhD in Education and M.Ed from the University of Missouri-St.Louis. She has presented at conferences and meetings for several organizations, such as the Society of Prospective Medicine; the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO); American Association for Adult and Continuing Education; Commission of Professors of Adult Education; International Conference of Transformative Learning; and the Commission on International Adult Education. Dr. Isenberg is also the 2006 recipient of the University of Missouri-St.Louis Alumni Award for Outstanding Achievement and Meritorious Service to Education.

Beth Kania-Gosche, PhD, is currently teaching in the Educational Leadership department at Lindenwood University in St. Charles, MO. She teaches educational research courses and coordinates the last six hours of dissertation writing for doctoral students. She serves on many doctoral committees and runs workshops to help students with the writing aspect of the dissertation. She was previously a high school English teacher and Gateway Writing Project summer fellow. In May of 2009, she graduated with her Ph.D. in Educational Studies from Saint Louis University, where she was previously an instructor.

Kathleen P. King, EdD, is professor of adult education and HRD at Fordham University’s Graduate School of Education in NYC, president of Transformation Education LLC, and former director of the university’s center for professional development. King’s major areas of research include training, change process, distance learning, transformative learning, new media, diversity issues, and career and technical education. She is an award winning author (17 books), popular keynote and conference speaker, editor, mentor, and consultant. She has been recognized for her research, service, and contribution to the fields of research and publication, and technology innovations in learning. Recent books include Handbook of Evolving Research in Transformative Learning (10th anniv. ed.) (2009); Global Models of Human Performance) (2009, with Wang); and Harnessing Innovative Technologies in Higher Education (2007, with Griggs). Examples of the awards she has received for her books and research include those from AERA, ACHE, POD Network, and NYACCE. Through distance technologies King and her collaborators have reached over 6.3 million learners. King earned her EdD from Widener University, Chester, Pennsylvania. She also has a MEd in adult education from Widener, a MA from Columbia International, Columbia, SC and a BA from Brown University, Providence, RI. Visit her website for more information: www.transformationeducation.com

Vivian W. Mott is professor and chair of the counselor and adult education department in the College of Education at East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina. She earned her BSs and MSs in education from the University of Tennessee and her PhD from the University of Georgia. She also holds graduate certificates in Gerontology, Women’s Studies, and Ethnic Studies. She is a Cyril O. Houle Research Scholar, recipient of ACHE Exemplary Professional Contributions Award, the NCAEA Gruman Award for Lifelong Service to Adult and Continuing Education, ECU’s Women of Distinction Award, and other teaching and research awards. Mott’s research interests focus on the development of professional expertise, multicultural issues, and ethics in education and business. In particular, her research and program development in areas of mentoring and professional development have included Native American women, higher education faculty, multinational corporations, public school teachers, and retired women. Her publications include numerous journal articles and 15 book chapters; she is co-editor of two books, Organization of Adult and Continuing Education (1995), and Charting a Course for Continuing Professional Education: Reframing Professional Practice (New Directions, No. 86, 2000). Dr. Mott is founder and owner of Wilson Mott & Associates, a consulting and management firm specializing in human resource management and organizational culture, with business/industry and governmental clients throughout North America.

