About the Contributors

Bryan Christiansen has been the Chairman of PryMarke, LLC since 2004, a Business Analytics and Management Consultancy in Michigan, USA. He has also been an Adjunct Business Professor since 2003 at Capella University and Ellis University (formerly Ellis College of New York Institute of Technology) in the USA and Gumushane University in Turkey. Born in Washington, DC and raised in Asia, Bryan is fluent in Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, and Turkish and has traveled to 38 countries during his 27-year business career with Global 500 firms and smaller. Bryan is an avid writer on business and education subjects and is currently based in Istanbul, Turkey, where he is doing research for future books on these topics. Bryan holds a Bachelor’s degree in Marketing from the University of the State of New York and an MBA degree from Capella University. He will complete his Doctor of Business Administration (DBA) degree in International Business at Walden University in 2013.

Ekaterina Turkina has been with HEC Montreal in Canada since 2010. Her main research areas are state business relationship, inter-firm networks, and socio-cultural and politico-economic factors in international business. She teaches various courses in the domain of international affairs, such as international management, multinational firms, culture and human resources, global governance, and she is actively involved in research groups in international affairs (GRAI). Dr. Turkina also has extensive experience working in international organizations including International Marketing Solutions, American Councils, and Council of Europe. She holds a Master of Arts and a PhD from the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Pittsburgh.

Nigel L. Williams (nwilliams@bournemouth.ac.uk) is a Senior Lecturer in Project Management at the School of Tourism at the Bournemouth University. Nigel completed a PhD in 2010 at the Institute for Manufacturing at Cambridge University in the UK, where he examined the international evolution of company production systems using data from Trinidad and Tobago firms. His current research interests include Production Systems, Organizational Project Management and Festival Internationalization. Before joining the University, Nigel worked for 15 years as an engineer, project manager, and business consultant for organizations in the Caribbean region. A member of the Project Management Institute, he holds the Project Management Professional (PMP) certification along with the Prince 2 qualification.

* * *
About the Contributors

Ahmed Abdel-Maksoud is an Associate Professor of Management Accounting and Chair of the Accounting Department (AACSB-Accounting Accredited) at the College of Business and Economics at United Arab Emirates University. He has worked for several international universities. His research interests are in the fields of performance measurement systems, strategic performance measurement systems, eco-control systems, and environmental management accounting. Over the past few years, he has been involved in funded research projects totaling around $2M received from international research centres. Ahmed authored an Elsevier book on non-financial performance measurement and management practices in international manufacturing firms in 2007. His work was published in several reputable international journals. One of his papers was published in The British Accounting Review Journal (BAR) in 2005 and was ranked by Scopus, amongst the top 10 cited BAR papers. Two of his BAR papers (2005 and 2010) were ranked amongst the hottest 25 BAR articles to date. Ahmed compiled a postgraduate teaching textbook, “Accounting for Strategic Decisions” with McGraw Hill in 2011. He contributed with a chapter case in Horngren et al.’s, “Cost Accounting: A Managerial Emphasis” (2012). Ahmed is on the editorial board and an ad hoc reviewer for many international journals and conferences in the accounting field. He is a Director for the Asia-Pacific Management Accounting Association (APMAA) 2013.

Vandana Ahuja is an Assistant Professor at the Jaypee Business School, the business arm of the Jaypee Institute of Information Technology, India. She teaches E-Marketing, Advanced Services Marketing and Customer Relationship Management. She worked previously with JILIT—The IT arm of the Jaypee Group, where she was involved in Business Development and Marketing Communication activities for Teaching Solution BhartiyaVidya, with special focus on International Marketing activities for the UK, USA, and South Asia. Prior to this, she had worked as a Business Manager with NIIT in India, where she was responsible for corporate training, business development, and marketing. She has research interests in diverse areas of marketing, especially customer-centric branding, CRM, and digital marketing. She has been actively researching the domain of the collaborative Web with focus on its contributions to the field of marketing and CRM. She has several publications published across international and national journals/conferences and actively serves on the editorial review board of several journals. She was associated with Customerthink Corp., U.S.A (formerly crmguru.com)—The Global Thought Leader in Customer Centric Business Strategy, as a member of their Advisory Council (2008).

Ghadeer Al-Safi completed her undergraduate degree in Accountancy at the University of Wollongong in Dubai. During that time, she was a teaching assistant as well as a research assistant under a Cross-Cultural Project. This research project examines the impact of culture on global virtual teams’ performance. She also had the experience of participating in a global-scale student virtual collaboration team project as part of one of her course assessment tasks which complemented her research project.

