About the Contributors

Sara Holder is an Associate Librarian and Head of the Education Library and Curriculum Resources Centre at McGill University in Montreal, Quebec. She began her work at the McGill Library in 2005 as a Data Specialist in the Electronic Data Resources Service. Prior to arriving at McGill, she worked as a Reference Librarian and as the Interim Project Manager/Associate Director of the Cultural Policy and the Arts National Data Archive at Princeton University. Sara received her MLIS from Dominican University in River Forest, Illinois, and her BA from Vassar College. She is active in numerous professional organizations, and she serves as a manuscript referee for several publications. Sara’s publications have appeared both in monographs and in open access journals and she is a frequent reviewer for Library Journal. Her research interests include the changing role of librarians, library assessment strategies, information literacy, and collection development.

* * *

Kristine M. Alpi is Director of the William Rand Kenan, Jr. Library of Veterinary Medicine and Adjunct Assistant Professor of Population Health and Pathobiology at North Carolina State University. Formerly Associate Library Director at the rank of Associate Librarian and Lecturer in Public Health in the Department of Public Health at the Weill Medical College of Cornell University in New York City, she holds a Masters of Public Health from Hunter College, City University of New York (CUNY), and a Masters of Library Science from Indiana University, and pursued doctoral studies at the CUNY Graduate Center. She is a distinguished member of the Academy of Health Information Professionals and teaches in the Medical Library Association Continuing Education program.

William Baer is a member of the Faculty Engagement Department at the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta, Georgia. He has served as the Mechanical Engineering and Distance Services Librarian since joining the library in 2008. He has previously served as an engineering librarian for Brigham Young University and Wichita State University. He has both a BS in Electrical and Computer Engineering and an MLIS from Brigham Young University. William has published articles in Reference Services Review, C&RL News, and Online, and as an active member of the Engineering Libraries Division of the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE), has presented several times at ASEE conferences.
Susan Bannon is an Associate Professor and Director, Learning Resources Center, College of Education, Auburn University. Her professional duties include developing and managing the curriculum materials collections, administering instructional technology support services, and teaching graduate courses in the school library certification program. Her research interests relate to integrating technology into teaching and learning, changing role of the school librarians, effective school library programs, and information-seeking behaviors of educators. She has served in leadership roles in the Alabama Instructional Media Association, Association of School Librarians, and Association for Educational Communications and Technology. She holds a B. S. Secondary Education and M. Ed. in Educational Media from Auburn University. She earned an Ed. D. from Louisiana State University in Educational Technology with a minor in Library Science.

Mark Bernstein is the Director of the Legal Research Center and Professor of Law at the Earle Mack School of Law at Drexel University. Before joining Drexel, Professor Bernstein was the Director of the Omer Poos Law Library at Saint Louis University, where he also was an Assistant Professor of Law. He also was Associate Director and Senior Lecturing Fellow at the Duke University Law Library. Professor Bernstein’s publications include articles on the evolution of the law library, the impact of law specialization on library services and qualitative methods for evaluating the value of a library. He has taught first-year research courses as well as Advanced Legal Research. He is a past chair of the Consortium of Southeastern Law Libraries and of the Strategic Planning Committee of the Academic Law Libraries Special Interest Section. Professor Bernstein earned his J.D. at Tulane University Law School. He has a Bachelor of Arts and Masters of Library Science from the University of Pittsburgh.

Stephanie G. Braunstein holds an MLIS from San Jose State University and an MA in English/Pedagogy from California State University Sacramento. As Head Government Documents/Microforms Librarian at Louisiana State University Libraries, she serves as the Regional Coordinator for Federal Depository Libraries (FDLs) in southern Louisiana, having direct oversight of fifteen selective FDLs. Braunstein is a library liaison to the Political Science department and teaches as an adjunct for the graduate program in Library and Information Science. She has presented at many conferences and been published in several scholarly/professional publications, including Collaborative Librarianship, Codex: The Journal of the Louisiana Chapter of the ACRL, Salem Press’s Great Lives from History series, and co-authored a chapter in Chandos Press’s Crisis Information Management: Communications and Technologies. Braunstein is serving a three-year term on the Federal Depository Library Council after being appointed to that position by the Public Printer of the United States in 2011.

