About the Authors

EDITOR

Ook Lee is currently senior lecturer at the University of Queensland, Australia. Dr. Lee also served as a professor of MIS in the Department of Management of University of Nevada at Las Vegas; the Department of Business Administration at North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro, USA; as well as in the Department of Business Administration at Hansung University in Seoul, Korea. Previously, he worked as a Project Director at Information Resources, Inc., in Chicago, and as a Senior Information Research Scientist at Korea Research Information Center in Seoul, Korea. His main research interests include empirical software engineering, expert systems, neural networks, software engineering, digital libraries, electronic commerce, critical social theory, and global IT management. He holds a B.S. in Computer Science and Statistics from Seoul National University in Seoul, Korea, and an M.S. in Computer Science from Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. He also earned an M.S. and Ph.D. in Management Information Systems from Claremont Graduate University in Claremont, California. He has published in journals such as Journal of Software Maintenance, International Journal of Electronic Markets, and IEEE Transactions on Professional Communications.

CONTRIBUTORS

Christian Bauer, Ph.D., has been involved in the development of numerous commercial Web information systems since 1994. Christian holds a doctorate in information systems from the Vienna University of Economics and Business Administration, and has been published internationally on Web information systems and electronic commerce. He is currently General Manager of Research for Western Australian Internet and an e-health specialist for Working Systems. Previous employments include assistant professor at the Information Systems Department of the Vienna University of Economics and Business Administration, and a post-doctoral fellowship at Curtin Business School.

Pierre Berthon, Ph.D., is Chair of Marketing in the School of Management, University of Bath, UK. He also teaches at the Graduate School of Business, Columbia University and is visiting professor at the Copenhagen Business School, Denmark. His research interests are currently in the areas of e-commerce, branding, and management decision making. His work has been published in journals such as Patrali Chatterjee is an assistant professor in the Faculty of Management, Rutgers University. She has master’s degrees in Physics and Management, both from University of Bombay, India and a doctoral degree in Management (Marketing) from Vanderbilt University. Her research interests include modeling consumer response to advertising and decision-making in computer-mediated environments and service quality measurement. She has contributed papers and chapters to books on electronic commerce, and her research has appeared in several academic journals. Her Web page can be found at http://www.rci.rutgers.edu/~patrali/.

Benedict Dellaert is an Assistant Professor of Marketing at Tilburg University, The Netherlands. Benedict holds M.Sc. and Ph.D. degrees from Eindhoven University of Technology also in the Netherlands. His research interests are in interactive marketing, consumer choice modeling, developing optimal consumer experiences and tourism behavior. He has published in such journals as the International Journal of Research in Marketing, the Journal of Marketing Research, Journal of Interactive Marketing in the marketing field and in Annals of Tourism Research, Leisure Sciences and Tourism Management in the tourism field.

Jennifer Edson Escalas is Assistant Professor of Marketing at the University of Arizona, Tucson. She earned her Ph.D. in business administration from Duke University in 1996. Her research focuses on the use of narrative processing to create brand meaning, the effects of advertising narratives, and how consumers interact with the Internet. She has published articles in the Journal of Public Policy and Marketing and Advances in Consumer Research.

Michael Ewing, Ph.D., is senior lecturer in the School of Marketing, Curtin University of Technology, Perth, Australia. He teaches in the areas of advertising and marketing strategy as well as graduate courses in e-commerce. Prior to entering academia he held executive positions in Ford Motor Company. His research interests are eclectic and include TV advertising, the Internet and multi-cultural marketing communications. His work has been accepted for publication in journals such as Business Horizons, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, Journal of Business Research and Journal of Advertising Research, of which he is a member of the editorial board.

Eva Guterres holds an MBA from the Smith School of Business at the University of Maryland and an MS in Engineering from the Royal Institute of Technology of Stockholm, Sweden. She has worked with Dr. Kannan as a Graduate Assistant in 1999-2000. She has previously worked in several marketing and technical positions with companies such as AppNet, GE Information Services, The...
Kapil Jain, Ph.D., is currently a Lecturer of Marketing at the University of Arizona’s Eller College of Business and Public Administration where he teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in marketing research, product strategy, consumer behavior, and marketing decision models. In addition, Dr. Jain teaches courses in international marketing as a Visiting Professor for the Thunderbird Graduate School of International Management. Dr. Jain has a Ph.D. in Marketing from Columbia University. His research interests include consumer perceptions of product complexity and management of customer satisfaction and delight.

Nimal Jayaratna, Ph.D., is Professor of Information Systems and Head of School of Information Systems at Curtin University. Prior to joining Curtin University, he was head of Information Systems at two universities in the UK. He has worked in marketing, human resources, financial programming, medical databases and has consultancy experience in engineering, NHS, general practice, local authority and business environments. Professor Jayaratna is the Founding Chair of the British Computer Society Methodology Specialist Group and Co-chair with Professor Peter Checkland of the Advanced ‘Soft’ Systems Methodology Research Group. He has chaired several international methodology conferences and has edited eight conference/journal special issues. His research is on methodology in information systems and problem solving in general, frameworks for evaluation of business development and practices.