Kurt April is a Sainsbury Fellow and Professor of Leadership, Diversity & Inclusion at the Graduate School of Business of the University of Cape Town in South Africa; Programme Director and Faculty Member of DukeCE (Duke University, USA); an Associate Fellow of Said Business School (University of Oxford, UK); Research Fellow of Ashridge (UK); and Visiting Professor at Rotterdam School of Management (Erasmus University, Netherlands). Outside of academia, Kurt also currently plays executive roles in business: Managing Partner of LICM Consulting (Management Consulting, Global), Owner-Director of Helderview BMW (Automobile Industry, South Africa), Non-Executive Board Direc-
About the Contributors

Amit Arora is a PhD candidate in Logistics and Supply Chain Management at Georgia Southern University in Statesboro, Georgia, USA. He holds a M.S. degree in Energy and Environmental Management from Indian Institute of Technology (Delhi, India) and a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering from Aligarh University (India). Amit has won the best PhD Student Research Paper Awards in 2011 for research papers presented at the annual meetings of the Southeastern Institute for Operations Research and the Management Sciences (SEINFORMS) and Southeast Decision Sciences Institute (SEDSI). His current research interests are sustainability strategies in supply chain management, supply chain collaboration and experiential innovative gaming exercises for teaching. Amit has a decade-long automobile industry experience in India, having worked with Honda Motors and Hyundai Motors, where he was responsible for providing technical and warranty support to dealers at domestic and international levels. He plans to join academia after completion of his PhD.

Anshu Arora is the Assistant Professor of Marketing and Director of Global Logistics and International Business Education and Research (G-LIBER) Center of Excellence at the College of Business Administration at Savannah State University in Savannah, Georgia, USA. She is a certified Project Management Professional (PMP) from Project Management Institute (PMI) in Pennsylvania, USA. Dr. Arora has more than a decade of corporate and academic experience. She has been on the Editorial Review Boards of the International Journal of Online Pedagogy and Course Design since 2010 and the International Journal of Web-Based Learning and Teaching Technologies since 2008. Her research interests include consumer behavior, advertising polysemy, ambient advertising, stereotypes in advertising, social media strategy mix, and supply chain strategy relationships.

Anthony Atkins is a Reader in Applied Computing in the Faculty of Computing, Engineering and Science at Staffordshire University, and is a Chartered Engineer in both computing and engineering. He is also a Churchill Fellow in bioengineering and environmental engineering and has several industrial patents in bioengineering and waste recycling covering the UK, EU, Canada, Australia, and the USA. His main interests include knowledge management, outsourcing and sensor technology in e-health, and waste recycling in the construction and mining industries. He has over 160 refereed publications consisting of journals, chapters in books, and conferences with his colleagues and research students.

Lyn Atkins holds a B.S. in Economics and a Masters degree in Computing Science (IT for Strategic Management). After a career of over 25 years in management services, including roles of a Management Services Officer and Principal Research Analyst in the UK public sector organisations, she spent some time as a Researcher at Staffordshire University, contributing from both her academic and professional experience.
Eva Podovšovnik Axelsson is an Assistant Professor of the Research Methodology in Tourism at the Faculty of Tourism Studies Portorož – Turistica at the University of Primorska in Slovenia. In her undergraduate and postgraduate studies at the University of Ljubljana’s (Slovenia) Faculty of Social Sciences, she has always shown strong interest for the methodology of (social) research and for the impact of the new technologies in society, especially in education. Her main research areas are quantitative research methodology, the diffusion of new technologies in society, e-tourism, and social network analysis. She is also organizing seminars of statistics and research methodology for students and teachers. She is the author or co-author of one scientific monography and many scientific articles. She has also presented the results of her research work at different international scientific conferences, such as An Enterprise Odyssey: Economics and Business in the New Millennium 2002, and the International Conference on Methodology and Statistics.

Mert Bal is a research assistant at the Mathematical Engineering Department of Yildiz Technical University. He received his B.S.c, M.S., and PhD from the Mathematical Engineering Department of Yildiz Technical University (1999, 2001, and 2008, respectively). His areas of interest include machine learning, uncertainty reasoning, artificial intelligence, soft computing, rough set theory, formal concept analysis, and decision support systems.

Yasemin Bal started her academic career as a research assistant at Yildiz Technical University in 2005. She completed her PhD in the Human Resources Management Department at Istanbul University Business Administration Faculty. She currently continues her academic career as Assistant Professor at Yildiz Technical University Business Administration Department in Istanbul, Turkey. Her areas of interest include management, human resources management, and strategic management.