John Cannan is a Research and Instructional Services Librarian at the Drexel University Earle Mack School of Law. He received his law degree from the University of Maryland, School of Law, and practiced historic preservation and land use law in Baltimore. After obtaining his MLS from the University of Maryland, College of Library and Information Science, he was Assistant Law Librarian at the Montgomery County (MD) Circuit Court Law Library and then a Legal Information Analyst with the Law Library of Congress. He is a frequent writer on legal research issues.
Esther Carrigan is the Associate Dean and Director of the Texas A&M University Medical Sciences Library. Ms. Carrigan holds the rank of Professor and is a distinguished member of the Academy of Health Information Professionals of the Medical Library Association. She is the recipient of the Texas A&M University Association of Former Students Distinguished Librarianship Award (2004) and the Louise Darling Medal for Distinguished Achievement in Collection Development in the Health Sciences, awarded by the Medical Library Association (2007). Ms. Carrigan was a member of the author team that was awarded the Daniel T. Richards Prize for Best Published Article on Collection Development in the Health Sciences by the Collection Development Section of the Medical Library Association (2011). She received her Masters of Library Science degree from the State University of New York at Buffalo. Her research interests include collection development, library assessment, and evidence-based practice.

Maryvon Côté has worked as a Liaison Librarian at the Nahum Gelber Law Library at McGill University, since 2007, where he teaches legal research and is responsible for collection development. Prior to joining McGill’s Law Library team, Maryvon worked at the Humanities and Social Sciences Library at McGill Library as the Political Science and Communication Studies Liaison Librarian. Maryvon is a graduate from the University of Ottawa in History (B.A.) and from McGill University in Library and Information Studies (M.L.I.S).

Alice L. Daugherty received her MLIS from Wayne State University in 2003. Currently, Daugherty is the Assessment and Information Literacy Librarian at Louisiana State University Libraries. She is part of a departmental team that delivers information literacy instruction through collaborative efforts with faculty as well as through teaching credit-bearing courses, such as LIS 1001 Library Research Methods and Materials. She actively serves within the American Library Association (ALA), where she has held positions on the executive board of the Distance Learning Section of the American College and Research Libraries and chaired committees for ALA's New Member’s Round Table. Her research centers on information literacy, instructional design, and reference services.

Georgie Donovan is Associate Professor and the Coordinator of Bibliographic Services at Appalachian State University in Boone, North Carolina. There, she manages a team of seventeen library paraprofessionals and faculty who handle acquisitions, cataloging, e-resources, and processing for the university library. Her area of specialization is in vendor relations, budget projections, and handling the acquisition of serials and e-resources. She has an MLS degree from the University of Arizona, an MFA degree from the University of Texas at El Paso, and an AB from the University of Georgia. She publishes and presents frequently in the areas of collection management, staff development, and scholarly communication. Her book, co-edited with Miguel Figueroa, Staff Development Strategies that Work: Stories and Strategies from New Librarians, was published by Neal-Schuman Publishers in 2009.

Allison Etzel graduated with her Master’s degree in Library and Information Science in 2008 from the University of South Florida. She is the Manager of the Technical Services Department at the Nelson Poynter Memorial Library at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg, where she oversees acquisitions and cataloging. Ms. Etzel’s interests include special collections, archives, and special libraries, such as museum and art libraries. She has recently completed graduate coursework in museum studies and art, and hopes to find her niche in the library world by continuing to pursue these interests. Allison’s previous research has focused on collaborating with local communities to build heritage collections, and she continues to work in acquiring, analyzing, and describing special collections.
Leslie Farison is Business Librarian and Assistant Professor at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina. She received her MLIS from the University of Kentucky and her MBA from Indiana University. Prior to becoming a librarian, Leslie spent many years in the corporate world. She has published in the Journal of Education for Library and Information Science and presented at the Charleston Conference and the University of Louisville. Her research interests include economics in collection development, business information literacy, and international librarianship.

