About the Contributors

Christina Akrivopoulou holds a PhD in Constitutional Law. Her main research interests concern human and constitutional rights, the protection of the right to privacy, data protection, the private-public distinction, and citizenship. She teaches law as a Special Scientist in the faculty of Political Sciences of the Democritus University of Thrace and in the Hellenic Open University, in Greece, where she currently lives. She also is a Post-Doctoral Researcher of the Greek State Scholarships Foundation and she works as an Attorney of Law at the Thessaloniki Law Bar Association. She is collaborating with several Greek law reviews, and she is a member of many non-governmental human rights organizations in Greece and abroad. She has edited for IGI the volume, Personal Data Privacy and Protection in a Surveillance Era: Technologies and Practices, which was published in 2010.

Nikolaos Garipidis is Attorney at Law in the Thessaloniki Bar Association in Greece. He has an LLM in Legal Theory from EALT Brussels and an LLM in History, Philosophy, and Methodology of Law from the Aristotle University of the Thessaloniki, where he is currently concluding his doctoral thesis. His main research interests concern democratic theory, the counter majoritarian difficulty, constitutional power, redistributive justice, and the right to disobedience.

***

Raymond Anthony holds a PhD and he is an Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy and Affiliate Faculty in the Department of Geography in the University of Alaska Anchorage. Dr. Anthony is an ethicist and philosopher. He specializes in animal bioethics, food ethics, and environmental philosophy, and the philosophy of technology. In his recent work, Dr. Anthony has been trying to find solutions to discourses where participants talk past each other because they hold different values or when the discourses themselves are plagued by a sense of “moral fogginess” or are epistemically and morally unruly. He teaches ethical theory and environmental ethics on a regular basis. Dr. Anthony is an appointed ethicist for the American Veterinary Association’s Animal Welfare Committee, Panel on Euthanasia, and Panel on Humane Slaughter, and serves as a council member for Agriculture, Food, and Human Values. He is a member of the European Society for Agricultural and Food Ethics (EURSAFE), where he has served on the Scientific Research Committee.

Haralambos Anthopoulos is currently an Assistant Professor of Law and Public Administration in the Hellenic Open University and he lives in Athens, Greece. He has published several books in Greek concerning the protection of fundamental rights, the freedom of conscience, the freedom of information, political anonymity, racism, and social seclusion, as well as articles in relation to democracy, freedom of assembly, and the role of political parties in the modern democracies. He is editor of the Greek law review, Newspaper of Public Law.

Konstantina Bania is currently a Doctoral Researcher at the European University Institute, Florence, and a lawyer admitted to the Thessaloniki Bar, Greece. Her dissertation explores how European Competition Law can be applied so as to take account of media pluralism. She holds an LLM in Comparative, European, and International Legal Studies from the European University Institute, an LLM in International and European Law from the Free University of Brussels, a MSc in Business Science from the University of Barcelona, and an LLB from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki and the University of Salamanca. Konstantina is specialized in the application of competition law to regulated industries and has provided relevant legal services to Ryanair Ltd. and the European Commission, DG Competition, Unit C4 (State aids in the media and telecommunications sectors).

William Bülow holds a MA in Practical Philosophy (Linköping University) and is currently working at Division of Philosophy at The Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm, Sweden. His main areas of interest are moral philosophy and applied ethics and in particular ethical issues and philosophical problems in relation to new and emerging technologies.

Cummins Colburn holds a PhD and works as a Doctoral and Graduate Mentor for online students in Education and Psychology. Her experience ranges from leadership to teaching roles in Europe, the Middle East, and Canada. Her professional interests are human and civil rights, foreign language and diversity, research, foundations and theory, assessment and standards, policy related to practice, social media, and e-learning. She has published in politics, law, education, psychology, communication, social media, research, and e-learning, with several books and numerous chapters. Dr. Cummins Colburn has received her advanced degrees in Heidelberg and the USA and currently resides in Canada.

Cristina Contartese (MA, University of Birmingham, 2004; PhD, University of Bologna, 2010) is a Post-PhD Researcher at the University of Bologna. Her main research interests are the European Union as an international actor and the protection of foreigners’ human rights under the European Convention on Human Rights. She teaches International Law (tutorial course) at the Faculty of Political Science, University of Bologna-Forlì.

Angela Daly is a second year PhD Researcher at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence, Italy, working on a thesis entitled “Corporate Dominance of the Internet.” She holds an LLM in Comparative, European, and International Laws from the EUI (2010), an LLM in French and European Law from the Université de Paris 1 Pantheon-Sorbonne (2007), and a BA (Hons) in Jurisprudence from Balliol College, University of Oxford (2006). Prior to starting her PhD, she worked for two years for the British Communications Regulator, Ofcom, mainly in competition policy. She also collaborates with the transnational civil society Organization “European Alternatives” with a particular focus on media issues.