Dr. Serdar Bozkurt started his academic career as a Research Assistant at Yildiz Technical University. He completed his PhD in the field of Human Resources Management at Istanbul University Business Administration Faculty. He currently continues his academic career as Assistant Professor at Yildiz Technical University Business Administration Department in Istanbul, Turkey. His areas of interest include organizational behavior and human resources management.

Louis Brennan is Director of the Institute for International Integration Studies at Trinity College, a Fellow of Trinity College, and Professor within the School of Business. He holds Bachelor’s and Master’s Degrees in Industrial Engineering, a PhD from the Department of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Manchester (Institute of Science and Technology) for his work on the modelling of manufacturing systems, and an MBA degree with a concentration in International and Cross-Cultural Management. Dr. Brennan has served as a faculty member and researcher in Engineering and Business schools in the USA, Europe, and Asia. His fields of interest include Global Strategy and International Business, Global Supply Chain Management, Operations Strategy, and Technology Management. He has published extensively in these areas in internationally refereed journals, conference proceedings, and edited books. His most recent books have been The Emergence of Southern Multinationals: Their Impact on Europe and the Business of Space – The Next Frontier of International Competition, co-authored with Alessandra Vecchi.
Ulysses J. Brown, III is an Associate Professor of Management in the College of Business Administration at Savannah State University, joining the SSU faculty in the fall of 2004. Before assuming his academic duties, Dr. Brown served ten years in the United States Navy as an enlisted man, including three years onboard the USS Dahlgren (DDG-43), which was home ported in Norfolk, Virginia. He earned a Master’s in Industrial-Organizational Psychology from Valdosta State University and a PhD in Business Administration from Jackson State University. In his leisure time, he enjoys jazz, bowling, and traveling. Dr. Brown’s teaching interests include business statistics, business research, operations management, and supply chain management at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. His research interests are in the areas of ethics, propensity for military service, organizational climate and performance in military units, and management education.

Sebnem Burnaz is a Professor of Marketing at Istanbul Technical University, Faculty of Management. She holds a PhD in Management with a major in Marketing from Bogazici University. Her research interests are in the fields of marketing, retailing, decision making, and business ethics. She has published articles which have appeared in Advances in International Marketing, Journal of Business Ethics, Sex Roles: A Journal of Research, and Journal of Multi-Criteria Decision Analysis.

Angelo A. Camillo is an Associate Professor of Strategic Management at Woodbury University in Los Angeles, California, USA. He has over 35 years of international management experience and has worked and lived in ten countries and four continents. He holds an undergraduate degree from Heidelberg (Germany) School of Hotel Management, an MBA from San Francisco State University, and a PhD from Oklahoma State University. He teaches courses in Strategy, Global Enterprise Management, Business Ethics, Organizational Behavior, and special topics in Hospitality Entrepreneurship and Business Development. He is a Visiting Professor at China Normal University in Guangzhou, China. He is also a Woodbury University faculty member of the Carl Benz Academy in Beijing, China, in collaboration with the Guanghua School of Management and Freie University (Berlin, Germany). He was Visiting Professor at the Cassa Marca Ca’ Tron Institute in Venice, Italy. His research encompasses three streams of interest that reflect his specializations and courses he teaches: strategic management (mainstream), industry specific (Hospitality), and cross-disciplinary. Research topics include strategic and international management, food and wine business, marketing best practice, social responsibility, and ethics.

Harish C. Chandan is Professor of Business at Argosy University in Atlanta, Georgia, USA. He was Interim Chair of the Business Program in 2011. He received the President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2007, 2008, and 2009. His teaching philosophy is grounded in the learner engagement and life-long learning. His research interests include research methods, leadership, marketing, and organizational behavior. He has published 15 peer-reviewed articles in business and management journals. Dr. Chandan presented caucus discussion on green innovation and distance learning at the Academy of Management. Dr Chandan presented a professional development workshop on leading organizational change through action research and solutions focused learning at the Academy of Management. In addition, Dr. Chandan has presented papers at the International Academy of Management and Business and Southeast Association of Information Systems Conferences. Prior to joining Argosy, Dr. Chandan managed optical fiber and cable product qualification laboratories for Lucent Technologies, Bell Laboratories. During his career with Lucent, he had 40 technical publications, a chapter in a book, and five patents.
Edward T. Chen is a Professor of Management Information Systems (MIS) in the Operations and Information Systems Department at the University of Massachusetts Lowell. Dr. Chen has published over 60 refereed research articles in scholarly journals such as Information & Management, Journal of Computer Information Systems, Project Management, Comparative Technology Transfer and Society, Journal of International Technology and Information Management, and International Journal of Innovation and Learning. Dr. Chen has served as vice-president, board director, track chair, and session chair of many professional associations and conferences. Professor Chen has also served as journal editor, editorial reviewer, and ad hoc reviewer for various academic journals. Dr. Chen has received the Irwin Distinguished Paper Award at the Southwestern Federation of Administrative Disciplines conference and the Best Paper Award at the International Conference on Accounting and Information Technology. His main research interests are in the areas of project management, knowledge management, and Green IT.