P. K. Kannan is associate director of the Center for Information Service and associate professor of marketing at the Robert H. Smith School of Business, University of Maryland. His current research interests focus on marketing information and information services on the Internet, pricing information products, and virtual communities. His articles in this area have appeared in Management Science, Communications of the ACM and International Journal of Electronic Commerce. He holds a Ph.D. in Management from Purdue University. He can be reached at pkannan@rhsmith.umd.edu.

Sam Lubbe has spent more than 14 years working in the field of information systems. He has served some time as a user and as an IT professional. He always ensured that the organisations obtain the maximum benefit for the amount of money they invested in IT. Recently he has specialised in the area of e-commerce metrics evaluation and benefit realisation. He has published some articles in the subject area of IT investment. He holds a B.Com., B.Com. (Hons.), M.Com and Ph.D. and is a Senior Lecturer at Vista University in South Africa.

Louis Minakakis is an Associate at Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City. He earned a Master's of Science Degree in Information Management from Polytech-
About the Authors

Richard Minakakis is an assistant professor of Information Systems at the School of Management, University of Rhode Island in New York. Prior to joining Chase, he was a Webmaster at Carnegie Corporation of New York, where he managed the day-to-day operations of the Web site. Minakakis also worked on knowledge management initiatives and participated in the design and implementation of a firm-wide information system. His research has been published in the International Journal of Electronic Markets.

Amit Pazgal is an assistant professor of Marketing in the Olin School of Business at Washington University. He is recognized for his expertise in Electronic Commerce, Internet Marketing and Pricing. Dr. Pazgal teaches the graduate electronic commerce and pricing courses for Olin. He published numerous articles in leading Marketing and Operations journals and is a frequent speaker in academic as well as professional conferences both in the US and Europe. In addition to his teaching and research responsibility Mr. Pazgal has developed a number of computerized educational pricing simulations. He serves on the advisory board of several Electronic Commerce companies and is engaged in numerous consulting projects mainly in the Internet marketing arena. Prior to Olin, Mr. Pazgal served as a visiting assistant professor in the Kellogg Graduate School of Management, Northwestern University from June 1996–June 1997. Mr. Pazgal received his Ph.D. in Managerial Economics and Marketing from the Kellogg GSM Northwestern University, and Master of Science, Magna Cum Laude, in Mathematics, Statistics, and Operations Research and a Bachelor of Science, Summa Cum Laude, in Physics and Mathematics from Tel-Aviv University, Israel.

Rex Eugene Pereira is Assistant Professor of Management Information Systems in the College of Business Administration at Drake University - Des Moines, Iowa, USA. He received a Ph.D. in Management Information Systems from the University of Texas at Austin. His research focuses on human computer interaction, electronic commerce, and decision support systems. His articles have appeared in Logistics Information Management, The Database for Advances in Information Systems, and Journal of Electronic Commerce Research.

Leyland Pitt, Ph.D., holds joint positions as Professor of Marketing in the School of Marketing, Curtin University of Technology, Australia, and as Fellow in marketing and Strategy in the Cardiff Business School, University of Cardiff, UK. He has also taught marketing and electronic commerce on MBA and executive programs at school such as London Business School, the Graduate School of Business at Columbia University and the Graham School of Continuing Studies at the University of Chicago. His particular areas of interest in research and teaching involve marketing and the new electronic media, the staging of consumer experiences and marketing strategy. His research has appeared in California Management Review, Sloan Management Review, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, Communications of the ACM and MIS Quarterly, of which he also served as Associate Editor.
Barbara Kline Pope is director of the National Academy Press (NAP)—publisher for the National Academies (National Academy of Sciences, National Academy of Engineering, Institute of Medicine, National Research Council). Prior to her position as director, she was NAP’s marketing director for 15 years. She holds an M.S. (1990) in textile science with a marketing concentration from the University of Maryland and a B.S. (1981) from Indiana University of Pennsylvania. She may be reached at bkline@nas.edu.

B. Ramaseshan, Ph.D., is currently Professor of Marketing and head of the School of Marketing at Curtin University of Technology, Perth, Western Australia. Professor Ramaseshan holds a Ph.D. in marketing and joined Curtin University (formerly the Western Australian Institute of Technology) in 1985. He teaches marketing, marketing research and business research methods. Prior to joining Curtin University, he worked in several business organizations holding senior positions in the areas of marketing, marketing research and business strategy. His research is currently in the areas of international strategic business alliances, international marketing channels, marketing strategy formulation and implementation and export barriers. He has presented and coauthored papers for numerous international conferences and has chaired competitive tracks at these conferences.