Knut Fournier (MA, Public Law, Paris Ouest, 2011; MA, Political Science, Paris Ouest, 2011) has graduated from the King’s College London and the Aberystwyth University in Wales. He worked as a Researcher for the Federal Judicial Center, an agency of the US Federal Government. Prior to that, he lived and studied in Lebanon and worked for various Human Rights and environmental organizations in Israel, Palestine, and Nepal. His research interests are the judicial control in deportations, Human Rights in counter-terrorism in South Asia and South East Asia, and transitional legal systems. He currently teaches at the National Law University in Delhi, India.
About the Contributors

Maria Giannakaki is an Attorney at Law specialized in Information and Communication Technologies law (ICT), Intellectual Property (IP), e-banking and financial services, media and electronic communications, and personal data protection law in Greece and the EU. Member of the Athens Bar Association since 2003, Maria holds a D.E.A. degree on Information Technology Law from the University of Montpellier I – France. She joined Karageorgiou and Associates Law Firm in 2004, where she advises clients on general commercial and civil matters, including drafting and negotiating agreements and general terms (IT/IP and e-commerce contracts, distribution, agency and franchising contracts). As a data protection practitioner, she has participated in several global data protection and privacy compliance projects for multinational companies having presence in Greece.

Shalin Hai-Jew holds a PhD and works as an Instructional Designer at Kansas State University, where she has worked since 2006. She teaches part-time for Washington Online. She was formerly a tenured Professor at Shoreline Community College. She has BAs in English and Psychology and an MA in English from the University of Washington, which she entered at 15 through the Halbert and Nancy Robinson Center for the Study of Capable Youth. She has a doctorate from Seattle University (2005) in Educational Leadership, with a focus on Public Administration. She taught at universities in the People’s Republic of China from 1988 – 1990 and 1992 – 1994 (the latter two years with the United Nations Volunteers of the United Nations Development Programme). She has reviewed for MERLOT’s Journal of Online Learning and Teaching (JOLT) and Educause Quarterly (EQ), among other journals. She has published widely. She works on a range of instructional design projects across a variety of fields at the university.

Bogdan Hoanca holds a PhD and he is a Professor of Management Information Systems at the University of Alaska Anchorage (UAA). Dr. Hoanca received a Ph.D. in Electrical Engineering from the University of Southern California in 1999. His current research interests are in information security and societal implications of technology.

Evika Karamagioli is a Jurist that currently serves as eDemocracy Researcher and Project Manager for several public and academic institutions in Greece. From 2009 – 2011 she served as Deputy Director at the Greek NGO, Gov2u. Prior to joining Gov2U she was a Grants and Research Coordinator in the Greek NGO access2democracy, Scientific Associate at the Centre for European Constitutional Law Themistocles and Dimitris Tsatsos Foundation, and responsible for European Project Management at the Athens Bar Association, Greece. She has extensive experience in designing and managing research projects funded in the areas of e-democracy, eParticipation, and eInclusion. She has also contributed as a researcher in the elaboration of a series of studies concerning public administration modernization and eGovernment. From 2007-2009, she was involved as an independent expert in the Ad hoc Committee on eDemocracy of the Council of Europe (CAHDE). She holds a Masters in International Security and Defense from the University of Grenoble, France, and a Masters in Crisis Management from Athens University, Greece. She is currently a PhD candidate at the University Paris 8, France. She is the author of numerous articles in scientific journals, books, and conference proceedings on the subjects of eDemocracy and human rights and ICT.

Clara Marsan Raventós received her BA from Pompeu Fabra University, her MA from the Universities of Lausanne and Geneva and her PhD from the European University Institute. She is a Public Law Professor at the Open Catalan University (Universitat Oberta de Catalunya) and Associate Professor of Constitutional Law in Pompeu Fabra University. She has specialized in constitutional theory, particularly in the areas of constitutional law and globalization; the role of high courts in a national and global contexts, and human rights in the technological society.

Nóra Ni Loideain B.A., LL.B., LL.M. (National University of Ireland, Galway) is a PhD candidate at the University of Cambridge. She was previously a Legal Research Officer in the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions of Ireland and Judicial Researcher for the Courts’ Service of Ireland. Her main research interests are in the areas of data retention, privacy, state surveillance, and law reform.