Sarah Forzetting holds an MLS from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. As a Collection Consultant with Ingram Coutts, she works closely with academic libraries in the Western US and Canada, managing approval profiles and providing product training. She has experience assisting libraries in integrating e-books into print approval profiles, as well as implementing e-book and print PDA projects. She also holds an MA in Modern European History and has a special affinity for LC Class DK266-292.

Betsy Harper Garlish received her MLIS from the University of Washington. She has worked in cataloging, interlibrary loan, and reference in state and academic libraries.

Alison Griffin has worked for Ingram Coutts for the past seven years as an Area Manager for Western Canada and more recently the Pacific Coast of the US as well. This position allows her to work with a wide variety of libraries and their collection development practices, a process that has evolved during this tenure from print books to online ordering, e-books, and patron selection. Her MLIS is from the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada.

Ann Hallyburton, MSLS, is a Research and Instruction Librarian and Liaison to the Health Professions at Western Carolina University’s Hunter Library. Western Carolina University is located in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains in Cullowhee, North Carolina, U.S.A. Hallyburton holds senior level membership in the Medical Library Association’s Academy of Health Information Professionals (AHIP) and is pursuing a Master of Public Health in Leadership from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She has published in a number of academic and professional journals in the areas of general health care, librarianship, nursing, physical therapy, and student wellness. Her research interests center on evidence-based health information usage in the general population as well as methods used by health professionals in evaluating health care information.

Will E. Hires is the Engineering and Scholarly Communication Librarian at Louisiana State University (LSU). His undergraduate degree is in Electrical Engineering. Since graduating from the LSU School of Library and Information Science in 1995, he has worked as a librarian at Ohio State University, Vanderbilt University, and the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory. He has been at LSU since 2008 and is the liaison to the seven departments in the College of Engineering and to the Department of Computer Science. He is also the interim Patents and Trademarks Librarian and works scheduled shifts on the Reference Desk in the Middleton Library. He is a member of the American Library Association and the Association of College and Research Libraries. His research interests include engineering collection development, the system of scholarly communication, and open access to information.
About the Contributors

Scott Juskiewicz is the Head of Collection Development at Montana Tech of the University of Montana in Butte, Montana. Additionally, he is the Patent and Trademark Librarian for the state of Montana. He holds a BA in History from Ithaca College and a MSIS from the University at Albany. He enjoys being in the classroom and teaches Chemical Literature and College Success. He is interested in information competency and more importantly teaching critical thinking. He also serves on the Instructional Improvement, General Education, Advising and Retention, and Writing Committees as well as being a member of the Faculty Senate at Montana Tech. He is originally from the Green Mountain State, Vermont, but now lives in the mountains of Montana.

Anne Killenberg has worked in public, school, and academic libraries since she was a teenager. She has much experience in education, including as a teacher. She is currently the Serials Coordinator at the Nelson Poynter Memorial Library at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg, where she has worked for the past six years. Ms. Killenberg recently earned her Master’s in Library and Information Science from the University of South Florida’s School of Information. Her Bachelor’s degree from Florida State University is in Creative Writing, with a minor in Art History. Her interests are art librarianship, writing, information literacy, and preservation. She has a keen interest in fashion and interior design. In her free time, Anne enjoys haunting thrift stores, upcycling, and arranging her books artistically, but not in any particular order.