Ashok Ranchhod is Professor and Head of Marketing at Southampton Business School. Ashok has published extensively on e-marketing in Journals such as the International Journal of Advertising and the Journal of Information Technology. In addition to the published papers he has received prizes for his papers at the Academy of Marketing and The British Academy of Management. Currently his research is into e-commerce and the marketing of biotechnology companies. He leads a team of research students. His chair is sponsored by the Remedy Corporation Inc. Ashok is a Senior Examiner for the Chartered Institute of Marketing (CIM) and is a Visiting Professor at the University of Angers in France.

Bharat Rao is an Assistant Professor of Management at Polytechnic University in New York City. He leads several strategic research initiatives for the University's Institute for Technology and Enterprise in the areas of innovation in new media environments, supply chain management, strategic alliances, retailing and new product development. He earned a Ph.D. in Marketing and Strategic Management from The University of Georgia, and was a post-doctoral Research Associate at the Harvard Business School. His research has been published in International Business Review, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, International Journal of Electronic Markets, Technology in Society, Journal of Computer Mediated Communications, Engineering Management Journal, and in various conference proceedings and book chapters. He is the also the author of several business case studies, in both paper and digital formats, published by the Harvard Business School and the Institute for Technology and Enterprise, among others.
Malu Roldan is on the faculty of the Management Information Systems Department of the College of Business, San Jose State University. She has taught and done research on e-commerce in the Bay Area since 1996. Her research has appeared in MIS journals and books including Communications of the ACM, EDI Forum and the Journal of Informatics Education and Research. She is co-author of the book In Search of Digital Excellence published by McGraw-Hill. Her current research interests center around the application of Wireless Technologies in Education and IT management in entrepreneurial settings.

Arno Scharl is associate professor in the Information Systems Department at the Vienna University of Economics and Business Administration (Electronic Commerce Research Group), where he completed a Ph.D. and an M.B.A. Additionally, he received a Ph.D. and M.Sc. from the University of Vienna, Department of Sports Physiology. Between 1998 and 2000, he worked as visiting research fellow at the University of California at Berkeley and at the Curtin University of Technology in Perth, Western Australia. Besides the focus on automated analysis of Web-based information systems, his research and teaching interests include the various aspects of information modeling and visualization, commercial electronic transactions, adaptive hypertext, and the customization of electronic catalogs.

Sandeep Sikka is a software engineer working in the Research & Development organization at Akamai Technologies. Prior to Akamai, Mr. Sikka was a graduate student in the Computer Science Department at Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri from August 1997-July 1999 where he received his master of science degree in Computer Science in July 1999. He received a bachelor of Technology, Computer Science & Engineering degree in December 1996 from the Indian Institute of Technology, Bombay, India.

Marla Royne Stafford earned a Ph.D. in marketing from the University of Georgia in 1993, and has been listed by the Current Issues and Research in Advertising journal as a leading publisher in the advertising literature. Her research focuses on advertising and promotional strategy for services and electronic commerce. She is Associate Professor of Marketing at University of North Texas in Denton, Texas.

Thomas F. Stafford earned a Ph.D. in marketing from University of Georgia; he is currently completing a second doctorate in MIS at University of Texas - Arlington. His research involves motivations of consumers for Web site use and supply chain management. He is an Assistant Professor of MIS and Research Methods at Texas Woman’s University in Denton, Texas.

Judi E. Strebel is an Assistant Professor of Marketing at the College of Business, San Francisco State University. Her main research interests are modeling consumer decision making and consumer purchase behavior in high tech industries.
Julie Tinson is a senior lecturer in Marketing at Southampton Business School. She has recently completed her Ph.D. on consumer perceptions of service in the NHS. She has presented several conference papers at doctoral, working and competitive levels. She has close links with the IPA Twinning Initiative. She is an examiner on the Planning and Control paper of the CIM Diploma and her current interests focus on segmentation.

Jie Zhang is an assistant professor of marketing at University of Michigan Business School. She earned her MA degree in demography and social statistics at The University of Chicago in 1995 and Ph.D. in marketing at Northwestern University in 1999. Her general research area is applying econometric and statistical models to study consumers’ purchase behavior and decision-making processes. She is particularly interested in consumers’ purchase decisions on the Internet. Her current research focuses on investigating consumers’ inertia and variety seeking tendencies on the Internet, how to customize promotions in online stores, and how consumers’ purchase behavior may change over time in online stores as they get more accustomed to the new shopping environment. She is also interested in pricing, promotion and consideration set formation issues in the off-line world.

Fan Zhou is a Ph.D. student at Southampton Business School. He holds a BA degree in English from Shanghai International Studies University (SISU) in the People’s Republic of China and a Master’s in Marketing from Leicester University in the United Kingdom. He has previously worked for several Hong Kong companies in China. His research interests include strategic marketing communications on the Internet.