Nicholas Chileshe is a Senior Lecturer in Construction & Project Management in the School of Natural and Built Environments at the University of South Australia. He is also the Research Education and Portfolio Leader. Dr. Chileshe obtained his PhD in Construction Management from the Sheffield Hallam University. Prior to his appointment in July 2009, he worked in the UK for ten years at Sheffield Hallam University. Nicholas is also a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Building (FCIOB), Fellow of the Australian Institute of Building (FAIB), Fellow of the Association of Building Engineers (FEBng), Fellow of the Higher Education Academy (FHEA), Member of the Chartered Institute of Management (MICM), and Member of the Australian Institute of Project Management (MAIPM). His current research interests relate to the built environment, including total quality management, sustainability, construction management, risk management, project management, and project success.

Mary L. Connerley is a professor and head of the Management Department at the University of Northern Iowa. Connerley received her PhD in Human Resource Management from the University of Iowa. Before joining UNI, Dr. Connerley taught in the Pamplin College of Business at Virginia Tech. Dr. Connerley has published articles in many respected journals, including Personnel Psychology, Academy of Management Learning and Education, Journal of Management, Human Relations, Journal of Occupational and Organizational Psychology, and Journal of Management Education in addition to others. In addition to over 20 articles on human resource and diversity-related issues, she is co-author of the book titled, “Leading in a Diverse and Multicultural Environment: Developing Awareness, Knowledge, and Skills.” Her current research and teaching interests center on diversity in the workplace, issues of multiculturalism, and recruiting.

Birton J. Cowden is an International Business doctoral candidate at the Boeing Institute of International Business at Saint Louis University. His research and publication focus is in international strategy, entrepreneurship, and innovation. His current research looks at the types of new ventures in emerging economies. Mr. Cowden has published in the Multinational Business Review and has proceedings from the Academy of Management, the Academy of International Business, the Southern Management Association, and the United States Association for Small Business and Entrepreneurship. Birton can be reached at 3674 Lindell Blvd., John Cook School of Business, Saint Louis University, St. Louis, MO 63108, via e-mail at bcowden@slu.edu or by phone at 618-340-3019.
Pascal da Rocha is a professor, trainer, and mediator. His expertise is in conflict mediation, cultural analysis, and transnational leadership. He has over 16 years of experience in violent conflict zones and he has expanded his work into strategic and change management, innovation management and sustainability for the corporate world. He has worked for the UN, the OSCE, NATO, the World Bank, and he has consulted clients, such as DaimlerChrysler, Volkswagen, Unilever, and PAREXEL, among many others. When not practicing, he teaches on conflict resolution, leadership and equality, human rights, and peace and conflict studies at Columbia University, the University of Uppsala, Philips-Marburg University, Southern Russian Federal University, and other centers of excellence. He lives and travels with his wife and son in the United States and South Africa.

Patrizia de Luca, PhD, is Professor at the University of Trieste, Italy, where she teaches Marketing and Research Methodology for Management Decisions. She is Deputy Director of the Department of Economics, Business, Mathematics and Statistics and member of some academic committees. She has authored five books and 36 refereed publications in national and international books and journals. She has recently participated in a large research program on distribution and sales of Italian products in the Chinese market and in other research projects on international marketing. Her research focus is on distribution channels, retail marketing, and cross-cultural consumer behavior.

Loredana Di Pietro is an Assistant Professor of Organizational Studies in the Department of Business and in the Department of Human and Social Sciences at the University of Molise, Italy. She teaches course in Event Management, Business Organization, and Organizational Behavior. She is a post-doc researcher in organizational behavior, group conflict, and team dynamics. Her research applies qualitative and quantitative research methodologies and statistical analysis. She is Editor of the International Journal of Digital Content Technology and its Applications and of the Journal of Next Generation Information Technology. She is an ad hoc reviewer for the International Journal of the Digital Human, Journal of Computer - Mediated Communication, Electronic Commerce Research and Applications, and the International Journal of Digital Content Technology and its Application. She has presented research papers at the International Workshop at the University of Groningen Research School in Holland, at the EIASM (European Institute for Advanced Study in Management) in Belgium, and at the University of Madrid Institute of Research in Spain. She has been a tutor for the Master in European Planning organized by the University of Molise, in collaboration with EIPA (European Institute of Public Administration) at Bruxelles and Maastricht. She is the recipient of the prestigious Roberto Marrana Award “Alla ricerca di Talenti-Research Section” (In search of Research Talent).