Kenrick Mock holds a PhD, and he is an Associate Professor of Computer Science in the Department of Mathematical Sciences at the University of Alaska Anchorage. He has taught over 20 courses in computing and conducts research in artificial intelligence, complex systems, agent-based systems, computer security, and computer science education. He has over 20 years of programming experience and has co-authored four textbooks on programming in Java and C++. Dr. Mock is also interested in promoting research experiences for undergraduates through grants, student activities, curriculum, and faculty development.

Naoum Mylonas is currently a PhD student in the field of Management and Entrepreneurship at the Department of Economics; Faculty of Law, Economics, and Political Science; Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, where he studied as an undergraduate student (2003-2007). He holds two Masters of Science, namely: MSc Development Management in the London School of Economics (LSE) (2008-2009) and MSc European Economic Policy in the Athens University of Economics and Business (2009-2010). His doctoral research is funded by Heraclitus II Research Program through the Operational Program “Education and Lifelong Learning” of the National Strategic Reference Framework (NSRF). His academic interests are focalized on the fields: entrepreneurship, creativity, organizational behavior, gender issues on management and e-government.

Julie Nolin serves as Communications Faculty at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. Prior to receiving a graduate degree in 2010, she worked as a journalist for nearly 20 years in Canada—beginning as a newspaper reporter, photographer, and editor. She made the transition to television news, winning several national and international awards for her work. After extensive studies in Japan and China, she began work on various books and chapters in academic areas such as journalism, intercultural communication, social media, mobile technology, e-learning, online English Language Learning, and psychology. Nolin resides in Vancouver, Canada.

Lina Papadopoulou is an Assistant Professor of Constitutional Law at the Faculty of Law at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (A.U.Th.). She studied Law at the same University (1993), took the LL.M. Master in Law at the University of Trier, Germany (1994), and her PhD (on European Political Parties, 1999) at the University of Hanover, Germany (1998). She also completed an MSc in Political Theory at the London School of Economics (LSE, 1999). She conducted post-doctoral research as a Marie Curie Fellow of the European Commission in the area of European Constitutional Law at the LSE (1999/2001) and Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. Her main research interests and publications focus on European Constitution Law, equality and non-discrimination issues, fundamental rights, esp. religious freedom, and political parties. She has recently (2009) published a monograph (in Greek) on the relation between national constitutions and Community law.

Marios Papandreou is a lawyer. Since 2009, he is also a PhD candidate (Comparative Law) at the Department of Law; Faculty of Law, Economics, and Political Science; Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He has worked as a Research Fellow for the Faculty of Law of the Aristotle University and for the Centre of International and European Economic Law (CIEEL) in Thessaloniki. He is now working as a Research Fellow in the Marangopoulous Foundation for Human Rights (MFHR) in Athens. His thesis relates to the problem of global poverty under a human rights perspective and, in particular, with the conditions and objections to the emergence of a new human right, that of freedom against poverty. He is a scholar of the Greek State Scholarships’ Foundations.

Daniele Ruggiu since 2009 is a Research Fellow of the Interdepartmental Research Centre for Environmental Law Decisions and Corporate Ethical Certification (CIGA) of the University of Padua. He is also a Teaching Fellow in Philosophy of Law in the Department of Legal Sciences of the University of Ferrara. He obtained his PhD in 2008 in “Human Rights: Evolution, Protection, and Limits” at the Policy, Law, and Society Department of University of Palermo with a thesis entitled “Time and Rights: The Interpretation of the Human Rights between Universality and Particularity.” At the moment, he is working with the group of the CIGA on the aspects of the Human Rights involved by the Emerging Technologies within two European Commission reports of the Seventh Framework Programme: one titled “Synth-Ethics: Ethical and Regulatory Issues raised by Synthetic Biology” and the other titled “EPOCH: The Role of Ethics under EU Policy and Law: EU Policy in the Making.”

Misse Wester is a Behavioral Scientist, working as a Researcher at the Division of Philosophy, The Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm, Sweden. Her main research areas are risk perception, risk, and crisis communication. Of particular interest are differences in perception relating to risk and benefit with new technologies, primarily between experts and lay people. She holds a PhD in Psychology from Örebro University.

Athanasios Yupsanis holds a PhD in International Relations form the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, and he currently works as Civil Servant for the Greek Social Security Foundation. He has taught International Relations, Human Rights, Strategic Analysis, and War Law in several military schools in Greece and as an Adjunct Lecturer in the Democritus University of Thrace in Greece. His many articles in Greek and foreign reviews are mainly occupied with the subjects of cultural property, cultural rights, indigenous and tribal people, as well as minorities and their rights.