Judith Parker, EdD, has earned a doctorate degree, and an M.S. degree in Adult and Continuing Education from Teachers College/Columbia University in New York, an M.S. degree in physics from Purdue University in Indiana, and a B.S. degree in physics and mathematics from Notre Dame College in Ohio. Dr. Parker has over 20 years experience in leadership positions within business organizations emerging into the global market and has been instrumental in leading them toward becoming global learning organizations. She has worked extensively with technical managers and technical employees in Asia and Europe in leadership education and training and technical employee skill development. Dr. Parker’s academic experience includes teaching adult learning and leadership theory and practice, staff development and training, and organizational development, in graduate programs at Teachers College/ Columbia University and St. Mary’s University of Minnesota using totally on-line format, totally classroom format and blended delivery. She also teaches college physics and astronomy at Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania. She has presented numerous papers at conferences globally including the Academy of Management, American Association of Physics Teachers, American Society of Training and Development, College Industry Education Conference, Quality and Productivity Management Association, Business and Multimedia Conference in Ireland, Lisbon 2000 European Conference on ODL Networking for Quality Learning, and World Open Learning for Business Conferences in the UK. She has authored numerous articles in publications including the “Compendium on Uses of Distance Learning Technologies in Engineering Education” and the “Journal of the International Association for Continuing Engineering Education” and book chapters including “Cyber Action Learning and Virtual Project Teams for Leadership and Management Development” with L. Yiu in the book Workplace Training and Learning: A Cross-Cultural Perspective and the chapter “The Online Adult Learner: Profiles and Practices” in Handbook of Research on E-Learning Applications for Career and Technical Education by edited by Victor Wang. She has been elected a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and has received the American Association of Physics Teachers Innovative Teaching Award and the Park College Educational Partnership Award.
About the Contributors

Karim A. Remtulla is a doctoral candidate the Department of Adult Education and Counselling Psychology at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education of the University of Toronto (OISE/UT). Karim holds a Masters of Business Administration (Schulich), a Masters of Science in Information Resources Management (Syracuse), and he is a member of the editorial review board of Information Resources Management Journal (IRMJ). His research interests include the long-term social, cultural and pedagogical implications of the internet, globalization, pluralism and the digital divide on adults’ civic engagement, democracy and learning in the workplace and civil society. Scholarly publications include: “The knowledge-based economy and e-learning: Critical considerations for workplace democracy” in Convergence, as well as “E-learning, Constructivism, and the Disappearance of Difference: Pedagogies of Productivity in the Modern Workplace” forthcoming in E-learning. Karim’s authored book is Socio-cultural Impacts of Workplace E-learning: Epistemology, Ontology and Pedagogy (IGI Global, 2010).

Steven W. Schmidt is an assistant professor of adult education in the College of Education at East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina. Schmidt holds a bachelor of business administration degree in business and master’s and doctoral degrees in adult education. He has presented his research on online learning, workplace training and development, and cultural competence at national and international conferences, and has been published in a variety of journals. Schmidt has written chapters in several books and is the author of the book Case Studies and Activities in Adult Education and Human Resource Development. He is currently a member of the executive board of directors of the American Association for Adult and Continuing Education (AAACE) and is the recipient of the 2009 Early Career Award from the National Commission of Professors of Adult Education. This award recognizes outstanding achievement in teaching and research by a new professor.

Mary F. Stuck, PhD, is a professor of Sociology at State University of New York – College at Oswego. She is also Assistant Dean of Arts and Sciences at SUNY-Oswego. A native of Ohio, she has degrees from The Ohio State University (B.S.) and Syracuse University (M.S. (student personnel administration), M.S. (sociology) and Ph.D. (sociology). Mary has authored several books including Adolescent Worlds: Drug Use and Athletic Activities (1992), and Structures and Processes of Inequality (1994). She is a frequent reviewer for the Annals of The American Academy of Political and Social Science, Gender & Society and other journals. In addition, she has contributed chapters in a number of books, and her work appears in the proceedings of many conferences on gender, technology and distance learning.

Mary C. Ware, PhD, is a professor of Foundations and Social Advocacy at the State University of New York – College at Cortland. A native of Virginia, she has degrees from Westhampton College, University of Richmond (Va.) and Syracuse University (M.S., Ph.D.). Her terminal degree is in the field of Instructional Design, Development and Evaluation. Mary has presented papers in area of instructional design, on-line and hybrid formats for distance learning and gender issues related to technology at many conferences throughout her career. She has authored the instructor’s manual for Ryan and Cooper’s Those Who Can, Teach (11th edition) and a chapter on learning contracts in Wang’s (2010) Assessing and Evaluating Adult Learning in Career and Technical Education.