Francesca Di Virgilio is an Assistant Professor of Organizational Studies in the Department of Human and Social Sciences at the University of Molise, Italy. She teaches courses in organizational studies, event management, organizational behavior, and group processes. She received her PhD in Organization, Technology and Development of Human Resources from the University of Molise, Italy. She was a Visiting Researcher at the Research Center of Industrial Relations & Organizational Behavior (IROB) at the Warwick Business School in Warwick, UK. She has been teaching courses at the undergraduate and graduate levels, including international master programs in several universities in Italy on topics such as organization design, organizational behavior, knowledge management, and human resources management. She has taught in some of the territorial Public Administration involved in tailored training program on topics such as job design and organizational analysis, leadership, team building and organizational change. She is Editor for the International Journal of Digital Content Technology, and its Applications. Research topics include human knowledge, transfer knowledge, consumer’s group knowledge, and social network, groups’ dynamic.
About the Contributors

Massimo Franco is a Professor of Organization Behavior and Human Resources Management at the University of Molise and at the University of Naples Federico II. I.T.P.; International Teachers Program, and at the International School of Business Management. He is the Director of the University of Molise Organization and Team Management Laboratory, and teaches undergraduate, graduate, and PhD courses in organizational behavior, teambuilding, team management, and human resource development. He is a member of the Evaluation Board of the University of Sannio in Benevento, and founding member of Arethuse: Association des Rencontres Economiques Thematiq des Universites du Sud de Europe IERSO Université Bordeaux, France. Massimo Franco has been a Visiting Professor at several universities and is member of many domestic and international editorial boards, organizations, and academic associations. He has published several books and numerous papers as author and co-author. His current research interests and publications focus on team based organizations, teamwork and teambuilding, leadership, employee motivation, knowledge management and competences, and well-being and distress in organizations.

M. Reza Hosseini is currently a lecturer and PhD Candidate in Construction Management at the University of South Australia. He has been the CEO of a construction company with practical experience in the construction industry for over 11 years in the Middle East. In addition, he has conducted many research projects for the Building Code Office of the Iranian Ministry of Housing for five years, and has been co-author for many published works including books, journals, and conference papers. M. Reza has a Master of Science (M.S.) in Construction Management, and his main research fields are virtual teams, productivity, benchmarking, and project performance within construction. He is a member of the Board of Directors for the Project Management Institute (PMI) Adelaide chapter, and a member of the Australian Institute of Building (AIB) and Australian Institute of Project Management (AIPM).

M. Gordon Hunter is Professor of Information Systems in the Faculty of Management at The University of Lethbridge in Alberta, Canada. He has also been appointed Visiting Professor of the Faculty of Business, Computing and Information Management at London South Bank University. Dr. Hunter has previously held academic positions at universities in Canada, Hong Kong, and Singapore, and visiting positions at universities in Australia, England, Germany, Monaco, New Zealand, Poland, Turkey, and the USA. In 2012, he received the Lloyd Houlden Research Fellowship from the Canadian Insolvency Foundation. From April to July of 2009, Dr. Hunter was a Fellow at the University of Applied Sciences in Munich, Germany, and during July and August of 2005, he was an Erskine Fellow at the University of Canterbury in Christchurch, New Zealand. He has a Bachelor of Commerce Degree from the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon in Saskatchewan, Canada, and a PhD from the Strathclyde Business School at the University of Strathclyde in Glasgow, Scotland. Dr. Hunter has also obtained a Certified Management Accountant (CMA) designation from the Society of Management Accountants of Canada and was appointed a Fellow of the Society in 2010. In 2011, he was appointed CMA Distinguished Scholar by CMA Alberta. At the University of Lethbridge, Dr. Hunter is the Director of the Small Business Institute.
Fiona Ji is a full time Visiting Assistant professor at Ohio University. Her current research focuses on how firms effectively balance exploitation and exploration in the situation of organizational learning and innovation. She is specifically interested in researching international firms and technology new ventures. She has presented articles in major conferences in both international management and entrepreneurship fields. In addition, she has interests in methodology issues in organization studies and has published work in the field of organization research methods. She is also active at providing services to the academic field, participating as reviewer and discussant for several academic journals. Fiona Ji had her PhD studies in Strategy at Virginia Tech and received her Master’s Degree in Management from Grenoble Ecole de Management (France), and her Bachelor’s Degree from Foreign Affairs University (China). She has work experiences with several multinational corporations, which were based in France, China and the United States. This interdisciplinary educational background and diverse industrial experience in different countries informs both her teaching and research.

