About the Author

Wilhelmina Djolet (Ph.D.) is an Assistant Professor at Youngstown State University where she teaches at both graduate and undergraduate levels. Courses she teaches include technology, research, and assessment courses. Dr. Djolet is also the Founder, President, and CEO of CulRitzWil Co., a Management and Computer Information Systems Consultancy and a Culinary Services Company. Dr. Wilhelmina Djolet holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Computer Science, a Masters degree in Applied Computer Science, and a Doctor of Philosophy degree in Organisational Leadership from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. Positions held by Dr. Djolet include, at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, Database Manager and Administrator and Lecturer. In the capacity of Adjunct Professor at Bowie State University, Dr. Djolet taught both graduate and undergraduate students Management Information Systems and Management courses. Dr. Djolet has authored and co-authored several research publications and book chapters spanning symplectic integration for power systems and the impact of eBusiness on institutions and organisations and serves as a reviewer for numerous journals.