Cynthia Lenox is the Business Librarian and Collection Development Coordinator at the Grasselli Library and Breen Learning Center, John Carroll University, Cleveland, OH, which she joined in 1993. She holds a Masters in Library Science (MLS) and Masters in Business Administration (MBA), both from Rutgers University. Her prior positions include Senior Database Production Manager, Predicasts. (Cleveland), and Architecture Information Center Supervisor, New Jersey School of Architecture, New Jersey Institute Technology (NJIT) (Newark, NJ). She has taught “Business and Economic Resources and Services” for the Kent University of Library Studies and is active in the Business and Finance Division, the Special Library Association (SLA).

Geoffrey Little is Collections Librarian and Librarian for Theology at Concordia University in Montreal, Quebec, Canada. At Concordia, he is responsible for coordinating the libraries’ collection development activities and policies and for supporting students and faculty in the Theological Studies department. He has presented papers at library conferences in Canada and the United States and his writing has appeared in Collection Building, the Journal of Academic Librarianship, the Serials Review, and Library & Information History. His research interests include collection development and library history. He is the chair of the publications committee of the Bibliographical Society of Canada, a member of the publications committee of the Bibliographical Society of America, and a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Academic Librarianship. He has degrees in History and Information Studies from the University of Toronto. Professional memberships include the American Theological Library Association.

Victoria Martin (Shelton), the Life Sciences Librarian at George Mason University, has been involved with collection development for graduate programs in bioinformatics, molecular and microbiology, and neurosciences since 2001. She has a broad experience with specialized reference service and Web-based tools design and was one of the key contributors to the research portals initiative at the University Li-libraries at George Mason University, for which the University Libraries received a national Technology Innovator award from the Campus Technology magazine in 2009. Victoria is a native of Russia and received a Bachelor of Science in philosophy from Saint-Petersburg State University, Russia. She also holds an MLS from Texas Women’s University and an MFA in Creative Writing from George Mason University. Victoria is the author of several articles, reviews, and literary works published, prior to this chapter, under her former name—Victoria Shelton. She lives in Virginia, USA.

Heather K. Moberly is Professor and Head of the William E. Brock Memorial Library at the Center for Veterinary Health Sciences at the Oklahoma State University. Her former library positions were in the agricultural and life sciences at Oklahoma State University and The Pennsylvania State University. Additionally, she was an Intern at the National Agricultural Library. She is active in, and a former President of, the United States Agricultural Information Network. She currently serves in leadership of the Veterinary Medical Libraries Section of the Medical Library Association. Formerly, she was active in the Food Agriculture and Nutrition Division of the Special Libraries Association, culminating in receipt of their Distinguished Member award, and in the Science and Technology Section of the American Library Association. She holds a Master of Science in Library Science from Clarion University of Pennsylvania and is a Distinguished Member of the Academy of Health Information Professionals.

Barbara Opar In addition to holding undergraduate and graduate degrees from Syracuse University, Barbara began her library career at Syracuse as a Graduate Assistant with the School of Architecture. An embedded librarian, Barbara directs the operation of the Architecture Reading Room and serves as the Architecture Librarian and Subject Specialist for French Language and Literature with the Syracuse University Library. Accomplishments include the establishment and organization of the architectural working drawings collection as well as the new materials collection. In 2001, she directed the publication of the first e-book at Syracuse University: An Anthology of Building Technology: The Field Condition, by Theodore M. Ceraldi. Barbara is active in the Association of Architecture School Librarians, chairing their 2011-2012 Task Force to develop Core Reference Works and the 2007-2009 Task Force to revise the Core List of Architecture Periodicals. Barbara is Booklist and Exhibition Editor for the Newsletter of the Society of Architectural Historians. She has contributed to ARLIS/NA Reviews.

Jessica R. Page is the Head of the Veterinary Medicine Library and an Assistant Professor with the Ohio State University Libraries. She also serves as liaison to the Departments of Animal Sciences and Food Science and Technology and the School of Environment and Natural Resources. She began working for the OSU Libraries in 2008 as a subject librarian for the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences. Prior to beginning her library career, she worked for the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency. Jessica holds a BS in Environmental and Plant Biology from Ohio University, an MS in Biology from the University of Pennsylvania, and an MLIS from Kent State University.