Morris Kalliny is currently an Assistant Professor of Marketing at Saint Louis University. Dr. Kalliny earned a PhD in International Business and Marketing from The University of Texas-Pan American. Prior to joining Saint Louis University, he served as the Business Program Director at Missouri University of Science and Technology. Professor Kalliny has written extensively about culture and marketing with a particular focus on advertising and media. Dr. Kalliny’s research has appeared in many scholarly journals, such as the Journal of Advertising Research, the Journal of Global Marketing, The Multinational Business Review, The Journal of Marketing Communications, The Journal of Current Issues and Research in Advertising, Journal of Promotion Management, and the International Journal of Cross Cultural Management. Dr. Kalliny can be reached at 3674 Lindell Blvd. John Cook School of Business, Saint Louis University, St. Louis, Mo 63108 or via e-mail at kalliny@slu.edu or by phone at 314-977-2590.

Oxana Karnaukhova is an Associate Professor at the Department of Philosophy and Cultural Studies, Southern Federal University (Russia), co-director of the Master’s Program in Intercultural Communications, and Executive Director of the Centre of European Union in the South West Russia (Southern Federal University, Russia). Her research within the Intercultural Communications concerns exploitation of the cultural approach to socio-economic development of multicultural agglomerations and investigation of communicative strategies within cooperation accounts. Her publication list includes articles on intercultural communications in transnational corporations, communicative strategies and informal entrepreneurship, multicultural policy and practices in the EU states, among others.

Fung Kuen (Tebbin) Koo (PhD, University of Sydney) is a Lecturer at the Sydney Nursing School at the University of Sydney. Dr. Koo has strong research background in cultural and health beliefs. Her research interests include cultural studies, migrant issues, health promotion and education. Dr. Koo can be contacted at fung.koo@sydney.edu.au.

Satu Lautamäki is a Principal Lecturer in the Department of Business Economics and Tourism at Vaasa University of Applied Sciences, Finland, where she has been a faculty member since 2008. She is developing the international business curriculum as well as teaching and supervising bachelor’s and master’s degree students. She also is a co-founder of a company focused on design activities and business consultation. She completed her PhD at the University of Vaasa in 2000. In her prior position, she acted as a director for a design center (between the years 2000 to 2008), being responsible for general management, research and training activities, and company services. She has led several international research and company development projects as well as acting as a member or chairperson of the executive group in these projects. Her research interests lie in the area of international business, corporate identity and design management, distribution channel management, and user research, ranging from theory to design and implementation. She has published several articles in scientific conference proceedings and journals as well as co-authored some books and reports based on the prior research and company projects. In recent years, she has focused on SME internationalization, analyzing how small and medium-sized companies internationalize and how to support the internationalization activities and processes.

Huong Le (PhD, University of Sydney) is a Lecturer in Management in the School of Management and Marketing at Deakin University in Australia. Her research has been published widely in refereed journals and in chapters in edited books. Her research interests include cross-cultural research in management and marketing, international education, and tourism research. Dr. Le can be contacted at huong.le@deakin.edu.au.

Fabio Marzano has a research contract at the University of Trieste, Italy. He holds a B.S. and a M.S. in Business. His research focus is on country of origin, modes of entry, and retailing.

Ramazan Nacar is currently a PhD candidate at the Management Engineering Program in the Institute of Science and Technology at Istanbul Technical University, Turkey, and a Research Assistant in the Division of Marketing of the Department of Management at Yalova University, Turkey. He is interested in marketing and his focused research areas are cross-cultural marketing, international marketing, and information technologies. Nacar can be reached at ramazannacar@gmail.com, or by telephone at +90 226 814 22 23 (5740).

Rosmeriany Nahan-Suomela has been a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Business Economics and Tourism at Vaasa University of Applied Sciences, Finland, since 2002. She has been working actively in developing a curriculum for an international business degree program as well as teaching and supervising bachelor’s and master’s degree students. Working intensively with different universities, institutes and corporations, both Small- and Medium-sized Enterprises (SMEs) and Multinational Enterprises (MNEs), she has also been acting as a guest lecturer in both Asia and Europe in cross-cultural business management. Born in Indonesia and having studied in Australia and Finland, she is fluent in several languages. She holds her Master’s Degree in Marketing from Hanken School of Economics and is a part time researcher (PhD graduate) at the same university. Her research interests focus on internationalization, business networks, and cross-cultural business management.

