About the Authors

Edward J. Szewczak is Professor and Chair of the MCIS Department at Canisius College in Buffalo, NY. He received a Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1985. His published research has appeared in the Journal of MIS, Information & Management, Data Base, the Information Resources Management Journal, the European Journal of Operational Research, the Journal of Management Systems, the Journal of Microcomputer Systems Management, Omega, the Organizational Behavior Teaching Review, Simulation and Games and Logique et Analyse. He has co-edited three books of readings published by Idea Group Publishing, including Management Impacts of Information Technology: Perspectives on Organizational Change and Growth (1991), The Human Side of Information Technology (1996), and Measuring Information Technology Investment Payoff: Contemporary Approaches (1999). His research interests include MIS evaluation, and information privacy and Internet technology. He is currently serving as an Associate Editor of the Information Resources Management Journal.

Coral R. Snodgrass (Ph.D., 1984, Katz Graduate School of Business, University of Pittsburgh) is Professor and Chair of the Management and Marketing Department at Canisius College in Buffalo, NY. She is also the Director of the International Business Programs at the College. Dr. Snodgrass has published numerous articles on the topic of strategy and international business and she has authored a number of strategy cases. She is involved with collaborative projects with colleagues in England, Ireland, France, Belgium, Germany, Sweden and Mexico. These projects include course and program development as well as student and faculty exchanges. Dr. Snodgrass is the book editor for the Information Resources Management Journal. She is member of such academic societies as the Strategic Management Society and the Academy of International Business. She sits on the board of a number of local organizations such as Buffalo-Niagara World Connect.

***
Ellen Baker is an Honorary Associate in the School of Management at the University of Technology, Sydney, Australia. Prior to that, she had been on the academic staff there for 20 years. Ellen holds a Ph.D. from the University of London. She has published widely on management implications of communication and information technologies. Her current research interests include virtual working, the household-workplace, and the application of collaborative technologies to innovation teams and media production work.

Walter O. Einstein specializes in management development and is Professor of Management in the Charlton College of Business at the University of Massachusetts. His numerous publications and personal consulting papers center around practical applications of theory-based management and leadership skills, as well as practical performance appraisal systems. Using diagnostic leadership models he developed, Dr. Einstein has helped managers in organizations ranging from “mom and pop” pizza restaurants to public service agencies to major employers on the Fortune 500 list. He holds a Systems Management Master’s degree from the University of Southern California (1974) and a Ph.D. in Organizational Behavior from Syracuse University (1981). Dr. Einstein retired from the United States Air Force as Vice Commander of the 416th Strategic Bomb Wing at Rome, NY.

Brent Gallupe is a Professor of Information Systems and Director of the Queen’s Executive Decision Centre at the School of Business, Queen’s University at Kingston, Canada. His current research interests are in computer support for groups and teams, the evaluation of information systems in public sector organizations, and the history of information systems. His work has been published in such journals as Management Science, Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Applied Psychology, and Sloan Management Review.

Robert W. Gerulat is Asst. Professor, Business Management and Economics, SUNY-Empire State College, where he is also Director of FORUM Management Education Program. He earned a B.A. in History from SUNY-Buffalo, an M.A. in Liberal Studies at SUNY-ESC concentrating in History and Anthropology, and a Ph.D. in Management at Walden University. For over twelve years, Dr. Gerulat has been involved in the field of IT management both as a director and consultant in the insurance, computer, and health care industries. His research interests are studying the effects of information technology on organizations and cultures from an anthropological perspective.
John H. Humphreys is currently Assistant Professor of Management in the College of Business at Eastern New Mexico University. He holds a Bachelor’s degree in Psychology from the University of Southern Mississippi (1988), a Master’s degree in Management from Webster University (1995), and the Doctor of Business Administration degree (Management) from Nova Southeastern University (2000). His research and various publications are primarily focused on the many psychological and personality variables that impact the leader/follower dyad. Prior to joining academia, Dr. Humphreys held a leadership position with a multi-billion dollar financial services organization and has considerable experience as a corporate consultant specializing in organizational leadership, culture, change, and development.

Ned Kock is a CIGNA Research Fellow and Director of the E-Collaboration Research Center in the Fox School of Business and Management, Temple University, Philadelphia. He holds a Ph.D. in Information Systems from the School of Management Studies, University of Waikato, New Zealand. Ned has been the PI/co-PI in funded research projects totalling over US$ 500,000. He is the author/co-author of over 70 research papers and three books, including the best-selling Process Improvement and Organizational Learning: The Role of Collaboration Technologies.

Laura Lally is currently an Associate Professor of Business Computer Information Systems at Hofstra University. Dr. Lally received her Ph.D. in Information Systems from New York University’s Stern School of Business. She has presented numerous conference papers and has published articles in Decision Science, the Journal of End-User Computing, the Journal of Global Information Management, the Information Society and the Journal of Business Ethics. Her current research interests include the risks of reengineering, privacy in the hiring process, and the application of the use of consumer product involvement on Web purchasing behavior.