Patricia Pettijohn is Head, Collection Development and Technical Services at the Nelson Poynter Memorial Library at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg, where she serves as liaison to the graphic design program. Ms. Pettijohn has published and presented on interdisciplinary collection development and assessment, collection development for virtual libraries, and the repurposing and redesign of library spaces. She is interested in the role played by libraries in academic accreditation, and has worked extensively in collection assessments for regional and programmatic accreditation. In addition to her work with the faculty of the graphic design program, Patricia is liaison to faculty of the departments of anthropology and archaeology, art history, literature, and Florida history. Patricia has written and edited work in both academic and trade publications, and is pleased to have the opportunity to work with two newly minted librarians on her chapter.

Michelle (Dubaj) Price is the Outreach and Special Collections Librarian at Lavery Library, St. John Fisher College in Rochester, New York. Her library liaison areas include the Wegman’s School of Nursing, the Wegman’s School of Pharmacy, and the Departments of Biology, Chemistry, and Physics. Michelle has published in The Journal of Electronic Resources in Medical Libraries as well as College & Undergraduate Libraries. She received her MA in Secondary Education from Southeast Missouri State University in 2007, her MLS from The State University of New York at Buffalo in 2003, and her BA in Spanish from Siena College in 2002.

Crystal Renfro is a member of the Faculty Engagement Department at the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta, Georgia. She has served as the Mathematics and Industrial Systems and Engineering librarian since joining the library in 2004. She obtained her MLS from Southern Connecticut State University and also has a Masters of Actuarial Science from Georgia State University. She was a 2008 ALA Emerging Leader. Crystal has been an active book reviewer for Library Journal since 2005, and she has published in the Journal of Electronic Resources Librarianship, Issues in Science and Technology Librarianship, Reference Reviews, and Georgia Library Quarterly.

Julie Robinson is the Subject Librarian to the College of Health Sciences and Human Services and the School of Nursing. During the 2009-2010 academic year, she presented a paper titled “Do Librarians Dream of Electric Books? Viability of the e-Reader to view the Graphic Novel” at the Popular Culture Association annual conference. In 2010, Robinson was one of five librarians who published a paper titled “We Will Be Assimilated: Five Experiences in Embedded Librarianship” in the journal Public Services Quarterly. Robinson co-authored a piece with Systems Librarian Don Kim for the Journal of Library and Information Services in Distance Learning titled “Creating Customizable Subject Guides at Your Library to Support Online, Distance, and Traditional Education: Comparing Three Self-Developed and One Commercial Online Subject Guide.” In 2010, in a joint project with the Department of Sociology, Robinson development and implemented a library exercise for sociology students.

Gregory Schmidt is the Special Collections Librarian for Auburn University Libraries. His professional duties include collection management of rare books and archival holdings, library instruction for users of special collections materials, and preservation oversight of library collections. He also manages the collections for sociology, anthropology, and social work, as well as sustainability studies. He serves as the disaster response coordinator for Auburn University Libraries. His main research interests include collection management and public engagement in special collections and archives, preservation outreach and education, and disaster preparedness. He has served in leadership roles in the Society of Alabama Archivists and the preservation section of the Society of American Archivists. He holds an M.S. in Sociology from Auburn University and an MLIS from the University of Alabama.
Heidi M. Schroeder has been a Health Sciences Librarian at the Michigan State University (MSU) Libraries in East Lansing, Michigan, since 2007. She currently serves as the Nursing Library Liaison and collects all nursing materials for the MSU Libraries. Heidi also provides virtual and in-person reference services for MSU’s Main Library and coordinates the MSU Libraries’ EndNote instruction. She is actively involved in the Medical Library Association and the Michigan Health Sciences Libraries Association. She received an undergraduate degree in Psychology from the University of Michigan in 2004 and a Master of Library and Information Science, concentrating in Health Sciences Librarianship, from Wayne State University in 2007. Heidi currently lives in East Lansing with her husband and their two cats.