Mustafa F. Özbilgin is a Turkish-born British academic and social scientist. He is a Professor of Human Resource Management at Brunel Business School at Brunel University in the UK. Since 2010, he has been the Editor-in-Chief of the British Journal of Management. He is also co-chair of Management and Diversity at University Paris-Dauphine in France. Between 2006 and 2010, he served as the Editor-in-Chief of Equal Opportunities International. He holds visiting professorships at Cornell University, Pantheon-Assas University, St. Gallen University, Istanbul Bilgi University, CEPS-INSTEAD, and the
About the Contributors

Japan Institute of Labour Policy. His papers are published in top journals, including the Academy of Management Review, Academy of Management Learning & Education, and the Journal of Vocational Behavior. He obtained a B.A. in Business Administration from Boğaziçi University in Turkey in 1993, an M.A. in Human Resource Management and Development at Marmara University in Turkey in 1995, and a PhD in Social Sciences at the University of Bristol in 1998. His research focuses on equality, diversity, and fairness at work from relational, comparative, and international perspectives.

Jason Sargent (PhD, University of Sydney) is a Lecturer in Information Systems in the Faculty of Information and Communication Technologies at Swinburne University of Technology in Melbourne, Australia. Dr Sargent has investigated information systems’ adoption and implementation in areas as diverse as regional tourism organisations, ambulatory care, and humanitarian disaster relief. Dr. Sargent can be contacted at jpsargent@swin.edu.au.

Cathrine Seierstad is a Lecturer in HRM at Brunel Business School at Brunel University in London. Her research and publications focus upon aspects of gender, equality, leadership, corporate governance, and the use of affirmative action strategies. Her research spans both public and private sectors.

Bernadette Sharp is a Professor of Applied Artificial Intelligence in the School of Computing at Staffordshire University, UK. She is a Chartered IT Professional Fellow of the British Computer Society. She has published over 90 referred publications in the areas of natural language processing (NLP), text mining, agent systems, and applied artificial intelligent systems. She is Chair and Editor of the International Workshop for Natural Language Processing and Cognitive Science (NLPCS).

Parves Sultan is a Senior Lecturer in Marketing at the Central Queensland University, Australia. Prior to this, he was an assistant professor at the University of Canberra in Australia. His research interests include: marketing approach to higher education, services marketing, social/sustainable marketing, tourism marketing, consumer behavior, branding, marketing promotions, internationalization of firms, international trade, and qualitative and quantitative research methods. His research articles appeared in a number of scholarly journals. Among these, Asia Pacific Journal of Marketing and Logistics, Quality Assurance in Education, International Journal of Quality and Service Sciences, International Review of Business Research Papers, Journal for Global Business Advancement, Journal of Business Administration, Journal of Business Studies, Indian Journal of Open Learning, Malaysian Journal of Distance Education, Ritsumeikan Journal of Asia Pacific Studies, The Global Journal of Finance and Economics, and Journal of Economic Cooperation are worth mentioning.

Ben Tran received his Doctor of Psychology (Psy.D) in Organizational Consulting/Organizational Psychology from the California School of Professional Psychology (formerly known as the Marshall Goldsmith School of Management) at Alliant International University in San Francisco, California, USA. Dr. Tran’s research interests include domestic and expatriate recruitment, selection, retention, evaluation, & training, corporate social responsibility, business and organizational ethics, organizational and international organizational behavior, and minorities in multinational corporations. Dr. Tran has presented articles on topics of business and management ethics, expatriate, knowledge management, and gender and minorities in multinational corporations at the Academy of Management, Society for the Advance-
Nimet Uray is a Professor of Marketing in Faculty of Management of Istanbul Technical University, Turkey. She obtained her B.S. and M.S. in Management Engineering from Istanbul Technical University. She received her PhD in Management with a concentration in Marketing (1992) from Bogazici University in Turkey. Her research interests include consumer behavior and attitude, marketing and technology interaction, advertising content and culture, and international marketing strategy. Her studies have appeared in international journals such as International Journal of Physical Distribution and Logistic Management, Service Industries Journal, Journal of International Consumer Marketing, Journal of Euro-Marketing, and Sex Roles: A Journal of Research. In addition, she has also published numerous articles in the proceedings of major national and international conferences.

Nataša Slak Valek has a PhD in Business and Administration and a Bachelor’s Degree in Sport, both gained at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. At the same time of preparing her PhD, she started to work as a researcher at the national tourist office in Slovenia. She merged all three topics (business, sport and tourism) to sport tourism, which was the main topic of her PhD. Her career as a professor started in the Faculty of Tourism at the University of Maribor. She has always shown a deep interest in foreign countries and cultures and this is why she accepted an invitation from I-Shou University from Taiwan R.O.C. where she teaches Sport Tourism and Management Studies. She published several papers in domestic and international scientific journals recently. She can be reached at natasa.slak@gmail.com.