Robert J. McQueen is Associate Professor in the Department of Management Systems, University of Waikato, New Zealand, and former Chairman of the Department of Computer Science there. He holds an M.B.A. from the Harvard Business School, and a Ph.D. in Computer Science from the University of Waikato. His previous industry experience includes positions at IBM in Toronto and DEC in Vancouver. His Harvard M.B.A. led to the founding in 1976 of McQueen Technology, a small business in Guelph, Canada, which designed and installed specialized microcomputer-based data acquisition systems for six years in the packaging industry.
Ali Metwalli is an Associate Professor of Finance at Western Michigan University. He received his Ph.D. from St. Louis University. Before joining WMU, he taught at Central Michigan University, Pacific University, and Portland State University. His teaching areas are in Finance, Management and Health Care Administration. He has published several articles and proceedings.

Olivia Ernst Neece is the Director of Operations of The Ernst Group, and EON Corporation investment groups. She has been involved in academic research at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Nortel Inc., and ST Inc. She has also been an Assistant Professor at California State University Northridge in the Management and Finance, Real Estate, and Insurance Departments, taught at UCLA Extension, and presented speeches and seminars nationwide for business and industry groups. Olivia is a Ph.D. candidate in Strategic Management at The Peter F. Drucker Center for Management, Claremont Graduate University. She has written numerous magazine and journal articles and received the Best Paper award for her paper in the OCIS division of the Academy of Management’s 2001 meeting. Ms. Neece has held the positions of Vice President of Project Administration for Hirsch Bedner Associates, Vice President of Operations and Project Development of AIRCOA (Richfield Hotels), and President of Olivia Neece Planning and Design. She earned her B.S., Business - Finance from the University of Southern California and an M.B.A. from the University of California Los Angeles. She is a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, the Academy of Management, the Strategic Management Society, the Association for Information Systems and Institute for Operations Research and Management Sciences. Olivia is a Founder of the Performing Arts Center of Los Angeles, a member of Club 100 and has held Board and Committee posts for the L. A. Opera, Master Chorale and Philharmonic organizations.

Huub J.M. Ruël is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Human Resource Management at the University of Twente in the Netherlands. He holds an M.B.A. degree in Work and Organizational Psychology and a Bachelor’s degree in Human Resource Management. In 2001, the author received his Ph.D. for his thesis on the non-technical side of office technology. Dr. Ruël is doing research on the interaction between information technology and organization and teaches courses on this topic to Business Administration and Business Information Technology undergraduates.
Thekla Rura-Polley is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Management at the University of Technology, Sydney, where she teaches organization theory and research methods. She received her Ph.D. in Business Administration from the University of Wisconsin - Madison. Her research interests cover population level learning, innovation, virtual collaboration and technology management.

Sofiane Sahraoui is an Assistant Professor of Information Systems at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. He received his Ph.D. in Management Information Systems from the University of Pittsburgh in the USA in 1994. His research interests are knowledge management, IT planning, enterprise modeling, and the management of IT-based change in general. He has published in the Journal of Information Technology Management, Behaviour & Information Technology, and the Journal of Computer Information Systems and had other invited papers and a book chapter. He also presented his work at numerous international conferences. His teaching interests are in the areas of business modeling with UML, IT change and strategy, and the human side of IT.

Andrew Targowski is a Professor of Computer Information Systems at Western Michigan University. He received his Ph.D. from Warsaw Polytechnic in 1969. His teaching and research interests are architectural systems development, global/national/local/enterprise information infrastructures development, and information civilization development. He is the author of numerous articles and books in the information management science discipline. He is a Vice President of Information Resource Management Association.

Dianne Willis is a Senior Lecturer in Information Management at Leeds Metropolitan University. Her research interests include sociotechnical issues surrounding the implementation of new technology in business and social environments. She is currently undertaking a Ph.D. concentrating on gender issues in the field of ICT, particularly factors influencing participation levels in both academic and practical fields. She has also published articles in journals, books and presented at conferences. As a member of the BCS Sociotechnical group, she has co-edited two books entitled The New SocioTech: Graffiti on the Longwall and Knowledge Management in the Sociotechnical World: The Graffiti continues. She is currently researching in the field of Computer-Mediated Communication.
Pak Yoong is an Associate Professor in Information Systems and Foundation Director of the Masters Programme in Information Systems at the School of Information Management, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. His current research interests are computer support for groups and teams, the facilitation of distributed meetings, telework, virtual teams and end user support. His work has appeared in the Journal of Information Technology and People, Informing Science, and Internet Research - Electronic Networking Applications and Policy. 