Susan E. Searing is an Associate Professor of Library Administration at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, where she is the full-time Library and Information Science Librarian with a joint appointment in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science. Earlier in her career, she was a Reference Librarian at Yale, the Women’s Studies Librarian-at-Large for the 26-campus University of Wisconsin System, and the Deputy Director of the General Library System of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She has published research on topics related to library services and reference sources, and is currently the subject editor for LIS for the ALA Guide to Reference database. Her most recent article is “Faculty Responses to Library Service Innovations: A Case Study” in the Journal of Education for Library and Information Science (v. 52, no. 4, Fall 2011).

Amauri Serrano is the Humanities Collections Librarian at Appalachian State University in Boone, North Carolina, where she is responsible for selection and management of all library materials for Art and Design, English, History, and Theatre and Dance. She holds an MS in Library and Information Science, an MA in Italian Literature, and BAs in History and Italian from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Todd Shipman is the Education Librarian and the Subject Specialist for Foreign Languages and Literatures for Auburn University Libraries. In addition to providing reference and instruction services, he manages the collections for education, juvenile literature, foreign languages, and literatures as well as for kinesiology, sports, and recreation. His main research interests include library instruction for education students, the use of information literacy skills among K-12 educators, managing juvenile collections in academic libraries, lesson design for library instruction, and innovative methods for delivering library instruction to distance education students. He currently serves on the Instruction for Educators Committee of Education and Behavioral Sciences Section of the Association of College and Research Libraries. He holds a B.S. in Secondary Education from the University of Alabama, an M.A. in Religion from the University of Mobile, and an MLIS from the University of South Florida.

Susan E. Swogger is the Collections Development Librarian at the Health Sciences Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She has an MLIS and an Endorsement of Specialization in the Design and Structure of Digital Resources from the University of Texas at Austin. Her research interests include collections development policy and management, library support at the medical point of care, electronic resource use and management, global health information provision, ethics and the library, etc.
Ana Ugaz is the Collection Development and Strategic Initiatives Coordinator at Texas A&M University’s Medical Sciences Library. She holds a Bachelor of Science in Nutrition / Dietetics from the University of Texas and a Master of Library and Information Science from Dominican University. As Collection Development and Strategic Initiatives Coordinator, Ms. Ugaz is responsible for leading the development, management, and assessment of library collections. She is an Associate Professor within the Texas A&M University Libraries and is a Senior Member in the Medical Library Association’s Academy of Health Information Professionals.

Gwen Vredevoogd is Collection Development Librarian at Marymount University in Arlington, Virginia. She has been an academic librarian for fifteen years, coordinating collection management to support the curriculum, managing electronic resources, providing reference and liaison services, and teaching information literacy sessions. She has been selecting design and fine art materials in all formats for the library since 2006. Her MLS is from the University of Pittsburgh and MA in English is from Ohio University.

Carol E. Vreeland is Associate Director of the William Rand Kenan, Jr. Library of Veterinary Medicine and Adjunct Assistant Professor of Population Health and Pathobiology at North Carolina State University. Previously, she was Life Sciences Librarian at North Carolina State University. She received a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and a Masters of Library Science from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Kathryn (Katie) Zybeck is the Systems/Reference Librarian at Davis Memorial Library, Methodist University, in Fayetteville, NC. She started working with the health sciences in 2006 and is the liaison to the biology, chemistry, healthcare administration, physical education and exercise science, athletic training, and physician assistant departments. Katie’s interest in allied health collection development was sparked in 2007 after writing a LSTA Strengthening Public and Academic Libraries grant for $10,000, awarded in 2008, to rejuvenate an outdated collection. Since then, she has created a Health Sciences Collection in her library, which created a designated space for health sciences materials including books, flashcards, and anatomical models. In addition, Methodist University started a nursing program in August 2010, and Ms. Zybeck has been busy identifying and acquiring the materials needed to support this program.