Joana Vassilopoulou is a Lecturer in Organisational Behaviour and Human Resource Management at the School of Business, Management and Economics at the University of Sussex. She received her PhD from Norwich Business School at the University of East Anglia on the Organisational Habitus of Managing Ethnic Diversity in Germany. Previous to her PhD studies, she worked at the University of Duisburg-Essen as a research associate and lecturer. Her recent research includes a project funded by the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (CIPD) on “Global Talent Management in Emerging Economies” and another project on “Movers and Shakers of Talent Management in the UAE for 21st Century,” funded by the Federal Demographic Council, United Arab Emirates (FDC). She has published in edited collections and journals such as the European Journal of Industrial Relations, International Business Review, and the International Journal of Human Resource Management. Her research interests include the management of ethnic diversity, discrimination at work, race and racism, immigration and integration in Europe, gender and race inequalities at work, talent management, global diversity management, and social and organisational change.

Alessandra Vecchi is the Course Director for the Graduate Diploma in Fashion Management and Senior Research Fellow at London College of Fashion. She was formerly based in the School of Business and in the Institute for International Integration Studies (IIIS) at Trinity College in Dublin, where she still holds the position of IIIS Research Associate. She has been recently nominated Assistant Professor in the Department of Management at the University of Bologna. Besides teaching several subjects, mostly in the field of international business and operations management at the postgraduate level, she supervises
M.A. and PhD students in a wide array of fashion management related subjects. She has a significant track record of high-profile publications and her research interests tend to be of a multidisciplinary nature and rather eclectic. They span from value creation and strategic upgrading of industrial clusters, governance of family business groups, luxury firms' strategic use of social media to quality management, and the adoption of new technologies, both from a marketing and supply chain management perspective. She is author of two books, the latest of which on the space industry (Brennan, L., and Vecchi, A., 2011): The Business of Space – The Next Frontier of International Competition.

Donata Vianelli, PhD, is a professor at the University of Trieste, Italy, where she teaches International Marketing and International Business; and is the Head Coordinator of the Bachelor Degree in Management. During her 20 years of teaching experience, she collaborated with numerous universities and business schools in France, China, Austria, Slovenia, and the United States. Vianelli has authored four books and 63 refereed publications that have appeared in national and international books and journals. Her research focus is on global distribution and cross-cultural consumer behavior, with a regional focus on Europe and Asia, where she has recently coordinated a large research program on distribution and sales of Italian products in the Chinese market.

Alexander Wollenberg has been an Assistant Professor of International Business at the Univesidad EAFIT in Medellín, Colombia (Department of International Business) since July of 2011. His research focus is on the generation of innovative capabilities of local companies and their potential to transfer these regionally and abroad eventually, and a generation of outward investment from these emerging markets (Latin America). He received a PhD in 2011 from the National University of Singapore, specializing in entry modes of high-tech companies from Japan in emerging markets (e.g., China). He received a M.A. in 2003 in International Relations from Waseda University in Tokyo, Japan specializing in Japanese industrial structures and technology transfer to China. He received a B.S. in 2000 in Business Administration from Hawaii Pacific University in Honolulu, HI, USA, with major in International Business and Asian Studies. Alexander enjoys the dynamic environments of emerging economies and enjoys learning languages. He speaks Mandarin, Thai, Russian, Japanese, and Spanish fluently.

Ho Yin Wong is a senior lecturer at the Deakin Graduate School of Business in the Faculty of Business & Law at Deakin University (Burwood Campus), Australia. He has published in International Marketing Review, Journal of Strategic Marketing, Journal of Product and Brand Management, and Journal of Global Marketing, among others. Dr Wong co-authored an article for the Journal of Islamic Marketing, which was chosen as a Highly Commended Award Winner at the Emerald Literati Network Awards for Excellence 2011. He is also a co-author of a book, Building a Marketing Plan: A Complete Guide. His main research interests are international marketing, branding, and Small- and Medium Enterprises (SMEs).

Norhayati Zakaria is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Business and Management of the University of Wollongong in Dubai, and a Research and Teaching Associate at the Center of Collaboratory on Technology Enhanced Learning Communities Lab (COTELCO) at American University and Syracuse University, USA, in which she leads a global virtual team for a globally distributed collaboration research project. Dr. Zakaria can be contacted at yatizakaria11@gmail.com.
About the Contributors

Luis Fernando Bustamante Zapata is a Colombian business professional with expertise in high level management, project management, organizational development, international business, and corporate finances. He received an MBA from EAFIT University and is currently enrolled in the PhD in Humanities programme at the same university. He holds over five years’ experience in research and education at the postgraduate level.